Hauptmann's Nerve Cracks, He Hurls 'Lie' At U.S. Agent in Court

Guards Jerk Prisoner to Seat as He Yells to Sisk.

Witnesses Trace Trail of Ransom

Women in Tears While Discovery of Body Is Described.

Maddened by a Federal agent's even description of the carpenter's hiding place for thousands in Lindbergh ransom bills, he leaped to his feet in the courtroom where he is on trial for his life.

"Mister, Mister, you stop lying! You are telling a story!" he shouted, shaking his finger.

Trembling, his jaws clenched, he was pulled back into his chair by guards as Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, presiding, rebuked him quietly.

First Open Display.

The outburst, Bruno's first open display of the tension that has been gathering in his pale face for the 12 days of his trial for murder of the Lindbergh baby, came as State witnesses told how the carpenter spent and hid part of the $50,000 ransom.

Special Agent Thomas H. Sisk, of the Department of Justice, was on the stand, relating how officers found more than $14,000 of the ransom money in Hauptmann's Bronx home and garage last September.

Some of the ransom bills were in the garage woodwork, but Sisk told of an empty crock he found buried beneath the floor.

There was no money in it, but Sisk related:

"We questioned Hauptmann as to that jug. He denied knowing anything about it, but the next day when we questioned him he admitted that he had that money in there three weeks before he was arrested."

A few feet away, Hauptmann jumped from his chair and shouted the command to "stop lying." His face was pale, his accent harsh and gutteral.

Mrs. Hauptmann Smiles.

Sisk stared coldly at the carpenter as the words burst out. The jurors gazed curiously. The spectators, jammed to the sills of the little courtroom, rose to their feet and craned their necks.

A faint smile crossed the face of Mrs. Hauptmann, the prisoner's plump wife.

"One moment," said Justice Trenchard. "Let me suggest to the defendant that he keep quiet. If he has any observations to make, let him make them quietly through counsel."

Deputy Sheriff Hovey Low and State Trooper Stockbridge, who sat on either side of Hauptmann, reached upward and jerked him back into his seat.

A deeper pallor spread over the

Crime Inquiry To Be Opened In D. C. Today

Rep. Randolph Promises Quiz Will Whitewash No Official.

Plans for the most thorough inquiry ever made into crime conditions in the National Capital are to be made at the first meeting of the House District Crime Sub-committee headed by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, in the District Committee Room in the House Office Building at 9:30 a. m. today.

The committee will meet in executive session. It will decide such questions as procedure, organization, including appointment of a secretary, and what additional help may be required, date of the opening of public hearings, witnesses to be called, the general order in which they shall be called, whether it will be necessary to ask for a special appropriation for the work, where hearings shall be held, and similar questions.

Representative Randolph said he planned to hold hearings in the District Committee Room. That room, however, is not very large and it is likely that a larger room will have to be found to accommodate witnesses and spectators.

Headquarters Sought.

Special headquarters also are to be set up in an office, probably on the fourth floor of the old House Office Building, just above the offices of Representative Randolph. So many persons already have come forward with stories of graft, "fixing," improprieties of various kinds on the part of police, court attaches and other officials and hangers-on that Representative Randolph believes such a headquarters is necessary. There the secretary of the committee will receive all tenders of cooperation on the part of citizens.

"We are not going on any cheap muck-raking expedition which would have its moment in the newspaper headlines and be forgotten," Representative Randolph said. "But we are not going to overlook any clew or evidence which will help to reveal a true picture of the

Outlaw Held in Secret Spot by Government, Says Cummings.

Developments in the battle against crime in the Nation yesterday were:

Attorney General Cummings announced that Arthur (Doc) Barker, leading figure of the notorious Barker-Karpis gang of outlaws, had been captured in Chicago and secretly held in a Government hide-out.

A cache of more than $10,000 was found in the house at Oklawaha, Fla., where Barker's mother, Kate Barker, and brother, Fred, met death in a battle with Federal agents Wednesday. Authorities were attempting to trace this as part of the Bremer kidnap ransom money.

Officials at San Quentin revealed thwarting of the sensational escape of four convicts had prevented the rise of a daring gang of bank raiders. One of the recaptured convicts boasted they "would have made Dillinger look sick."

A New Orleans girl, Margaret Rich, 20, set police on the trail of four youths who had abducted and beaten her, after she had been held prisoner for 22 hours.

(Associated Press.)

The smashing of the wild-riding Barker-Karpis gang neared completion yesterday as Federal anti-crime chiefs disclosed that Arthur (Doc) Barker, leading figure in the outlaw syndicate, had been arrested more than a week ago in Chicago and held secretly since.

Speculation at once arose that Justice Department efforts had squeezed from the slender, nervous Barker the information that brought death to his mother and brother—Fred and "Ma" Barker—in a five-hour gun battle with 15 agents at Oklawaha, Fla., Wednesday. Officials did not deny these rumors.

Held in Federal Hideout.

Attorney General Cummings, who announced Barker's arrest, said he had been captured without resistance "at about the same time" Federal agents killed Russell Gibson, alias Slim Gray, a less important member of the band.

Barker was reported reliably to be held in a Government hideout near Chicago. His return to St. Paul is scheduled to take place shortly.

The word went out, coincidentally, to bend every effort to capture Karpis, the other headliner of the gang.

"We intend to knock off everyone who ever worked with this gang," Hoover said. "It may run to 25 or 30 people. We have always felt that the Karpis-Barker mob was the brainiest and most dangerous in the country.

Gang Roamed Country.

"As long as it was at large we felt that a kidnaping or a big bank robbery might take place at any time.

"It roved from the Pacific across the continent through the Middle West and the South. We never heard of any of its activities around here or New York."

No Radical Meddling Planned, Dry Goods Group Is Told.

Continuance for From 1 to 2 Years Urged by Chairman.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Extension of the NRA for one or two years "substantially in its present form," was recommended tonight by S. Clay Williams, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board.

Speaking to the convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, Williams, who conferred with President Roosevelt only yesterday, gave the first official indication of the Administration's plans for the Blue Eagle's future.

Authoritative sources at Washington said Williams was expressing his personal view as far as the recovery board was concerned. Members of the board said they had not read the speech and were unable to say whether Williams' views had been discussed with the President at the conference yesterday.

Few Changes Seen.

Williams told business and industry:

"It would seem to be reasonable to assume that as far as business is concerned it will be permitted to follow its course largely along its recent lines without radical change therein."

After pointing out that banning of child labor, fixing hours and wages and collective bargaining had been generally approved, Williams said that, nevertheless, many problems concerning them need to be solved.

"It is, therefore, my thought," Williams said, "that the Congress should, and I hope that it will, adopt the policy of extending the National Industrial Recovery act substantially in its present form for an additional period of one or two years.

"I don't think we are ready to attempt permanent legislation in the field without more experience and study."

The chairman devoted a considerable portion of his speech to what he described as "witch" and "ghost laying."

"It has been demonstrated by results actually accomplished, not only that recovery is possible, but it is now known of all men that it is well on the way," Williams said.

"That means that the chances for radical or subversive legislation are very much reduced."

"Ghost" Is Laid.

Williams thrust at one "ghost" with a declaration that there need be no fear that "the Government would go bodily into the business of the country through a great bureaucracy which would take complete control."

Another specter, he said, "is found in the possibility of a too rigid method of control of working hours and too short work period."

"If in doing that we put the price of goods out of reach—for instance, of the 40 per cent of population that is on the farms—it may be easily possible to reverse the forces of recovery and launch another depression," he said.

As to radical theories of redistribution of wealth, Williams said:

"It is the rich man who can do for the rest of us many, many things that we can't do for ourselves. And he should have our encouragement selfishly given, if you please—if for no other reason, because of those important services that he alone is in position to render."

Congress Gets Social Program From Roosevelt to Provide Pensions and Job Insurance

Vast U. S.-State Plan Pooled in Single Bill

Health Benefits Are Included; Prior Status Is Given Measure on Committee Calendars; Enactment This Session Forecast.

Senate Body Sets Hearings Tuesday; Wagner, Co-Author, to Take Stand

By Robert C. Albright.

Backed by a White House message, a vast Federal-State plan for social reform, encompassing old-age pensions, unemployment insurance, maternity, child and health benefits, yesterday sped through the Capitol to prior status on House and Senate committee calendars.

Pooled into a single bill, the measure was introduced in the Senate by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and in the House by Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland. Leaders promised "prompt" action, forecasting enactment this session.

The message was greeted with mingled praise and scorn, liberals assailing its terms as "too modest;" conservatives advising careful deliberation. A left wing movement for a "modified Townsend plan" providing larger benefits financed by a sales tax, developed in the Senate. House Townsendites split over financing their Utopian old-age pension plan.

Hearings Scheduled.

In a maneuver for hurried action while 44 State Legislatures continue in session, Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee scheduled hearings next Tuesday. Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee temporarily sidetracked bonus measures in favor of social legislation hearings next week. A House controversy over committee jurisdiction threatened a bitter tug of war between the Ways and Means and Labor groups.

The four-pointed program, involving $103,000,000 Federal outlay the first year and $268,000,000 in years immediately succeeding, provided:

1. Unemployment insurance plan, permitting maximum compensation of $15 a week under State-sponsored programs. This would be financed by a uniform pay roll tax, starting at 1 per cent next January 1, and moved up to 3 per cent in two years, unless business recovery made a quicker step-up possible. A 90 per cent credit allowed employers contributing under compulsory State plans; the remaining 10 per cent used for State and Federal administration.

Old-Age Pensions.

2. Three-pronged old-age pension plan, providing "noncontributory," compulsory and voluntary phases with Federal subsidies not more than enough to pay a $30-a-month total to any person over 65. Compulsory fund financed by pay roll tax graduated from 1 per cent in 1937 to 5 per cent after 1957, and borne 50-50 by employers and employes. Persons too old to build up their own insurance would be cared for. Voluntary system permits supplemental annuities up to $50 a month.

3. Federal subsidies to States in aid of mothers and dependent children from $25,000,000 annual fund. Annual Federal appropriation of $4,000,000 for State maternal and child health benefits; annual $2,000,000 appropriation for State crippled child care, and $1,500,000 annually for aid to child welfare services.

4. Supplemental Federal aid to State and local public health agencies from $10,000,000 annual appropriation, $2,000,000 to go for Bureau of Public Health research; remaining $8,000,000 allotted to States on a basis of need.

Division of Authority.

Following recommendations submitted by the President's Committee on Economic Security, the Federal Relief Administrator would handle Federal subsidies for old-age pensions and dependent child care; the Labor Secretary, subsidies for maternal and child welfare; the Public Health Service, State health allocations; while the Treasury Secretary would manage and invest all deposits for unemployment insurance and old-age pensions. A social insurance board would study the course of the "experiment" and advise with the Labor Secretary.

Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, will open hearings with Senator Wagner, co-author of bill, on the stand. Even Dr. F. E. Townsend, author of the fabulous $200-a-month old-age pension plan, will be heard if he wishes, Harrison said. But no report will be made to the Senate until the House acts, when the lower chamber's bill will be reported with amendments.

House friction over committee jurisdiction developed when Chairman William P. Connery, of the House labor group, summoned his committee into executive session at 10 this morning to report out an old-age pension bill of his own, closely paralleling the Administration measure. Connery was represented as feeling the Wagner-Lewis draft should have gone to his committee, not the Ways and Means.

Townsend Measure.

An undercover movement to redraft the Townsend bill was begun in the Senate. A prominent minority Senator said the counter proposal will offer monthly pensions ranging from $50 to $60 for individuals; $80 to $90 for retired

White House Invites Business To Give Stand on Legislation

Advisory Council of Leaders Will Express Views on Controversial Issues; Roper Stresses Cooperation Is Aim to Speed Recovery.

By Felix Bruner.

Industry was invited by the Administration yesterday to express its views on pending legislation and other Government problems.

The Business Advisory Planning Council, a group of 52 leading business men of the United States, will be the medium through which these views will be transmitted to the President and to members of the Cabinet.

The invitation followed a meeting of the council with Secretary Roper, who announced that the plan had been worked out at a White House conference attended by himself and H. P. Kendall, of Boston, chairman of the council.

The move is an answer to the demands of business that it have a free medium for expression of its views on Government affairs. Specific subjects on which the council indicated it would like to have business views include social legislation, durable goods movements, unfair trade practices, decentralization of industry and the financing of small industries.

Cooperation Is Aim.

Announcement of the plan was made at a dinner given for the council last night by Secretary Roper.

"The watchword of this meeting is cooperation," Roper said. "The purpose of this meeting is to assist toward complete economic and social recovery in this country."

"Any business man or organization desiring to be heard on any piece of pending or proposed legislation may get a hearing through the council," announcement of the

By Leon Dure, Jr.

An Administration bill authorizing the RFC to extend its loans as long as 10 years after January 31, and permitting it to buy into existing mortgage-lending institutions or to help organize new ones, will be introduced in both Houses of Congress today.

This was disclosed late yesterday by Chairman Jesse H. Jones after a White House conference in which President Roosevelt made final decision to continue all New Deal lending agencies, with a probable $1,000,000,000 increase for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Changes to be sought in the RFC act represent a further effort to liberalize its loan policy and the beginning of a new drive to thaw out the real estate mortgage jam by the promotion of a Nation-wide system of companies to do a mortgage business.

Activities of the RFC automatically come to an end January 31, unless Congress intervenes. Mr. Jones' bill, which he said will be introduced in the Senate by Chairman Fletcher of the Banking Committee, and in the House by Chairmittee, and in the House by Chair-

Nazis Beat Foes, Salt Wounds, Fleeing Saar Refugees Charge

Communists' Homes Wrecked as Reported Terror Reign Starts; 500 Brave March Through Slush to France; Transfer Approved.

Saareguemines, France, Jan. 17 (AP).—Five hundred Saar anti-Nazis, soundly whipped in Sunday's plebiscite and fearful of Nazi terrorism, hit the fog-bound refugee trail into France today, bringing with them reports that two Communists had been slain at Neuenkirchen.

(A press correspondent who reached Neuenkirchen early Friday found one of the "slain" Communists walking around in bare feet and woolen underwear, and reported he was reasonably satisfied that the other one said to be dead was equally alive.)

A dozen who fought bitterly against Adolf Hitler's forces in the pre-plebiscite campaign were badly beaten, the refugees related.

(From Sulzbach in the Saar came reports that 150 terrified anti-Nazis were huddled in an unused French mine dormitory, fearing German concentration camps.

(Metz, France, and other French border towns reported moving-van companies swamped with rush orders as thousands made ready to abandon the soon-to-be-Nazi basin).

The shivering, frightened refugees, their few worldly possessions stuffed in sheets and tattered bags in fashion reminiscent of World War times, trudged steadily into France today to be received by French authorities and Red Cross stations.

Refugees arriving from Neuenkirchen said the two Communists were killed in their own homes "by Nazis" early in the morning.

Another man's house was wrecked, they said, but he managed to escape across the border, perforce leaving behind his wife who had been refused admission to her own home.

An arrival from Saarlouis asserted he saw still another man badly beaten. His face was cut and salt rubbed into the wounds, he said.

The Communists first reported killed at Neuenkirchen were named Karl Lictenberger and Hans Matthieu, the refugees related. Both were unemployed miners. The name of the man whose house was wrecked was given as Heinrich Schwartz.

Two hundred arrived at this border town, while 250 sought admittance to Forbach, 230 of whom were allowed to enter and 20 turned back. Saareguemines refused 10.

Still others made their way into smaller frontier posts, but French officials said the total figures were not yet available. They estimated, however, that 600 came over the border during the day.

Hazen Proposes Impounding Parked Cars Blocking Traffic

A regulation to empower the Police Department to impound parked automobiles which obstruct traffic will be proposed to the District Commissioners by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen as a result of a conference yesterday with traffic experts.

The regulation, Commissioner Hazen emphasized, would apply only to cases in which the illegal parking constituted an extreme obstruction to vehicular movement.

"We do not favor the impounding of cars parked overtime or for minor offenses; but where the offense constitutes serious impediment to traffic the cars will be removed by the police."

In addition to the fine for violation of the traffic regulations, the offending motorists would have to pay the charge of towing the car.

One suggestion made at the meeting was to authorize the police to seize all automobiles improperly parked. Commissioner Hazen does not favor this plan, he said. In order to enable enforcement of this idea it would be necessary for the Commissioners to be authorized by Congress to make a contract with private garages to handle the cars.

Under the proposed regulation the automobiles would be towed to the nearest police precinct or police garage. Before release of the car could be obtained it would be necessary to pay the fine and towing charges. The authority for this may be found under the Commissioners' general police powers, it is believed.

A canvass of 42 cities by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer disclosed that 20 of them had laws governing the removal of illegally parked automobiles.

"The District does not have the facilities in the Police Department," Commissioner Hazen said, "to attempt to carry out any law which would permit the impounding of all automobiles illegally parked. But we hope to remove those which seriously hamper traffic."

$900,000 Granted Reedsville To Double Subsistence Project

Plans for more than doubling the size of the Reedsville, W. Va., subsistence homestead project were announced yesterday by Secretary Ickes.

The announcement followed denial by Mrs. Roosevelt that she had suggested that two important PWA officials be discharged because of alleged activities in connection with the Reedsville development. Mrs. Roosevelt has taken an active interest in the development from the beginning.

Ickes announced that an additional PWA allotment of $900,000 had been granted, bringing the total allotment to $1,500,000. The allotment will permit immediate construction of 75 more houses, in addition to the 50 completed last June. Also, a contract has been entered into for purchase of 244 more acres of land for $9,500. Eight miles of new road is included in the new construction program.

Preliminary work on ten of the new houses already is under way. It is being done by the Emergency Relief Administration.

Following erection of the houses, it was announced that a school group to accommodate 500 children will be built. The buildings in this group will cost approximately $125,000. They will include accommodations for children from kindergarten through high school age. They will include also, an auditorium, a lunch room and a health center.

Future homesteads, it was announced, will average approximately three acres, instead of five acres as at present. In addition, there will be a community pasture for dairy cows.

The new houses will be built of cinder blocks for the first story and will be frame above. The roofs will be of asphalt and asbestos shingles. Each house will include a living room, kitchen, dining alcove, laundry and work room, heater room and four bedrooms.

Cost of Foods Rising Steadily

Federal Hog, Crop Curbs Blamed Here for Soaring Prices.

Retail food prices in Washington and the entire Nation are on the upswing, chiefly because of shortages, which local food merchants blame upon the drought and the Government's production curtailment program.

In the two weeks ended January 2, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports, retail prices rose 1.5 per cent for the entire country. Washington's rise for that period was also 1.5 per cent.

The best pork chops are now retailing here at from 20 to 31 cents a pound.

Officials of two large chain stores admitted that this was the highest price in recent months for pork. They said the price is caused by the Government's limiting of pork production.

Beef and lamb, these merchants said, are likewise rising in price, because of similar shortages.

For the country as a whole, the bureau's new price index of 115.9, based on the index of 100 for 1913, is almost up to the high of 116.8 achieved last September.

In the four weeks ended January 2, Washington rise was 2.3 per cent, 13.4 per cent higher than a year ago.

For the country as a whole, the report of the bureau gave these figures:

Meats, increased 3 per cent; fruits and vegetables, 3.5 per cent, because of a 5.9 jump in the price of potatoes.

Egg prices advanced 1.9 per cent; cereals, dairy products and miscellaneous foods, 0.1, 0.8 and 0.7 per cent, respectively.

Job-Relief Plan Lets Roosevelt Decree Set-up

Blanket Powers Provided in Draft of Measure Asking 4 Billions.

The present draft of the work relief bill, providing an appropriation of $4,000,000,000, is general in its nature, giving President Roosevelt blanket powers over the form of organization to administer its provisions and the nature of work projects, it was learned authoritatively yesterday.

Neither the President's message to Congress nor the bill itself is expected to give a hint as to the personnel or definite nature of the organization under which it will operate.

Meanwhile, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, was engaged in preliminary work necessary before the new plan goes into effect. He was consulting with State officials on the problem of taking unemployables off relief rolls and returning their care to the States. In this connection, he was emphatic in declaring that no unemployable person will be left without assistance, either from the Government or from a city or State.

At the same time, Hopkins revealed that the relief problem is growing. He estimated that 19,500,000 people are now on relief. This is an increase of 500,000 in a month. Hopkins also announced that approximately 2,250,000 persons are now on work relief. He said he believed this is the peak and that the number will be gradually reduced as the new works projects get under way, supplanting all present relief measures. A report from 141 cities showed that unemployment relief had increased 4 per cent in December and expenditures had increased 6 per cent. In Washington, the number of families and single persons on Federal relief increased from 21,810 to 22,301, and expenditures increased from $584,924 to $596,808.

Judges Advised InBookkeeping

Virginia Auditor Instructs Justices on Use of Standard Forms.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs conferred with trial justices and their clerks from six counties here today and advised them in the setting up of a standard bookkeeping system. This conference was one of a series the auditor is holding in Virginia. He will be at Charlottesville tomorrow.

Auditor Downs spent the day in informing the new officers on how to handle the standardized bookkeeping forms provided for them. He insisted that there must be standardized practices regarding costs and suggested that these should be held to a minimum. He went into detail in the three phases of the trial justice work—criminal, civil, and juvenile and domestic relations. Each must be segregated so that an audit can be made in the shortest time.

Gov. George C. Peery has called a conference of all trial justices of the State at Richmond for January 25, when the attorney general will go into the legal phases of their work.

Between You and Me

Economic Security a New Page in History? The Townsend Plan; a Quick Congress.

By Raymond Clapper

Later on, in the perspective of time, it may appear that President Roosevelt turned over a new page of history yesterday when he sent to Congress his recommendations on economic security. In a short time they will be enacted into legislation. That will make the United States one of the last of the larger nations to undertake permanent obligations for the support of the able-bodied unemployed and for the elderly who are no longer able to work.

This is one of the most eventful actions taken in the whole venturesome life of the New Deal and one which will touch more people, perhaps, than anything that has been done. Many who reflect upon it will find ground for both satisfaction and regret.

The Federal Government, or rather the people as a whole, now assume a responsibility for taking care of the unfortunate. It is a move away from the savage law of tooth and claw. The tremendous response to such fantastic proposals as the Townsend old-age pension plan, the fact that 30 or more governors are on record as favoring various forms of social security legislation, the fact that the Roosevelt program will go through apparently with little serious opposition, all point to a public awakening on the matter of social responsibility which basically changes the nature of our historic American individualism.

* * * *

On the other side, there are implications in this which are bound to cause regret. Once there was something in the American outlook not so far away from Huey Long's phrase, "Ev'ry Man a King." President Harding used to express it with a favorite campaign story which began, "I stood on the deck of a great ocean liner." It was a simple story about a prosperous appearing fellow traveler, who, as they swung into New York Harbor and passed the Statue of Liberty, remarked that just 20 years before he had arrived by steerage and made a fortune. It was the typical story in a young, growing country, where rapid expansion offered work for every one, rich for the more aggressive who had good luck, and reasonable income for almost every one of ordinary ability.

It was the American legend that any one by hard work could educate his children and protect himself against old age. Everything was wide open for those who had normal energy to go after it. Those who were out of work were regarded as either incompetent or lazy and those who reached old age in poverty had only themselves and their improvidence to blame. Of course, this was not true in many, many cases, but it was common enough to be regarded as typical of American life. So why should those who worked and held their jobs or kept their small business going and who saved their money be taxed to support the shiftless? If their relatives could not support them, let them go to the poorhouse. The poorhouse was a grudging concession to the indigent.

The depression has changed all of that. It has made clear that people are interdependent, that through nobody's fault millions are unable to get work for years, that when automobiles and trucks and pipelines go into competition with railroads, thousands of railroad men are thrown out of work, that events abroad may put our currency at a disadvantage and cut off markets for the crops of thousands of cotton and wheat growers.

Out of thousands of such experiences with men and women, suffering when they wanted work, and those who had work realizing that they had it partly or maybe entirely by the grace of good luck, was born a new point of view which is now taking deep root.

* * * *

The economic security program is one result of this change in American philosophy. It is an admission that we have become a grown-up nation, that the old wide open days of a new country being settled are gone and that we have reached a middle age when it must be recognized that from now on we are going to lose some of our teeth, that we are going to have more sickness, and that the muscles are not as resilient as they used to be. It is, in the field of public welfare, the conclusion which was reached with regard to business some time back and which caused the more farsighted business men, long before NRA, to urge some sort of control over ruthless competition which was encouraged in pioneer days when rapid building of the country was desired but which became a general menace later as industrialization became more close-knit.

* * * *

Old-age statistics compiled by the President's Committee on Economic Security: In 1870 there were 1,000,000 persons in the United States 65 years old or over constituting 3 per cent of the population; in 1900 there were 4,000,000 or 4 per cent of the population; in 1930 there were 6,500,000 or 5.4 per cent of the population. In 1975 it is estimated there will be 21,000,000 such persons constituting 13 per cent of the population. People live longer than they did a few years ago. Fewer children are born proportionately.

More and more the fast pace of American industry is crowding out the old men. The proportion of men over 65 unemployed was 26.2 per cent in 1890; 31.6 per cent in 1900; 37 per cent in 1910; 39.6 per cent in 1920 and 41.7 per cent in 1930.

* * * *

In 1870, over half the population was under 20 years of age; in 1930 less than 30 per cent. While the proportion of old persons is increasing, the proportion in the productive age span has steadily increased. In 1870 about 45 per cent of the population was between 20 and 60 years old, in 1930 this group constituted 52.6 per cent of the population. By 1950 it is expected to rise to about 57 per cent. That means more sturdy shoulders to carry the load, provided work can be found for them.

Agitation for the Townsend bill has swollen congressional mail to unprecedented proportions. The Senae has just voted to give each member an additional clerk. The House is about to do likewise. One prominent Senator says he has received four letters on the World Court, two from his home State and two from Washington, and about the same amount of mail on the bonus. Most of the remainder is Townsend plan mail. It is driving them crazy.

Regular legislative business is being disposed of more quickly than ever this winter due to the absorption in newer matters of policy. The independent offices bill, which carries nearly $800,000,000 for such agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Tariff Commission and other independent bodies, went through the Senate in less than two hours yesterday. Most of that time was taken up by Senator Long's attack on the League of Nations. The House passed it in two days, most of that time being given to members who wished to make speeches about various subjects for their constituents.

Railroad Asks To Abolish Line

Chesapeake Beach Road Cites Auto Competition in I. C. C. Brief.

The Chesapeake Beach Railway Co. yesterday filed application with the Interstate Commerce Commission to abandon its line from Seat Pleasant to Chesapeake Beach, a distance of 26 miles. Highway carrier competition was cited as the underlying cause for the application. Recently the road was put into receivership.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is expected to grant the application, but some arrangement is expected to be made to continue operation of about three miles of road from Seat Pleasant, where it makes connection with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to Benning.

Caesar L. Aiello, counsel for the receiver, said yesterday this would be necessary because this short stretch is a coal carrier from the B. & O. for the Benning plant of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and several other concerns in the neighborhood.

Possibility that a new corporation may take this spur over or it may become absorbed by the B. & O. was seen yesterday.

State Gets Right-of-Way For Parkway for $38.50

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—The State of Virginia has secured a right-of-way through the grounds of the Swannanoa Country Club near here over which the park-to-park scenic road will be built. The right was secured on payment of $38.50 for the slightly less than four acres needed.

A decree, entered in Chancery Court No. 2 at Richmond, gave the State permission to acquire the land from the receivers of the bankrupt Swannanoa Estates, Inc. The golf course and gardens of Swannanoa will not be damaged by the parkway.

Howell Admits Use of 'Aliases'

Chicago, Jan. 17 (AP).—Thomas M. Howell acknowledged to the Government today that 16 of those "aliases" used in an alleged corner of the corn market in July, 1931, were his own.

The Grain Futures Administration, trying the big corn trader for alleged violations of the grain act, already had presented evidence to prove he controlled a number of accounts under other names, but Howell's counsel, after a "huddle," decided to simplify things by admitting it.

One of the charges was that Howell concealed his tremendous purchases of corn in "alias" accounts; another, that he failed to report his holdings as required.

A. Fitz, grain exchange supervisor for the Government, testified in support of the latter charge today that Howell held 6,285,000 bushels of corn in July futures contracts, yet grain administration records showed no report of Howell's holdings in other names.

Howell, Fitz said, owned 4,955,000 bushels in his own name—the rules call for report of all holdings above 5,000,000 bushels in any one month—and another 1,330,000 bushels in the name of the Barrington Co., which he controlled. Fitz said he reported this to the board of trade when he discovered it.

$197 Hidden in Attic Destroyed by Fire

Chambersburg, Pa., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Lester Walker, tenant farmer on the D. M. Bream orchard farm at Woodstock, near here, was saving his spare dollars to buy a new automobile. He secreted the money in a cardboard box in the attic.

This afternoon fire swept the attic, burning the $197 Walker had placed there.

plan said. "Information and suggestions communicated to it will be passed along to sub-committees for consideration and later communicated to different members of the Cabinet. They, in turn, will route the suggestions through whatever channels they see fit."

The council: Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York; Pierre S. du Pont, Lincoln Filene, Boston merchant; Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; C. F. Kettering, of General Motors; John J. Raskob, of General Motors; Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors; Gerard Swope, president of General Electric; Myron C. Taylor, president of United States Steel Corporation; Walter C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and others almost equally prominent.

Will Discuss Stock Rules.

The announcement came on the eve of a board meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Of particular importance at that meeting will be a discussion of the new registration rules of the Securities Exchange Commission. A detailed report on the subject has been prepared for consideration by the board.

It is anticipated that members of the board will express hearty approval of the changes in rules. Data gathered by chamber experts indicate that more than $3,000,000,000 in security issues are nearing maturity and will require new financing. The new registration rules are expected to be a strong incentive to business to go ahead with this financing. This does not take into account possible millions of dollars of new issues.

The changes in the registration provisions followed a part of the recommendations adopted by the business group which met at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., last month. They did not carry out all the recommendations, however.

It is understood the change in registration provisions is only the forerunner of changes in rules governing the commission, changes which are expcted to meet nearly all the demands of business without amendment of the act.

Another Change Seen.

The next change is expected to concern the regulations governing the contents of prospectuses. There are complaints that these regulations in some respects are almost as restrictive as those covering registration. They have been relaxed to some extent, however, in that they include the registration regulations and have been amended insofar as these regulations have been amended.

The Securities Commission also is working on codification and simplification of its general regulations, with a view to avoiding confusion and misunderstanding. It also is planning to issue specific definitions of trade and accounting terms used in the act. This is considered important, because the act gives the commission exclusive power to define these terms.

Another section of the act to which the Commission is giving its attention is that covering its power over fraudulent transactions. Thus far the Commission has confined itself largely to preventing unlawful issues, but it is pointed out that lawful issues may be traded in unlawfully.

The Commission is being urged from business sources to move forward in this direction. It has been suggested that the Commission could cooperate closely with the Post Office Department, the Department of Justice, State "Blue Sky" commissions and other bodies interested in prevention of stock frauds. These would include better business bureaus, bankers' organizations and similar groups.

In this connection it has been suggested that the Commission may eventually establish regional and even State offices to cooperate particularly where suspected fraudulent transactions are of an interstate nature.

Ruritans Name Officers At Petersburg Meeting

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—The national convention of Ruritans, which has just closed in this city after a one-day session, elected the following officers for the year:

Park Board's Publicist Calls Dismissal Amusing

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 17 (AP). Pointing out that he had taken only a temporary job to do some special work for the conservation and development commission, Arthur Davidson today called the new commission's vote yesterday to dispense with his services after February 1 a "purely gratuitous and somewhat amusing gesture."

Mr. Davidson said his work was to have ended January 1, but had been extended another month by the retiring commission which wanted him to wind up some affairs in the Front Royal office. Regardless of the new commission's action, he said, he had intended to resume the editorship of the Northern Virginia Daily next month.

Miss Perkins Won't Share Bath So New Labor Building Waits

Remodeling to Seal Door to Secretary's Shower Brings Delay in Occupancy; Architects Hadn't Thought of Woman Cabinet Member.

The Labor Department is expected to move into its new building in about ten days. The move was delayed because it was found necessary to remodel two of the offices.

The remodeling was ordered by Secretary Perkins, who objected to an arrangement made in the interest of economy by the designers of the building, who didn't anticipate appointment of a woman secretary.

When Miss Perkins inspected her new office she found that it included a pastel-tinted shower bath. This was all right with the Secretary, except for one thing. There were two doors to the bathroom. She insisted that there must be only one.

So workmen were called in and a two-foot brick wall was erected, sealing the other door. As soon as this is completed and the necessary redecorating work done, the office will be ready for occupancy.

The objectionable door opened into the bath from the office of Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., solicitor general of the Labor Department.

The architect had planned that the bath be used by both the Secretary and the solicitor, failing to anticipate woman's place in the New Deal.

War Planned Against Borer, Foe of Oysters

Maryland and Virginia Consider Means of Fighting Pest.

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (AP).—The effect of the screw borer, a parasite, on the Maryland and Virginia seafood industries was discussed here today by Richard Armstrong, commissioner of fisheries for Virginia, and Swepson Earle, Maryland conservation commissioner.

Earle returned to Annapolis after the conference. Emergency temporary measures are under consideration in the State Senate, which would give him discretionary powers to permit dredging of oysters under the legal size.

Conservation measures affecting both States were discussed generally by the two officials, one subject being the spread of parasites in the Chesapeake. Both commended the recent proposal for a Federal fund to combat pests affecting shellfish along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts.

"The screw borer is the only serious menace to oysters in the Chesapeake and it has not yet become general," Earle said. "This parasite attaches itself to a young oyster and bores through its shell, eating a part of the oyster and killing it. We are careful in dredging seed oysters or distributing them, not to spread it to unaffected areas."

Some starfish, a deadly enemy of the oyster, were said to be found in Virginia waters, but have not entered the upper parts of the bay.

The screw borer was said to be susceptible to the salinity of water. It dies in fresh water and is driven away when the salt content of water is reduced.

Masons' Past Masters Elect Officers for Year

Westminster, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Officers elected at the annual meeting of the Past Masters' Association of Carroll County Masonic Lodges were Carl A. Cline, Mount Airy, president; Herbert C. Belt, Hampstead, first vice president; Charles E. Selby, Union Bridge, second vice president; Harry J. Starr, Westminster, secertary-treasurer.

The past master's degree has been conferred on Dr. George D. Resh, Hampstead; George M. Zinkham, Union Bridge; Francis A. Conaway, Mount Airy; Edward H. Arrington, Sykesville, and Gilbert D. Martin, Westminster.

Russian Dissatisfaction Denied by Troyanovsky

San Francisco, Jan. 17 (AP).—The cheerfulness which he said he found among the Russian people belies reports of dissatisfaction with political and economic conditions there, Alexander Troyanovsky, Russian Ambassador to the United States, said in an address here today.

$5,060 Demanded For Home Struck By Army Plane

A request was made of Congress yesterday to repay William E. Smith, of Fox Hill, Va., for the wrecking of his home last October 31 by an Army plane from which the pilot had leaped.

Representative Bland, of Newport News, introduced a bill, according to the Associated Press, to reimburse Smith in the sum of $5,060, the estimated cost of rebuilding his shattered house.

The pilotless ship dove through the upper part of the building and left only the kitchen habitable. Evidence presented to Bland showed the plane could have arrived at a less timely moment. The house was decorated for the wedding that evening of Miss Clara W. Smith, daughter of the family.

It didut stop the wedding, however. A friend loaned a house and another a wedding dress. Later officers of Langley Field, Va., where the plane and pilot were stationed, reimbursed Miss Smith for her destroyed personal effects.

Sharpsburg Asks School Building

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Concerned over the prospect of losing $45,000, authorized by the Legislature for the erection of a new school at Sharpsburg, a delegation from that town has protested to the board of county commissioners. When the bond issue was authorized it was provided that the school building must be completed by September 20 of this year.

Proceeds of a previous bond issue for $20,000 are impounded in a closed bank, and it will be necessary to raise an additional amount to the $45,000 now available to erect the building.

The Sharpsburg delegation wants the county board to ask for passage of a bill authorizing an additional bond issue to erect the school, which has an enrollment of 240.

Deadlocked Election Will Be Reaired Today

Annapolis, Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Additional testimony in the deadlock election case of T. Roland Brown and John J. Levay, Republican and Democratic candidates, respectively, for commissioner of Anne Arundel County, representing Annapolis, will be taken tomorrow before Police Magistrate Thomas G. Basil.

Brown and Levay each received 75½ votes in the November election. The opposing candidates entered into a mutual agreement to bring action in an effort to break the deadlock, whereby the county would be saved the expense of a special election. Alleged discrepancies in the count of ballots in several precincts are the basis of the action. Fifteen witnesses previously have testified in behalf of Brown. Five are slated to testify for Levay.

Robb 'Appointed' Envoy by Mistake

White House Error Caught, Nomination Withdrawn.

By mistake, President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the name of Hampton Robb, of Connecticut, to be American Minister to Paraguay. Catching itself, the White House later withdrew the nomination.

Mr. Robb had been offered the position, it developed, but in a letter to the President he declared that "unforeseen circumstances" prohibited him from accepting it. Through some error, his name went to the Senate anyway.

William H. Hornibrook, Utah, to Afghanistan in addition to Persia; William Dawson, Minnesota, to Colombia; Antonio C. Gonzalez, New York, to Ecuador; George T. Summerlin, Louisiana, to Panama; Julius G. Lay, Washington, D. C., to Uruguay, and Meredith Nicholson, Indiana, to Venezuela.

Graphic Arts Code To Get Court Test

Firm Withdraws Answer to U.S. Injunction Request.

Content to rest on its charge that the code of fair competition for the graphic arts industry is unconstitutional and unenforcable, the W. F. Roberts Co., one of the city's oldest printing establishments, yesterday withdrew its answer to the Government's request for an injunction to prevent alleged violations of the code.

The company, through F. Regis Noel, had previously asked for dismissal of the injunction proceedings. Its motion was rejected, and the case was then set for a hearing. Withdrawal of its answer yesterday left the company in the position of admitting that it failed to wholly live up to the code, but denying the constitutionality of the entire NRA set-up.

Exception to the action of Justice Jennings Bailey in declining to dismiss was taken, and the United States Court of Appeals will be called upon now to pass upon the validity of the code, the facts not being disputed as to alleged violations of the wage scale and hours of work per week.

400 'Hill' Jobs Slated in Drive For Patronage

Rep. White Sponsors Plan to Provide Extra Capitol Clerks.

More than 400 new Capitol Hill patronage jobs were practically assured yesterday as a movement to give each Representative an extra clerk gained momentum.

Another major development in the turmoil over Federal posts was announcement by Representative W. D. McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, that he already had more than the necessary 25 names on a petition to force a House Democratic caucus next Thursday on favoritism he charged was shown Republicans in selection or emergency agency personnel.

Representative Compton I. White (Democrat), Idaho, disclosed he has obtained several score signatures on a petition calling on the accounts committee to speedily report his resolution to permit employment by each House member of an $1,800-a-year clerk in addition to those already authorized.

Opposed to Overwork.

"We are destroying the health and morale of our stenographers and clerks," he protested. "The detail work in every member's office has increased tremendously. Our employes can't stand this killing pace much longer."

Election-conscious Representatives invariably write letters acknowledging communications from voters. The mail of most members has reached record-smashing proportions this session, in some cases totaling thousands of letter a day.

Only Wednesday the Senate voted to let each member hire a new cleark. The salary limit in the upper House, however, was fixed at $1,500 a year.

McFarlane reiterated he would demand appointment by the caucus of a special committee with broad power to investigate all phases of patronage distribution, both on Capitol Hill and in downtown Federal bureaus.

Attacks Present Setup.

"Under the emergency setup," the outspoken Texan complained, "it has apparently become a penalty to be a Democrat. Most of the key positions are held by Republicans and, naturally, they favor members of their own party in filling jobs."

McFarlane said leaders in the caucus movement would welcome reports of "legitimate grievances." He emphasized such material should be presented to House members within the next 72 hours "so we will know just what is going on when the caucus begins."

Indications were the party meeting would be called by Representative Taylor, Colorado, acting Democratic leader, as soon as McFarlane formally submits his petition.

Congress Gets Bill Extending RFC

man Steagall, of the corresponding House group, will provide for an extension of two years.

The RFC at present is authorized to extend loans up to January 31, 1940, but Mr. Jones gave the opinion a longer period, up to January 31, 1945, would be of benefit in "improving morale." Under the present policy, the RFC has offered to make extensions up to five years where collateral would not be impaired.

Under regulations circularized in October, the RFC proposed to set up a system of "mortgage trust companies," in which it would participate by the purchase of capital notes or preferred stock. This proposal fell flat, Mr. Jones conceded yesterday, not one prospect materializing.

Blames State Restrictions.

He declared that such companies, organized under laws regulating trust companies to do a mortgage business, had been shown to be "not very feasible." The blame he placed on State restrictions on trust companies, which, he pointed out, would not apply to the mortgage companies he now proposes to help.

From Chairman John H. Fahey, of the HOLC, another participant in the White House conference, came the first Administration word that a further authorization will be asked for his agency. The $3,000,000,000 already authorized in home loan bonds will soon be exhausted. Mr. Fahey said no figure had been decided on, but an extra $1,000,000,000 has been mentioned.

Further financial legislation will include a bill making permanent the temporary guarantee of bank deposits. In this case restrictions are expected to be placed on the amount of bank assessments, and the size of insured deposits is expected to be held to $10,000. Figures released by Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Deposit Insurance Corporation, showed that the present $5,000 limit on insured deposits covers 98 per cent of all accounts.

First Loan Committee Parley.

The White House conference was the first meeting of the interdepartmental loan committee with the President. Secretary Morgenthau said an effort is being made to plug the gaps between the ten lending agencies, and that a minimum of legislation will be sought. He added that the Export-Import Banks and the Commodity Credit Corporation will be continued.

Besides those mentioned, others attending the meeting were Secretary Ickes, PWA administrator; J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency; Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director; James A. Moffett, housing administrator; Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve governor; C. C. Davis, AAA administrator; William I. Myers, FCA administrator; T. Jefferson Coolidge, Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Herman Oliphant, Treasury counsel.

While these conferees mapped what was regarded, in the main, as a conservative program, members of the inflation bloc on Capitol Hill showed signs of going their individual ways, the Associated Press reported. Their multitudinous ideas were pooled in one resolution adopted at the Thomas meeting Wednesday, but leaders said bills would be pressed individually and not introduced as one.

others on foot. These last marched 6 miles through slush and fog to the railway customs shed here.

Among the refugees were women and children, heading out into the unknown, carrying nursery fittings in battered suitcases. But even the babies shed no tears, so glad were all the arrivals to find a country giving them welcome.

Some already had emigrated from Germany when the Nazis came to power to find temporary harbor in the Saar, harbor that ended for them with the Nazi victory in the plebiscite.

League Votes Return Of Saar to Germany

Geneva, Jan. 17 (AP).—A successful 15-year experiment in international government virtually ended today as the League of Nations Council voted unanimously to return the Saar to Germany.

While Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, solemnly urged rapprochement between France and Germany as "one of the essential conditions of effective guarantee of Europe's peace," the league council put the formal stamp of its approval on the will of Saarlanders expressed in last Sunday's plebiscite.

Ninety per cent of the qualified voters in the territory, taken from Germany after the World War, voted for reunion with the fatherland.

Formal Transfer March 1.

Under the terms of the resolution approved by the council, the Saar goes back to Germany in accordance with the Versailles treaty. That means it becomes part of the demilitarized border zone. On that France had insisted, and Germany agreed.

March 1 was fixed as the date for the formal transfer, and any problems in connection therewith shall be settled, the resolution provided, by the league's Saar committee "in consultation with the French government, the German government and the governing commission of the Saar territory."

Laval's speech, in which he said the result of the plebiscite conclusively demonstrated the will of the voters, was an impassioned plea for peace on the continent.

Council Chamber Packed.

France, the foreign minister asserted, had opened her frontiers to possible refugees from the Saar, but he added it should be understood this refugee question was an international problem, the solution of which rested with the league.

League representatives and spectators packed the council chamber for the historic session signalizing the completion of the last 12 plebiscites specified by the Treaty of Versailles and the end of the league's only venture in government.

French and German representatives had reached agreement on the conditions of the transfer before the council met.

Clifford Smith Marries Day After Luce Divorce

Reno, Nev., Jan. 17 (AP).—Clifford Warren Smith, divorced yesterday from Actress Claire Luce, his second wife, married the former Charlotte Fantoni today and prepared to sue his first wife, now Mrs. Vanderburgh Johnstone, of California, for part-time custody of their daughter.

The millionaire stepson of Newcomb Carlton, telegraph company executive, married his third wife late today at the home of an attorney. Smith made no provision for alimony for Miss Luce after her attorneys and his failed to reach an agreement.

Herring Takes Oath As Iowa's Governor

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 17 (AP).—Gov. Clyde L. Herring formally was reinstated as Iowa's chief executive today and then, in an inaugural message, presented the General Assembly with a list of recommendations which included transfer of liquor sale profits to the old-age pension fund.

The two Houses held brief separate sessions and then adjourned to reconvene at 2 p. m. next Tuesday when the real work of the Forty-sixth General Assembly will get under way.

Sub-Zero Cold Kills Thousands In Rural China

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press.)

Lanchowfu, Kansu, China, Jan. 17.—Thousands of residents of this Chinese frontier province never will see the return of bountiful harvests they have hoped next spring would bring.

Bitter winter, accompanied by sub-zero temperatures, came first, distributing throughout the famine-stricken area the surcease of death.

Bad crops and droughts, holding sway for the past five years, have left thousands homeless and starving. Prospects of improved conditions next season buoyed their hopes. Now merciless cold and snow are striking down the enfeebled victims almost within sight of relief.

Wealthy Chinese here and in other Kansu cities are striving valiantly to assist the unfortunates through daily distribution of soup. But the meager sustenance is proving far too inadequate to enable numberless Chinese to endure winter's rigors.

For those who do survive, spring undoubtedly will bring simple comforts they have not known for years. There will be fewer mouths to feed when winter ends and more food to satisfy the hunger which has been commonplace in the past.

20 Clerks Testify In Union Dispute

Mediators Hold Hearing at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Twenty employes of the clerical department of the Western Maryland Railway Company here testified today in the dispute as to which of two organizations is the proper representative of the workers before two members of the National Mediation Board, William Leisenson, chairman, and John M. Carmody.

The mediators left here after the hearing for Cumberland, where clerical employes there of that railroad will be heard tomorrow.

While several of the witnesses testified they had willingly joined the Western Maryland Railway Clerical Association, which the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks contends is a company union under the influence of officials of the company, one testified he had joined, fearing that if he did not do so he might lose his job.

The mediators sought from the testimony to learn whether clerks in the employ of the company had been solicited by company officials to join the Western Maryland Railway Clerical Association, which is in violation of the Railroad labor act.

Power Restored To Magistrates

West Virginia Emergency Statute Passed.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—The power of justices of the peace to try misdemeanor criminal cases was restored to them by emergency action of the Legislature today after the supreme court declared unconstitutional the law by which the justices were paid their fees.

Compensation of $1 per case for the magistrates is provided in a law passed quickly by both Houses on recommendation of Attorney General Homer A. Holt, who said he expects the fee system to be abolished.

Gov. H. G. Kump is expected to sign the new law as soon as it is presented to him.

The possibility of an investigation of the magistrates was seen in a House resolution asking the State auditor about assertions some justices are delinquent in payment of funds they collect to the State.

'Square Dealers' Speed Plans After Allen Fails to Act.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 17 (AP).—An order for mobilization of civilian companies of the "Square Deal Association" of Louisiana was the association's answer late today to the Long administration's refusal to comply with demands for repeal of "dictatorial laws" in the State.

As the State administration ignored the deadline set by the association at midnight last night for calling the legislature to restore "Constitutional Government," an order was issued through the columns of a local newspaper late today calling for military drills of the East Baton Rouge Co.

The order, headed "Special order No. 1," read:

"All members of the East Baton Rouge battalion are hereby ordered to report for drill formation and instruction at the Parish airport Saturday afternoon, January 19 at 3:30 p. m."

Ernest J. Bourgeois, association president, announced late today that the work of establishing the units was being speeded up, and that "definite details of the organization's general plan" had been completed and would be revealed shortly.

Senator Huey Long, in Washington, appeared little concerned over the Square Dealers' plans. Gov. Allen was silent after ignoring the Square Dealers' ultimatum.

A few State police lingered in the corridors of the 33-story Capitol today, but most of those concentrated here yesterday in anticipation of trouble last night when the ultimatum expired had left the city.

Palestine Yields Graves Believed 6,000 Years Old

Jerusalem, Jan. 17 (Palcor Agency).—The discovery of graves 6,000 years old, regarded by archeologists here as one of the most remarkable finds in recent years, was announced today.

The ancient burial grounds were uncovered by an expedition led by Dr. Eleazar Sukenik, professor of archeology of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

Situated at Givat Bilu, near the Yemenite settlement of Nahliel and adjoining Hedera, they are regarded as shedding light on the customs of those who lived in the fourth millenium before Christ.

Clay vessels, braziers and bowls are among the relics the excavators have extracted from the graves. They belong to the earliest known type of pottery.

A skull disinterred in the operations is described as the remains of the earliest primitive human head ever found in Palestine.

Damage Suit Defendant Granted Venue Change

Frederick, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—A suit for $15,000 damages brought by James A. McKee, of Washington, Pa., against Mrs. Hattie V. Warfield, of Braddock Heights, set for trial in the circuit court yesterday, was removed to Montgomery County on petition of the defendant, who alleged that she could not have a fair and impartial trial in this county.

McKee claims that on July 26 a truck owned by Mrs. Warfield ran into his automobile about 2 miles west of Hagerstown. He alleges that the accident was due to carelessness and that he was permanently injured. Judge Arthur D. Willard signed an order granting the change of venue.

Congress Hits At War Costs On 3 Fronts

Both Senate and House to Extend Hearings; Records to Be Probed.

(Associated Press.)

From three directions Congress struck yesterday at excessive profits in war and in preparedness for war.

The House Military Affairs Committee decided to seek an extension of its study of War Department expenditures and ordered public hearings beginning Tuesday on a universal draft bill freezing prices in the event of war.

At the same time the Senate unanimously voted another $50,000 for its special committee which is investigating munitions.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the House Committee, said the first witnesses on the draft bill would be the three men named by President Roosevelt to formulate means of taking the profits out of war—Bernard M. Baruch, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of the Army staff. Frank N. Belgrano, jr., national commander of the American Legion, also will be called.

Chairman Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, of the Senate Munitions Committee, said after appropriation of the $50,000, that his group would resume sessions Monday, its initial inquiry being directed at assertions that there is collusion among shipbuilders. The hearings, he said, will be held almost daily for an indefinite period.

One accusation to be studied will be that the cost of cruisers rose from $8,000,000 in 1932 to $16,000,000 in 1934. The committee will probe records of the New York, Newport News and Bethlehem shipbuilding companies.

"Income tax statistics show that 23,000 persons climbed into the millionaire class during the World War," McSwain said. "Economists have said the war could have been carried on for, at most, a half of what it cost but for the high profits that resulted from inflated prices."

Benefit Dance Tonight.

A student dance will be held today at 9 p. m. in the Hyattsville High School gymnasium for the benefit of the general school fund. Stanleigh Jenkins, of the faculty, is chairman of the arrangements committee, and has announced several novel features.

Hauptmann's Anger Stirred By U. S. Agent

"He's cracking now," said County Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck.

Lindbergh Calm.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whose son Hauptmann is accused of stealing and killing, remained one of the calmest persons in the old Hunterdon County courtroom.

In the front of the courtroom State troopers, detectives and Federal agents, present to testify, moved instinctively forward. But there was no need for them.

Stockbridge kept a strong grip on one of the prisoner's arms. The deputy sheriff never relaxed his hold.

Sisk was the second Federal agent to testify today about the tracing of the ransom notes to Hauptmann, his arrest and recovery from his garage of a large amount of the ransom money.

Bruno's defenders fought every step of the way as the prosecution sought to show that the treacherous ransom bills figuratively burned a hole in the carpenter's pocket.

Edward J. Reilly, chief of Bruno's counsel, pointed to the long and devious trail of the $50,000 which Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon paid in St. Raymond's Cemetery to a man he has identified as Hauptmann.

Notes Traced to Asia.

He showed, by cross-questions shot at the State's own witnesses, that the trail of the tell-tale notes stretched to far-away Asia; to Chicago and to many other points remote from the Bronx where Hauptmann had his home.

He tried to impress upon the jury that the ransom passer might have "taken a steamer" to Europe and then exchanged the bills "in Europe and Asia."

Bruno says he got the $14,600 with which he was caught last September from the myterious shoe box left him by Isador Fisch, his former partner, who went to Germany and died.

The State swung into the long story of the ransom money from a tragic narration of how Baby Lindbergh's body was found in a thicket not far from the Hopewell house from which he was stolen.

Women wept in the courtroom—the eyes of Anna Hauptmann glistened. The boyish Col. Lindbergh, his face set, sat rigidly in his chair.

Then, before beginning with the ransom money, the State introduced medical testimony to show that the baby died of a fractured skull—and from no other cause.

Matron Testifies.

That fatal injury, prosecutors contend, was caused when Hauptmann fell with the baby from a ladder while descending from the child's nursery on the blustery first night of March, 1932.

The body was found on May 12 of that year.

Guarding against any challenge of the body's identification, the State later used the matron of a Hopewell orphanage to bring out that no child was missing from the institution at the time the baby was stolen.

A quick-witted New York filling station attendant provided the vehicle for linking Hauptmann to to the gold-backed $10 ransom bill that led to his arrest.

In a quiet voice John J. Lyons recited his story—how, on September 15 last Hauptmann handed him a $10 gold certificate in payment for gasoline, how he noted the carpenter's face, and how Walter Lyle, station manager, wrote on the note the number of Hauptmann's automobile license.

The prosecution called Lyons to the stand as it moved swiftly to bring the presentation of its case to a conclusion. He was the eighteenth witness to testify.

Fourteen witnesses testified at the morning session—six to the gruesome details of the finding of the baby's body along the Mount Rose road outside of Hopewell and on the subsequent post-mortem examination and disposition of the body; eight to the preparation of the ransom money.

Defense Protests Bill.

The defense fought strenuously against the admission of the gas station bill as evidence, Frederick A. Pope, associate defense counsel, arguing the bill was not connected with the crime charged against Hauptmann.

"I want to say," said Attorney General Wilentz in reply, "that it is our belief as against his that we have already proven that this defendant is guilty of the crime charged in this indictment, murder; that is our contention."

Supreme Court Justice Trenchard ruled the bill was admissible.

Later in the day William F. Seery, another Federal investigator, testified that $35,000 of the ransom money was in gold certificates, and that $19,000 of this amount has been recovered, including the $14,600 found in Hauptmann's possession at the time of his arrest.

William Allen, the colored laborer who found the child's body, ending a 72-day search on land and sea, was the first witness of the day. His story was corroborated by Orville Wilson, his working companion.

Inspector Harry Walsh of the Jersey City Police Department, one of the investigators on the scene, testified he turned the child's body over with a stick which penetrated the skull, making a hole "about the size of an ordinary lead pencil."

Walter H. Swayze, Trenton undertaker and Mercer County coroner, told of carrying the baby's body to his morgue where Col. Lindbergh and Betty Gow, the nurse, later identified the child.

Dr. Charles H. Mitchell, Mercer County physician, testified the baby died of a fractured skull, perhaps instantaneously.

Chief Defense Counsel Reilly, in a lengthy cross-examination, sought to make the elderly physician admit the child might have died of exposure or a cold, but the physician refused to change his opinion. The defense fought the admission of the death certificate as evidence, but Justice Trenchard ruled it was admissible.

Lyons testified Hauptmann drove up to the Third avenue filling station, where he and Lyle worked, about 10 o'clock in the morning of September 15, bought some gas and gave Lyle the gold certificate. Lyle, the witness said, remarked that "you don't see many more of them" as he looked at the bill.

"I only got a hundred more left," Lyons quoted Hauptmann as saying.

As he drove away Lyle noted the license plate number, walked into his office and wrote it on the bill. Lyons received the bill as part of his weekly pay and took it to the Corn Exchange Bank branch at 125th street and Park avenue. The defense objected when he tried to relate his conversation with the bank teller.

Authorities Notified.

Miran John Ozmec, the teller, testified he received the bill from Lyons, and later turned it over to William R. Strong, head teller, who in turn notified the authorities.

Seery, the next witness called, related the investigation of the circumstances of the finding of the bill. With Lieut. James Finn, of the New York Police Department, and New Jersey State Police Corpl. William Horn he visited the Warner-Quinlan filling station where Lyons and Lyle worked, and sought a description of the man who presented the gold certificate.

"I remember that the description was practically identical with the description Condon had previously furnished us as to the man that passed the money," Seery said.

On Reilly's motion the answer was stricken as unresponsive.

At this time, Seery said, he was investigating two other gold certificates. The agent said he had discussed one of the bills with Hauptmann after his arrest and that in the presence of a man named Salvatore Lavatino the prisoner had said:

"Don't you remember me giving you this bill?"

The bill was offered in evidence over defense objections.

In cross-examination Seery said the first ransom note turned up about April 4 or 5, 1932, at the East River Savings Bank, Ninety-sixth street and Amsterdam avenue. Other bills, he testified, turned up in Albany, Utica, Troy and near Chicago.

Battle Over Shoes.

A $20 ransom note was discovered September 8, 1934, and was traced to a Bronx shoe store, Seery testified in redirect examination.

After Hauptmann's arrest, the agent said, Hauptmann had told him he bought shoes for his wife at the shop. The shoes were offered in evidence and accepted over the defense objections.

"I know," Justice Trenchard said as Fisher argued the shoes could "add no force" to the State's case. "But even slight circumstances are evidential in a case of this sort and such a case is usually permitted to be built up by a series of anything that counsel may submit."

When Seery started to tell how the police and Federal agents found a $20 ransom note on Hauptmann the morning he was arrested, Pope objected and argued the point at some length. Justice Trenchard ruled the testimony was admissible.

Seery said Hauptmann at first told them he had been collecting gold certificates over a period of years because he feared inflation, and that the money seized was part of this collection.

Six gold coins were found in Hauptmann's home, Seery said, but no gold certificates. Wilentz offered the coins in evidence, but an objection was raised and the attorney general withdrew them.

Hauptmann told his captors, Seery said, that he had no more gold certificates. He then listed the recovered ransom money.

Mrs. Elmira Dormer, custodian at St. Michael's Orphanage, about half a mile from the spot where the Lindbergh baby's body was found, called next as a witness, testified no children were missing at the time of the Lindbergh baby's death.

Admits Identification.

"I will say now," said Reilly, "that there never has been any claim but this: That this was Col. Lindbergh's child that was found there."

Sisk was the next witness. He described Hauptmann's arrest, the visit to his home and the finding of the $120 in gold coins locked in a metal box. Then the house was searched.

Hauptmann sat in a chair near a window. Sisk noticed he got up several times and looked out the window. From where he stood, Sisk said, he could see the garage, about 50 feet away.

Sisk wondered at this, he said, and then he and Lieut. Keaten and Inspector Lyons went down to the garage. They found two middle planks on the floor of the garage were loose and pried them up with a crowbar. Underneath they found freshly disturbed earth.

"So we got a shovel or a spade and we dug down and we found a crock," Sisk related.

It was covered with mud and lay about a foot underground. There were 2 or 3 inches of water in the crock, but no money. The next day Hauptmann admitted he had had money in the jug three weeks before he was arrested, Sisk said.

It was then that Hauptmann leaped to his feet and shouted.

Judge Accepts Apology Voiced For Hauptmann

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 17 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was penitent after his outburst today in the Hunterdon County courtroom, where he shouted at Federal Agent William H. Sisk to "stop lying."

Afterward Hauptmann expressed a desire to apologize to Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard and promise not to do it again.

Egbert Rosecrans, associate defense counsel, apologized instead, and the apology was accepted. Justice Trenchard remarking "he had had it happen in trials before."

battle, returned a verdict that Fred and "Ma" Barker were killed "while resisting arrest" and that the Federal agents had acted "in the protection of their own lives."

At the Justice Department here it was revealed that more than $10,000 had been found in the house where the pair met their death. Some was found in Mrs. Barker's purse and more in a money belt worn by Fred.

A check was started immediately to determine whether the money was part of the $200,000 ransom paid in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer just a year ago, for which the gang has been sought continually since.

Both Karpis and Barker have been indicted by the grand jury of the Federal District Court at St. Paul for the abduction of Bremer.

Hoover said the Justice Department was making inquiries to determine whether the group was also responsible for the $100,000 kidnaping of William Hamm, another St. Paul resident. Members of the Touhey gang of Chicago were tried and acquitted of carrying out this abduction.

Bank-Raiding Gang Plan Seen in Daring Escape

San Quentin Prison, Calif., Jan. 17 (AP).—Authorities said tonight the rise of a murderous, bank-raiding gang was thwarted in frustration of the escape staged by four San Quentin felons and the later arrest of Clyde Stevens, alleged plotter of kidnap-and-run coup.

"Unquestionably these four convicts were planning to form a bank-raiding gang and spread terror through the East," said Julian Alco, acting chairman of the badly shaken State prison board.

"If everything had gone right we would have made Dillinger look sick," boasted Albert Kessel, one of the three men captured with Stevens in a midnight police raid at Antioch, 30 miles from the prison.

Stevens, a paroled convict pal of the four freedom-seeking prisoners, is wanted for an array of robberies, as well as on the accusation of Alco that he supplied the automatic pistols used in yesterday's short-lived escape here.

Rudolph Straight, 35, ringleader of the convict quartet who died of bullet wounds received when he and his fugitive pals were cornered by a posse, was characterized by Alco as "almost a madman."

Physicians said Warden James B. Holohan, who was beaten by Straight when the convict quartet stormed his home on the prison grounds as a preliminary to the escape, had a fair chance for recovery.

Plans to put the necks of Straight's three prisoner-conspirators into the hangman's noose were formulated by Albert E. Bagshaw, district attorney, who assisted in their capture.

Bagshaw said the trio, Fred Landers, 27; Joe Kristy, 26, and Alexander Mackay, 26, would be charged with kidnaping and the death penalty would be sought.

Two of the six hostages received superficial bullet wounds when pursuing officers fired upon the motor car in which the convicts and kidnap victims were speeding away.

Girl Kidnaped, Beaten By New Orleans Gang

New Orleans, La., Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Kidnaped, assaulted, beaten and held prisoner for 22 hours, Margaret Rich, 20, returned home today to set police on the trail of four young men, who had abducted her.

A beauty show contestant of a few years ago, Miss Rich was seized in an alley near her apartment, where she lives with her widowed mother, and carried away in an automobile, she reported.

The kidnaping occurred Tuesday night, but police did not learn of it until this evening.

The girl said four men grabbed her in the alleyway.

"They carried me to a big automobile and, the next thing I knew I was in an upstairs room of a strange house. I tried to beat them off, and you can see what they did to me."

Both her eyes were closed by bruises, the bridge of her nose was cut, her lips lacerated and several teeth knocked out.

She said three of the men criminally assaulted her. She was denied food during her imprisonment, she said. Last night they took her to a car, drove her about town for a time, then released her in a neighborhood unfamiliar to her. She induced a taxi driver to take her home.

Karpis Hideout Hunted By U. S. Aids in Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 17 (AP).—With Arthur (Doc) Barker held incommunicado, Federal agents tonight went out on a search hoping to capture Alvin Karpis, reputed coleader with Barker and his slain brother, Fred, in the $200,000 Edward G. Bremer kidnaping.

Secrecy shrouded the agents' activities but it was learned they were seeking an apartment where Karpis supposedly was hiding.

It was reported that Barker and three women already in custody had "talked" and that what they said promoted boht the coup yesterday in Florida, in which Fred Barker and his mother were slain, and tonight's raid.

conditions existing in the National Capital.

"We are not seeking to attack any official or department or agency. We are not going to whitewash any official or agency. I believe the committee will decide to examine the officials of our law enforcement agencies first. I believe the committee will wish, too, to have the views of other responsible men and women who know whereof they speak.

Witnesses Welcome.

"The committee, I believe, will want to summon and examine these officials first. Following their examination I believe the committee will want to hear each and every citizen who believes he has something to say. Just as soon as the committee has arranged for a special office where citizens may go to volunteer helpful information its location will be announced and all will be welcomed."

One of the initial moves in the campaign against crime is to be taken by Representative Randolph on the floor of the House today. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, asked for 135 more police next year. This represents 35 policemen cut from force and 100 more. The Commissioners cut the proposed increase to 35. The House District Appropriations sub-committee cut this out. Representative Randolph plans to offer an amendment on the floor today, seeking restoration of the 35 men.

Poderjay, in Ship's Brig, Goes on Hunger Strike

Aboard the S. S. President Polk, at Sea, Jan. 17 (AP).—Ivan Poderjay, whom United States authorities will question concerning the disappearance of his bride, Agnes Tulverson, of Detroit and New York, went on a hunger strike today. His object, he said, was to have his quarters changed from the ship's brig to a stateroom.

When breakfast was offered him on his second day at sea out of Italy he declared, "I'm no cannibal!" and refused to accept the tray.

Constituents Stir Gifford to Action On Crime Here

Representative Charles L. Gifford (Republican), Massachusetts, yesterday joined the ranks of national lawmakers who are aroused by Washington's crime problem.

At the instigation of four constituents, who lost while motoring through the Capital on their way South, he called upon park police to do something about the automobile looting situation.

Two married couples from North Cohasset, Mass., were en route to Florida, when they stopped here for a few hours. They parked their car, containing two suitcases and a traveling bag, in the Smithsonian grounds.

Upon returning Mr. and Mrs. James D. Bates and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph V. Bates—the victims—discovered that the machine had been broken into and the luggage stolen. The loot, valued at more than $400, consisted of two gold rings, a pair of pajamas, a radio set, three boxes of cigars, a man's nightshirt and a great quantity of dresses, toilet articles, stockings and other personal necessities.

Procession of State's Witnesses Speeds Trial

Ransom Funds Traced to Asia By U. S. Agents

Description of Baby's Body Brings Tears From Women in Court.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 17 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann today heard State witnesses tell how they found the little body of the baby he is accused of murdering.

William J. Allen, colored laborer, who found the body in a shallow grave on the Mount Rose road 72 days after the kidnaping, was called.

He was directed to tell of the body's finding on May 12.

"Were you on the Mount Rose road on May 12," Assistant Attorney General Robert Peacock asked the witness.

A. Yes.

Q. Who was with you?—A. Orville Wilson.

Q. How deep in the woods did you go?—A. Thirty yards.

Q. What was the character of the woods—bushy?—A. Yes.

Q. What did you see?—A. I saw a skeleton on the ground. I looked at it and I said, "Gee, that looks like a human being." I saw a foot. I called Wilson. I told him not to touch it, and we went on.

Allen told how he hurried to Hopewell to notify authorities.

Q. Did you see any police officer in Hopewell?—A. I did, after I looked for one.

Q. Did you report the finding of the body?—A. I did.

Allen identified a photograph showing the wooded glade and the body as it was when it was found.

Lloyd Fisher, defense, objected to introduction of the photograph of the body lying in the thicket.

Allen said he had not seen the photograph taken.

Can't Find Road on Map.

Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, asked the witness if he could designate on a map the Mount Rose road near which the body was found. The laborer pored over the map exhibits for some minutes, then shook his head.

Q. Can you stand on that road and see Col. Lindbergh's home off to the right?—A. Right straight ahead. Yes, sir.

Q. From where your truck stood, how many miles would it be by road to Col. Lindbergh's home?—A. About four miles and a half.

Q. That's all scrub oak, isn't it? The road runs through the woods?—A. Not all. The road is macadam.

Q. This spot was how far from the road?—A. About 30 yards.

Q. Something attracted attention?—A. It was very brushy; about 5 feet high. I ducked my head and when I looked up I saw the skeleton about 10 feet away.

The body was "on top of the ground," he recalled.

"It (the grave) looked like a hole about 3 feet long. It was dug about a foot deep. The dirt was turned up. It had rained on the dirt and body."

Q. The body was lying on its face?—A. Yes; on its face.

Q. Did it indicate to you it (the grave) had been freshly dug? A.—No, sir.

Wilson Called.

Orville Wilson was called to corroborate Allen's story.

Q. Describe what you saw—A. Well, I saw the body of a child. You could see the foot of a child lying there. It was pretty decomposed.

Q. See any clothes on the body?—A. I think I saw a part of a shirt.

Q. Any leaves on the body?—A. Around it.

Lloyd Fisher, defense, cross-examined.

Q. There wasn't any path leading to the spot then?—A. No, I don't recollect any path. There was dead grass. There was brush, low squatty brush.

Q. Timber? A. Some, yes.

Q. There was a ditch along the road?—A. Yes.

Q. Weren't there two ditches?—A. Now, I don't know.

Q. Mr. Allen spoke of the body as a skeleton. Is that the way you found it?—A. Well, I suppose the foot and the bones were skeleton. He probably noticed them.

Q. The foot———?—A. The foot lay a little way from the body.

Q. Away from the rest of it?—A. Yes, a little distance.

Trooper Testifies.

Sergt. Andrew Zapolsky, of the State police, was called.

He told how he went to the scene with Hopewell police.

Q. Arriving at the scene, what did you do?—A. Turned the body over. It had been lying face downward on its face.

Q. Were there any leaves or dirt on the body?—A. There were some leaves and dirt. A part of the head was bare and some of the curly hair showed around the leaves.

Q. Did the body have any clothes on?—A. It had a shirt on.

Q. Did you turn the body over?—A. Yes, sir.

Fisher, on cross-examination, had the witness carefully describe the condition of the body. He asked whether the face was well preserved.

"Yes. It was preserved in the earth. When we turned it over it was white. Later it turned blue."

Inspector Harry Walsh of the Jersey City police took up the story.

Q. Did you move the body?—A. Yes, about an inch.

Walsh said he touched the head with a stick.

Q. As a result of that there was a penetration. Did it make a little hole?—A. Yes, about the size of a lead pencil.

Q. What did you do next?—A. Cut the clothing from the body.

Examined the Grave.

Walsh said he examined the shallow grave.

Q. What did you find?—A. A quantity of blond hair about five inches in length, in the depression where the head had lain.

Fisher took Walsh for cross examination.

Q. There is a possibility, isn't it, that the child may have been left on the surface, and nature worked it down to where it was?—A. It is entirely possible.

Fisher switched to the hole the inspector made in the child's head when he lifted it with a stick. He sought to get the witness to describe it in detail but the inspector stuck to his brief sentence, "The stick penetrated the skull."

Fisher asked if he thought the stick had penetrated the brain. A. From the condition of the body I doubt there was a brain in it.

Walter A. Swayze, Mercer County coroner, was next called.

Q. What did you do with the body?—A. I placed it in a removal grip made for that purpose and then took it to Trenton to the county morgue.

Q. Did Col. Lindbergh arrive at the morgue that day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he identify the body?—A. Yes.

Stuart W. Cregin, official of the Morgan banking firm, was called by Prosecutor Anthony H. Hauck, jr., to tell of preparation of the ransom bills. He told of taking two packages of money to the Fordham branch of the Corn Exchange Bank, about March 23, 1932. He identified the large book prepared at his direction and listing the currency numbers of the Lindbergh ransom money.

Morgan Man on Stand.

Longstreet Hinton, another Morgan employe, was then sworn. His story corroborated Cregin's. Stephen C. Reynolds, also of the Morgan firm, took the stand to tell briefly that he accompanied Cregin when the ransom money was moved to the Barstow home.

Henry E. Schneider was the next witness. He said he was manager of the Corn Exchange Branch Bank in Fordham. He told of receiving and returning the ransom money packages which Cregin left in his custody. He said the packages were kept in a vault.

William F. Wilkinson, assistant cashier in the Corn Exchange Bank, followed and told of removal of the money from the bank's vaults to Bartow's home.

Gas Station Clerk Called.

The State then called John J. Lyons, gasoline filling station employe.

Lyons said he saw Hauptmann drive a dark sedan into the station on September 19, 1934.

His partner, Walter Lyle, he said, waited on Hauptmann and received a $10 gold certificate.

Wilentz produced a $10 bill.

Q. Is that the bill he got from Bruno Richard Hauptmann?—A. Yes.

Lyons then related the conversation he overheard.

"Lyle said to Mr. Hauptmann, 'You don't see many of these these days.'

"Hauptmann said, 'I only got 100 more left.'"

The gas station attendant related Hauptmann received his change and drove away, and Lyle noted down the license plates.

That notation was to lead to Hauptmann's arrest for the crime a few days later.

Lyons said he took the bill with other company funds to the bank.

Q. What did you do with the bill?—A. I got two $5 bills for it.

Reilly took the witness for cross-examination.

Q. Then you put in a claim for the reward?—A. Yes, I did.

William F. Seery, special investigator of the Department of Justice, said he had been checking the distribution of Lindbergh ransom bills since March, 1933.

Other Bills Checked.

Seery said that two other bills were being checked at the time the gasoline station certificate appeared.

One of them, a $10 gold certificate, he said, Hauptmann told police he gave to a "Salvator Levintino."

Hauptmann, Seery went on, was confronted with Levintino and said: "Don't you remember me giving you this bill?"

Cross-Examined.

Q. Do you know that ransom bills did turn up in Albany, Utica, Troy and near Chicago?—A. Yes.

Seery said a $5 bill turned up at an Albany bank in April, 1934, and another $5 bill in Utica in May, 1934.

Q. Have you one from London?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there a report a woman tried to pass a $20 bill in Greenwich, Conn., in the summer of 1932?—A. I never heard any such report.

Q. Have you reports of circulation in Europe?—A. No reports of any circulation have come in from there. Wilentz took up redirect examination.

Q. Isn't it a fact that some may still be in circulation or destroyed by the Government?—A. Yes, sir.

Says He Bought Shoes.

Seery said he questioned Hauptmann after his arrest and the stolid German told him he spent the money in a Bronx shoe store for shoes for his wife.

"This bill," said Wilentz, "corresponds to the number on the printed list."

Q. These shoes were found in the Hauptmann home, were they not?—A. They were.

Q. In the presence of the defendant?—A. Yes.

Q. When he was arrested, did you find more ransom money?—A. The day he was arrested one $20 gold certificate was found in his possession.

Wilentz then turned to the $20 bill found on Hauptmann when arrested.

Q. How did Hauptmann explain that bill?—A. He stated that over a period of years he had been assembling gold certificates and was now spending them.

Q. Did you question him if he had any more gold certificates at home?—A. Yes, and he said he had approximately $100.

Q. When you went to his home what did you find there?—A. A little better than $100 in gold coins, and not gold certificates.

Q. Will you please add if you found any other ransom bills?—A. Yes. 310 $10-gold certificates; 493 $20-gold certificates.

Q. $14,760?—A. Yes.

Q. Where did the money come from?—A. Bruno Richard Hauptmann's garage.

Q. In all your investigation did you find any Lindbergh ransom money in anyone else's garage?—A. No, sir.

3 Bills Found in Asia.

Q. Were there any bills found outside the New York-New Jersey area or where you described?—A. Yes. Three bills in Asia.

Reilly opened the cross-examination.

Q. The $10,000 "red seal" $5 notes and the $5,000 Federal notes in the ransom money, were not called in?—A. No.

Q. If a person took a steamer to Europe with the $15,000, he could spend some in Europe and Asia?—A. Yes.

Q. You said some was found in Asia?—A. Yes.

Thomas H. Sisk, special agent in the Department of Justice, was called.

Hauptmann Hurls Lie.

Q. What did he say in respect to this bill?—A. He said "this particular bill was the last one."

The arresting party proceeded to Hauptmann's Bronx home, said Sisk.

Q. What did you do after you got through with this gold coin business?—A. We searched the house. We had him (Hauptmann) sit down in a room near a window. We were searching that room then. I noticed that when he thought no one was looking he raised up and stole a look out the window.

Q. What could be seen?—A. The garage about 50 feet away. I asked him, "What are you looking at?" and he said, "Nothing." I asked if the money was in the garage and he said he had no money.

Then came Hauptmann's shout of "Listen, mister! You stop lying!"

Lloyd George Offers Britain New Deal Plan

Bangor, Wales, Jan. 17 (AP).—Seven thousand worshipful Welshmen flocked into Bangor's little drill hall tonight to hear David Lloyd George expound his "new deal" for Britain.

Outside, listening in through loudspeakers, were 5,000 more, many of them come from far parts of Wales, who were unable to get into the hall.

To his audience the war-time prime minister, who was 72 years old today, extolled Franklin D. Roosevelt as a "man of indomitable courage," and urged that Great Britain follow the path back to prosperity he has marked out.

Hails Roosevelt Courage.

"I bow to him," Lloyd George said, "because such courage is so rare."

Lloyd George, starting his address in Welsh, spoke slowly at first. Quickly he gathered speed and soon was thundering away at England's dole system, asserting his answer to unemployment would be "exactly the same as Roosevelt gave the American Congress the other day."

So carried away by his own fervor was he that he skipped two whole pages of his prepared address—the part dealing with Anglo-American friendship—as he poured out fire and brimstone on the head of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and other "younger generation" postwar political leaders for their failure to aid the distressed.

"I would find work for the workless," he declared, "instead of doles. And I am convinced as he is that it can be done."

Urges a "Prosperity Loan."

The former prime minister's scheme covers everything from launching "a great prosperity loan" to settlement of the "Chinese situation."

To help Britain's internal reconstruction he proposed the setting up of a powerful, permanent "brain trust" operating without political interference to "prepare definite plans for action," with Parliament legislating on general questions alone.

The Cabinet, he urged, should be completely changed, on the principle of the old war Cabinet, to a body consisting of no more than five of "the ablest men available."

"My financial proposals," Lloyd George said, "involve something in the nature of two budgets," explaining that one would deal with ordinary revenue expenditure and the other with capital expenditure.

Capital for carrying out the "brain trust's" schemes would be raised each year, he said.

"I believe a great prosperity loan would be over-subscribed by an eager and enthusiastic public," he asserted.

The former premier attacked the Bank of England, asserting it must be made independent of London's Wall Street and brought into closer contact with the industries and commerce of the nation.

Bill Calls for End Of Dry Rule in Utah

Salt Lake City, Jan. 17 (AP).—The first step toward an end to Utah's 17 years of statutory prohibition was taken in the House of Representatives today with introduction of a bill for State liquor stores prepared by an advisory committee of 49 citizens named by the Governor.

Gov. Henry H. Blood, in his message to the legislature, recommended passage of the measure.

White House Cop Nabs Motorist In Hit-Run Case

White House policemen don't often make arrests. But Officer Herbert Marcey found an occasion yesterday, following an accident at Glebe road and Lee highway in Arlington County, Va.

After a three-mile chase, Marcey caught Fred Moton, colored, 23, of Hall's Hill, who is alleged to have sped away in his car after striking the auto of W. H. Brooks, of 503 B street southeast. Hit and run charges were placed against Moton at the county jail.

Disorders Flare At Georgia Mill

Rossville, Ga., Jan. 17 (AP).—Strike disorders flared afresh at the Richmond Hosiery Mills here today, scarcely 24 hours after Georgia National Guardsmen had been sent home after ten days of strike duty.

Special deputies were forced to use nausea and tear gas to quell disturbances. The third case of workers' automobiles being fired upon was reported to authorities.

The height of the trouble came in early afternoon when shifts changed at the mill. As employes reported for work, a crowd of about 250 picketers assembled in front of the mill gates to taunt them. Several fights took place but no one was seriously hurt.

Macon to Take Part In Hawaii Maneuvers

Honolulu, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Macon, huge airship of the United States Navy, will fly to Hawaii to participate in fleet maneuvers next spring, it was learned authoritatively today. FERA workmen will clear an area about the dirigible mooring mast at Ewa, near the Pearl Harbor Naval Base, in preparation for the arrival of the airship.

It will be the first time a dirigible has come here.

Temblor Hits New Mexico.

Socorro, N. Mex., Jan. 17 (AP).—Two distinct earth tremors rattled dishes and jarred window panes here today. R. H. Reece, professor of physics and mathematics at the New Mexico School of Mines here, attributed the shocks to the settling of rock layers in the section.

Congress Gets Roosevelt's Social Reform Plan

Measure Lists Job Insurance, Help for Aged

Health Benefits Included; Act Tops Calendars of Committees.

couples, the plan to be financed by a Federal sales tax.

Leaders estimated the broad Administration program could move partially into operation in 11 months. They prophesied enactment virtually as outlined by the President. House chieftains will resort to "gag" rule tactics if necessary.

Senators William E. Borah, of Idaho, and James Couzens, of Michigan, pointed liberal Senate criticism of the President's plan. Borah left the pension allowance "wholly inadequate" and said the program left room for "waste." Couzens said the plan is "too limited in its financial scope."

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—President Roosveelt's recommendations to Congres son economic security were judged tonight by busines and financial spokesmen to be in general accord with programs approved by two of the most vitally concerned sections of the trade world—manufacturers and distributors.

The busines conference recently at White Sulhpur Springs, sponsored by the National Association of Manufcturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and the Retail Dry Goods Association, approved the principle of economic security embraced in the Roosevelt recommendations.

Te White Sulphur conference, however, advocated a period of intensive study before a plan should be put into effect, on the theory that establishment of the plan would prove of little immediate value to the people, nad that much time and expense would eventually be saved.

Retailers Program.

Retailers this week approved a detailed plan of economic security which varied only in minor details from the Roosevelt recommendations.

On unemployment insurance, the outstanding unsettled point, as viewed by industrial and financial observers, was the method of contribution. Most advocate payments by employer, worker and the State with the State bearing only the administrative cost. With the proposed 3 per cent payroll tax collected by the Federal Government as a suffer between States with and without unemployment insurance, it was generally agreed the point could be settled by individual States without conflict with the Federal program.

Pools of Contribution.

Sentiment was divided on the point of State or industry pools of contributions, a factor not mentioned in the White House message. That, too, it was felt, could be settled by individual States. State pool champions contend their plan would lend strength to the unemployment insurance program, while idustry pool advocates say plants with heavy seasonal unemployment would drain funds from contributors who maintained steady employment.

A solution, envisaged by many, was a graduated payroll tax based on stability of employment within the individual business.

Businessmen generally viewed the Administration proposals on old age pensions as much sounder than any of the popularly espoused blanket payment schemes or share the wealth drives.

Aid To Mothers.

The expense of aid to mothers and orphans it was not believed would become so heavy as to be a burden on business, and many businessmen said that because of the popular appeal of such plans there was no argument that could be advanced against it without inciting sharp public displeasure.

Investigation and research along public health lines was seen as a proper move at this time in most business circles.

Heated debate over details, it was agreed, would come from those bearing the cost of all the economic security plans, but such argument, it was felt, would lead toward a solution and not toward a stalemate.

Officers Installed By Allegany D. of A.

Past councilor's pins were presented to Mrs. Della Twigg and Mrs. Arbutus Lohr.

3 Die in Arkansas As Train Hits Truck

Wynne, Ark., Jan. 17 (AP).—A woman and two men were killed this afternoon when a northbound Missouri Pacific freight train struck their truck at a rural road crossing near here.

The dead were Mrs. Henrietta Flynn, 65, of St. Francis County; John Hall, 30, of Etowah, the driver of the truck, who was not immediately identified.

Summary of Security Bill

Old-Age Pensions.

The old-age pension legislation is divided into three parts: (1) A national system of compulsory contributory old-age insurance; (2) Federal subsidies to the States to help pension the aged who can not be brought under the insurance system; (3) a voluntary system of old-age annuities.

(1) The national system of compulsory contributory old-age insurance.

(a) Fund—An "Old Age Fund" is set up in the Treasury, managed and invested by the Secretary of the Treasury. This fund is supplied by a tax on all pay rolls, amounting to 1 per cent as of January 1, 1937, 2 per cent as of January 1, 1942, 3 per cent as of January 1, 1947, 4 per cent as of January 1, 1952, and 5 per cent as of January 1, 1957, and each year thereafter. The tax is paid by employers, but each employer deducts one-half of his tax from the wages of his employes. Thus in effect an employer contributes the same amount as employes. There is no tax upon that portion of a pay roll representing the earnings of nonmanual employes receiving salaries of over $250 per month. The tax is collected by means of stamps or coupons issued by the Internal Revenue Department and distributed through the postoffice system.

(b) Eligibility to receive pensions—Any employe is eligible to receive a pension when (1) he is 65 years old, and (2) taxes have been paid in his behalf for at least 200 weeks over a five-year period commencing before he is 60, and (3) he is no longer gainfully employed by another.

(c) Amount of pensions—Pensions are paid monthly. In the case of any employe in whose behalf taxes are paid before January 1, 1942, the pension is 15 per cent of his average monthly wage if taxes were paid in his behalf for 200 weeks, and 1 per cent additional for each 40 weeks over such 200 that such taxes were paid up to an additional 200 weeks, and 2 per cent additional for each 40 weeks above such aggregate 400 up to an additional 400 weeks. In the case of an employe in whose behalf taxes are paid after January 1, 1942, the pension is 10 per cent of his average monthly wage if taxes were paid for him during 200 weeks, and 1 per cent additional for each additional 40 weeks that taxes were paid for him.

(d) Effect of death—If an insured employe dies, before he has received in pensions what he paid in plus interest, the balance goes to his legal or actual dependents.

(2) Federal subsidies to the States for old-age pensions.

(a) Appropriation.—From general Treasury funds, $50,000,000 is appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $125,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated for each succeeding fiscal year.

(b) Allotment.—The Federal emergency relief administrator allots yearly to each State an amount equal to what the State and its local subdivisions spend for old-age pensions under a State plan approved by the administrator. But the Federal contribution shall not be more than enough to provide, when added to the State contribution, a total of a $30 pension per month to one individual. If the total Federal appropriation is not enough to match what all the States are doing, then the allotment to each State shall be diminished to that percentage which the appropriation bears to the sum of all allotments.

(c) Federal standards.—To receive a Federal subsidy, the State plan for old-age pensions must (1) be administered by a State authority approved by the Federal emergency relief administrator; (2) provide for contributions by the State; (3) provide a large enough pension to furnish, when added to the income of the aged recipient, a reasonable subsistence compatible with health and decency; (4) not deny a pension to anyone 65 years old who is not in a public institution and who has not income enough to live in health and decency and who has resided in the State for at least five of the ten years preceding his request for assistance.

(3) Voluntary system of old-age annuities.

(a) To augment the "Old Age Fund," the Government may borrow money by issuing annuity certificates to citizens of the United States who are under 65 years old. No such annuity is to have a maturity value of over $9,000.

Unemployment Insurance.

The bill is designed to encourage the Nation-wide enactment of compulsory State unemployment insurance laws by (1) exercise of the Federal taxing power, and (2) Federal subsidies to the States.

(1) Federal Tax.

(a) Tax on payrolls. Beginning as of January 1, 1936, every employer with four or more employes pays into the Treasury an annual tax of 3 per cent upon his pay roll. But it is provided that between January 1, 1936, and January 1, 1938, this tax shall be reduced to 1 per cent until the Federal Reserve Board index of total industrial production reaches over 84 per cent of the 1923-25 level, and reduced to 2 per cent until it reaches 95 per cent of such level. Commencing January 1, 1938, the tax shall be 3 per cent in any event.

(b) To encourage the enactment of State unemployment insurance laws, every employer receives as a credit against the above tax, up to 90 per cent, whatever he contributes to an unemployment insurance fund under State law. To allow for any State laws which might permit an employer to reduce his annual contributions by stabilizing employment, the bill allows such employer to credit against his Federal tax both his State contribution and his State allowance.

(c) Federal Standards. No employer shall receive any such credit unless the unemployment insurance law of his State (1) accepts the provisions of the Federal employment exchange act, (2) provides for State administration of funds through the unemployment exchange offices, (3) provides that all funds shall be deposited in the unemployment trust fund, (4) provides that the fund shall be used only for unemployment compensation, (5) provides that no worker shall be disqualified from receiving benefits because he participated in a strike or because he refuses to take work at standards below those prevailing in the locality, or because he refuses to join a company union or insists upon joining the labor union of his own choosing.

(d) Unemployment Trust Fund. All funds collected under State unemployment insuranee laws, in order that the employers in the State shall be eligible to receive credits against the Federal tax, must be deposited in the unemployment trust fund in the Treasury of the United States, there to be managed and invested by the Secretary of the Treasury.

(2) Federal subsidies for unemployment insurance.

(a) Appropriation. There is appropriated $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $50,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated for each succeeding year, to encourage the administration of State unemployment insurance laws.

(b) Allotment. Ninety-eight per cent of this money, or $4,900,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $49,000,000 for each succeeding year, shall be apportioned among the several States to assist them in the administration of the unemployment insurance laws. Each State's allotment shall be based upon its needs as determined by the Social Insurance Board, but no State shall receive any allotment unless its unemployment insurance law measures up to the standards required in order to entitle employers operating under it to a credit against their Federal tax.

Aid to Dependent Children.

(a) Amount. There is appropriated for mothers' assistance, mothers' aid, the home care of dependent children, etc., the sum of $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $25,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated for each year thereafter.

(b) Allotment—This money is allotted among the several States on an equal matching basis by the Federal Emergency Relief administrator whenever such State's present State plans for aid to dependent children's care are approved by the administrator. If a surplus of Federal funds remains after such allotment, the administrator may distribute it among the States on the basis of need. If the Federal appropriation in any year is not enough to match the expenditures of the States, then the allotment to each State shall be diminished to that percentage which the appropriation bears to the sum of all allotments.

(c) Federal standards—To be eligible for a Federal subsidy, any State must have a State law for aid to dependent children which provides (1) administration by a State authority subject to the approval of the Federal Emergency Relief administrator, (2) substantial contributions by the State, (3) no residence requirement of over one year, (4) funds sufficient to provide throughout the State, and when added to the income of the family, a reasonable subsistence compatible with decency and health for dependent children.

Federal Health Subsidies.

(a) Maternal and child health—An appropriation is made of $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $4,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated for each succeeding year. Of this amount, $20,000 annually goes to each State; $1,000,000 is to be allotted among the States on the basis of annual live births in the State, but also only on a dollar for dollar basis; $800,000 shall be apportioned among the States on the basis of need, and the rest shall be used for special demonstration and research. All apportionment shall be made by the Secretary of Labor.

(b) Care of crippled children—There is appropriated $3,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $3,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated for each succeeding year; $20,000 shall go to each State annually. The remainder shall be apportioned among the States upon the basis of need. But, except under extraordinary circumstances, allotments shall be on a dollar-for-dollar basis. All allotments shall be made by the Secretary of Labor.

(1) Aid to Child Welfare Services. One million five hundred thousand dollars is appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $1,500,000 is authorized to be appropriated for each succeeding year. Ten thousand dollars goes to each State annually. At least $1,000,000 of the remainder shall be distributed on the basis of population. But except under extraordinary circumstances, no State shall receive money except on a dollar for dollar matching basis. All allotments shall be made by the Secretary of Labor.

(d) Appropriations for Public Health. There is appropriated $10,000,000 per year of which $2,000,000 shall be devoted to investigation and research by the Bureau of Public Health Service, and the remaining $8,000,000 allotted among the States by the bureau upon the basis of need.

Administration.

(a) Social Insurance Board. A social insurance board is set up in the Department of Labor, with three members appointed by the President for six-year terms at $10,000 per year. The duties of the board are:

(1) To study and recommend social security practices and laws. (2) to make recommendations to the Secretary of Labor regarding the credits of employers under the unemployment insurance law. (3) to supervise and direct the payment of annuities under the compulsory old-age insurance plan. (4) to issue old-age annuities under the voluntary pension system. (5) to assist the States in the administration of unemployment insurance laws.

(b) The Federal Emergency Relief Administrator is charged with the administration of the Federal subsidies to the States for old-age pensions and for the care of dependent children.

(c) The Secretary of Labor is charged with the administration of the Federal subsidies to the States for maternal and child health, care of crippled children and the promotion of child welfare services.

(d) The Bureau of Public Health Service of the Treasury Department is charged with the administration of the Federal subsidies to the States for public health.

(e) The Secretary of the Treasury is charged with the management and investment of the funds deposited in the Treasury under the unemployment insurance law and the compulsory old-age insurance system.

Expert Opinion On Operation Of Social Plan

Answer Questions Arising on Security Measure Before Congress.

Questions arising under the new program of social legislation offered in Congress yesterday by the Administration and the opinion of experts thereon follow:

Q. Does the plan embrace both the manual and white collar worker who reaches the age of 65 penniless?—A. Yes.

Q. Does it have any of the characteristics of the Townsend plan for paying all persons 65 or over $200 a month?—A. Only that it carries provisions for old age pensions.

Q. What happens to the man or woman now 65 or over who can not be brought under the compulsory contribution pension plan?—A. The Government joins with the State in giving each dependent of this nature a total maximum of $30 a mnoth.

Function of Plan.

Q. How will the compulsory annuity plan work?—

A. A Pay roll tax will be imposed. The employer will contribute the same amount as the employe. The money will go into an "old age" fund in the Treasury?

Q. What employes will be eligible for these pensions?

A. Any employe (1) when he becomes 65 years of age, and (2) taxes have been paid in his behalf for at least 200 weeks over a five-year period commencing before he is 60 and (3) he is no longer gainfully employed by another.

Payment of Pensions.

Q. How are the pensions to be paid?

A. Monthly.

Q. How much will the pensions total?

A. The individual amounts vary. The first pensions to be paid in 1942 probably will receive about $22.50 a month. This figure is based on 15 per cent of the worker's average monthly wage which is fixed at a maximum of $150.

1. Does the young man or woman worker who will be contributing under the plan for a greater number of years get a higher pension on retirement?

A. Yes.

Q. How much does the increase total?

A. It is variable and based upon the number of weeks and the amount of taxes involved in contributions. Some experts place the maximum pension obtainable at between $75 and $100 a month.

Exempt Salaries.

Q. Are any salaries exempt from this tax?

A. Yes, those of $250 or more monthly.

Q. What happens in the event a worker dies before he receives in pension an amount comparable to that which he has contributed?

A. The balance is paid over to his dependents or estate.

Q. How is the program compulsory?

A. Through the Federal tax on pay rolls.

Retirement Plan Urged by Short

Proposes System for State Civil Service Employes.

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (AP).—Oliver C. Short, State employment commissioner, recommended a retirement system for State civil service employes in his annual report to the Governor today.

In citing the need for an "actuarially sound, mutually contributary retirement system," Short pointed out that the last survey made on the subject showed that 652 persons in civil service classifications were 60 years of age or older, 125 of whom had seen 20 years of service.

The only retirement system for State employes now effective is that for guards and other employes of the three penal institutions, Short said. They retire at half pay when they have reached 20 years of service, or 65 years of age.

There are 8,427 persons holding State civil service posts, the report showed. In the year just ended, the employment commissioner's department received an appropriation of $24,051 and expended $21,619.33, returning $2,431.67 to the State treasury.

Text of Roosevelt Message

To the Congress of the United States:

In addressing you on June 8, 1934, I summarized the main objectives of our American program. Among these was, and is, the security of the men, women and children of the Nation against certain hazards and vicissitudes of life. This purpose is an essential part of our task.

In my annual message to you I promised to submit a definite program of action. This I do in the form of a report to me by a committee on economic security, appointed by me for the purpose of surveying the field and of recommending the basis of legislation.

Praises Committee.

I am gratified with the work of this committee and of those who have helped it: The technical board on economic security drawn from various departments of the government, the advisory council on economic security, consisting of informed and public-spirited private citizens and a number of other advisory groups, including a committee of actuarial consultants, a medical advisory board, a dental advisory committee, a hospital advisory committee, a public health advisory committee, a child welfare committee and an advisory committee on employment relief.

All of those who participated in this notable task of planning this major legislative proposal are ready and willing, at any time, to consult with and assist in any way the appropriate congressional committees and members with respect to detailed aspects.

Urges Speed in Enactment.

It is my best judgment that this legislation should be brought forward with a minimum of delay. Federal action is necessary to and conditioned upon the actions of States. Forty-four legislatures are meeting or will meet soon. In order that the necessary State action may be taken promptly it is important that the Federal Government proceed speedily.

The detailed report of the committee sets forth a series of proposals that will appeal to the sound sense of the American people. It has not attempted the impossible nor has it failed to exercise sound caution and consideration of all of the factors concerned—the national credit, the rights and responsibilities of States, the capacity of industry to assume financial responsibilities and the fundamental necessity of proceeding in a manner that will merit the enthusiastic support of citizens of all sorts.

Asks Careful Procedure.

It is overwhelmingly important to avoid any danger of permanently discrediting the sound and necessary policy of Federal legislation for economic security by attempting to apply it on too ambitious a scale before actual experience has provided guidance for the permanently safe direction of such efforts.

The place of such a fundamental in our future civilization is too precious to be jeopardized now by extravagant action. It is a sound idea—a sound ideal. Some of the other advanced countries of the world have already adopted it and their experience affords the knowledge that social insurance can be made a sound and workable project.

Guiding Principles.

Three principles should be observed in legislation on this subject. In the first place, the system adopted, except for the money necessary to initiate it, should be self-sustaining in the sense that funds for the payment of insurance benefits should not come from the proceeds of general taxation. Second, excepting in old-age insurance, actual management should be left to the States subject to standards established by the Federal Government. Third, sound financial management of the funds and the reserves, and protection of the credit structure of the Nation, should be assured by retaining Federal control over all funds through trustees in the Treasury of the United States.

At this time, I recommend the following types of legislation looking to economic security:

1. Unemployment compensation.

2. Old-age benefits, including compulsory and voluntary annuities.

3. Federal aid to dependent children through grants to States for the support of existing mothers' pension systems and for services for the protection and care of homeless, neglected, dependent and crippled children.

4. Additional Federal aid to State and local public health agencies and the strengthening of the Federal Public Health Service. I am not at this time recommending the adoption of so-called health insurance, although groups representing the medical profession are cooperating with the Federal Government in the further study of the subject and definite progress is being made.

With respect to unemployment compensation, I have concluded that the most practical proposal is the levy of a uniform Federal pay roll tax, 90 per cent of which should be allowed as an offset to employers contributing under a compulsory State unemployment compensation act. The purpose of this is to afford a requirement of a reasonably uniform character for all States cooperating with the Federal Government and to promote and encourage the passage of unemployment compensation laws in the States.

The 10 per cent not thus offset should be used to cover the costs of Federal and State administration of this broad system. Thus, States will largely administer unemployment compensation, assisted and guided by the Federal Government.

Action of States.

An unemployed compensation system should be constructed in such a way as to afford every practicable aid and incentive toward the larger purpose of employment stabilization. This can be helped by the intelligent planning of both public and private employment. It also can be helped by correlating the system with public employment so that a person who has exhausted his benefits may be eligible for some form of public work as is recommended in this report.

Moreover, in order to encourage the stabilization of private employment, Federal legislation should not foreclose the States from establishing means for inducing industries to afford an even greater stabilization of employment.

In the important field of security for our old people, it seems necessary to adopt three principles—first, noncontributory old-age pensions for those who are now too old to build up their own insurance; it is, of course, clear that for perhaps 30 years to come funds will have to be provided by the States and the Federal Government to meet these pensions. Second, compulsory contributory annuities which in time will establish a self-supporting system for those now young and for future generations. Third, voluntary contributory annuities by which individual initiative can increase the annual amounts received in old age.

Proposed Financing.

It is proposed that the Federal Government assume one-half of the cost of the old-age pension plan, which ought ultimately to be supplanted by self-supporting annuity plans.

The amount necessary at this time for the initiation of unemployment compensation, old-age security, children's aid and the promotion of public health, as outlined in the report of the committee on economic security, is approximately $100,000,000.

The establishment of sound means toward a greater future economic security of the American people is dictated by a prudent consideration of the hazards involved in our national life. No one can guarantee this country against the dangers of future depressions, but we can reduce these dangers.

Effects of Program.

We can eliminate many of the factors that cause economic depressions and we can provide the means of mitigating their results. This plan for economic security is at once a measure of prevention and a method of alleviation.

We pay now for the dreadful consequences of economic insecurity—and dearly. This plan presents a more equitable and infinitely less expensive means of meeting these costs.

We can not afford to neglect the plain duty before us. I strongly recommend action to attain the objectives sought in this report.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The White House, Jan. 17, 1935.

Democrats to Act On Primary Plans

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Chairmen of five Democratic units in the twenty-first senatorial district have been invited to meet at Hotel Patrick Henry here Saturday at 11 a. m., to decide upon a primary or convention method for the nomination of candidates for the November elections. The meeting also holds the possibility of some sort of "gentleman's agreement," which existed when there were two senatorial districts in which Roanoke was a component part. Prior to the last General Assembly, Roanoke City and county formed the twenty-first district and they were a part of the twenty-second or "floater" district which included also the counties of Franklin, Floyd and Montgomery and the City of Radford.

In the new twenty-first district, the party chairmen include A. M. Bowman, jr., Roanoke County; Peter Saunders, Franklin; W. E. Bain, Montgomery; J. H. Cundiff, Floyd; C. A. Goodykoontz, Radford, and H. Sterling Winn, chairman of the Roanoke City executive committee.

Social Program in Brief

Federal contributions to the States to enable them to pay up to $30 a month to persons now 65 or who soon will be and are in want. To be put in effect in a year if possible. Government to contribute $50,000,000 next fiscal year and $125,000,000 annually thereafter.

A Federal compulsory pension system. First pensions under this system would be paid to persons who become 65 in about 1947. First pensioners would receive maximum of $30 a month. Workers now young could expect up to $100 a month at 65 as system develops. Funds to be raised by tax on pay rolls starting with 1 per cent January 1, 1937, and reaching 5 per cent January 1, 1957. Tax to be shared equally by employes and employers. Persons making more than $250 a month barred from this plan.

For all who desire, a system of Government annuity policies, similar to those sold by insurance companies. Maximum, $9,000.

States to administer the insurance and determine amount of payments to jobless. Up to $15 a week suggested by Government experts.

Federal Government to aid States with grant of $5,000,000 for next fiscal year and $50,000,000 annually thereafter.

Federal funds to be raised by pay roll tax of 3 per cent on all employers for four or more persons. Tax starts January 1, 1936. Will be 1 per cent at first unless business improves. Employers' contributions to State unemployment insurance fund will be credited against this tax up to 90 per cent.

Cotton Groups Seek Inclusion In Hull Treaties

Would Use Program as a Wedge for World Pact to Cut Exports.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Proposals were projected among cotton groups yesterday to make Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade program a spearhead to force acceptance by cotton producing nations of an international agreement for limitation of exports of the fiber.

The suggestion was made particularly in reference to the prospective trade agreement with Brazil, the most advanced of all the pacts under negotiation. Many cotton men regard Brazil's large increases in cotton production as a serious threat in the world market to the American planter in the future.

This proposal, if carried out, would embarrass the State Department trade negotiators because it would become the opening wedge for tying into the trade agreements all kinds of proposals in the foreign field that would be of advantage to Americans, it is contended.

Commission to Arrive.

The State Department negotiators already have been under severe pressure to include in their agreement with Brazil requirements regarding that country's indebtedness in this country. A Brazilian financial commission, headed by the minister of finance, will arrive in New York next week to try to work out an agreement for the future payment of the debts. Cables from Rio de Janeiro have been to the effect that immediate suspension of payments will be asked until the country can accumulate additional foreign exchange.

Meanwhile the Federal Tariff Commission announced that President Roosevelt had given his approval to a 50 per cent reduction in the tariff of $1 a gallon on imported beer, ale and stout. The change would become effective February 15.

The cut in the duty on beer was taken under the flexible clause of the tariff act and not under the terms of the reciprocal trade agreements act. It was the first use of the flexible clause since the reciprocal trade plan was adopted last June.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the Tariff Commission, said the question of whether the tariff on beer and other malt beverages should be reduced had been pending for more than a year. It was for that reason, he explained, that the matter was not handled under the reciprocal trade scheme.

Reciprocations Seen.

"I can not say that there will be no further actions under the flexible clause," he asserted. "But we are now concentrating our efforts on assisting the State Department advance its reciprocal trade agreement program."

Even though the reduction on the beer tariff was not on the basis of quid pro quo, Germany and Czechoslovakia, two of the nations that will benefit, are expected to reciprocate by purchasing more lard from this country.

Another development in the trade agreement field was the arrival in the city of a Belgian commercial commission to open with the State Department today negotiations for a trade pact. The commission is headed by M. P. Forthomme, former Belgian Minister of Posts, Telegraph and Communication. The State Department experts regard the Belgian agreement as the test of the whole program, since it will become the pattern for understandings with European nations.

Efforts to load up the trade agreements with extraneous matters have caused chagrin at the State Department and have contributed to the delay in carrying the program forward. Many of the schemes put forward, it is contended, are impractical. The plan to use the trade agreement with Brazil as a club over that country in agreeing to a cotton export quota was held unsound.

Key to the Situation.

In the first place, it is contended, this country is not making any great concessions to Brazil in the agreement. Secondly, the key to the world cotton situation, it is argued, is India and Egypt and any agreement covering these countries must have British approval. Since the English, as heavy purchasers of cotton, favor low prices for the staple, it may be difficult to get them to agree to any plan designed to raise cotton prices.

Meanwhile, this country went ahead with its limitation of its cotton crop for this year when Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace announced a national quota under the Bankhead act of 10,500,000 bales of 500 pounds each. Cotton planters now hold tax-exempt certificates for 700,000 bales of 478 pounds, issued to them last year and not used. Thus the total production is limited, without tax penalty, to approximately 11,680,000 bales of 478 pounds. Last year's quota was 10,460,251 bales of 478 pounds.

Mr. Wallace also announced that those participating in the AAA cotton program could rent up to 35 per cent of their base acreage to the Government. It is estimated that $130,000,000 in rental and benefit payments will be disbursed under the plan this year.

Too Many Legislators.

Big Air Force Roosevelt Aim, Board Asserts

Plea for Air Equipment Second to None Due in Congress Soon.

Members of the Federal Aviation Commission yesterday declared that President Roosevelt had given his approval to their report and that it would be sent, with an accompanying White House message, to Congress the middle of next week.

In his message, Mr. Roosevelt is expected to recommend legislation carrying out recommendations of the commission, which include plans to develop American aviation on a basis second to none, and the creation of a permanent air commission.

The report also recommends development of regular aviation passenger services across the Atlantic and Pacific, and increasing the number of Army and Navy planes to 4,000. Details of the commission's recommendations were printed in Tuesday's issue of The Washington Post.

Led by Chairman Clark Howell, sr., members of the commission discussed their report, point by point, with the President.

Meantime, Representative J. Mark Wilcox (Democrat), of Florida, introduced a bill proposing 10 Army air frontier bases along the Atlantic, the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific, according to the Associated Press. An appropriation not to exceed $190,000,000 was called for.

2 Children Awarded To Mrs. Kauffman

Court Order Also Grants $700 Monthly Keep.

Mrs. Sylvia B. Kauffmann, divorced wife of Philip C. Kauffmann, yesterday was given custody of her two minor children and maintenance of $700 a month in a decree signed by Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

The Kauffmanns were divorced in Reno, Nev., and Justice Letts, holding that there was no evidence before him concerning the divorce, ruled that it was bona fide.

Even so, he said, the children were properly within the District's jurisdiction and were subject to his ruling. He allowed the mother $300 a month for herself, and $200 apiece for the children.

Mrs. Kauffmann had filed suit here to gain custody of the children and maintenance. Justice Letts held that she was a "fit and proper" person to have them.

D. C. Returns $200,000 Of $1,759,000 Grant

PWA announced yesterday that of $1,759,000 granted the District for sewer construction, $200,000 is being returned as not needed.

It was explained $165,000 of the allotment for the Northeast boundary sewer and $35,000 of the allotment for the Piney Branch relief sewer will remain unspent when the projects are complete.

Brown Asks Aid Of Hotels, Flats In Crime Fight

Requests Reports on All Suspicious Tenants; Two Held in Vice Raid.

To further the war on crime, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday called upon apartment and hotel managements to aid police in the apprehension of lawbreakers, especially those coming from other cities.

At the same time, Maj. Brown announced that the drive against all kinds of gambling will include a harassment campaign against patrons of gaming establishments.

Meanwhile police were busy against the gaming element. In a raid on two second-floor rooms in the 1600 block of H street northwest, the vice squad arrested Peter T. Pape, 34, of the 2100 block of I street northwest.

100 Calls Received, Claim.

Pape was booked on charges of setting up a gaming table after allegedly receiving horse race bets by phone. At least a hundred calls from bettors were received by police during the raid, detectives said.

The squad also arrested Barney Susser, 35, proprietor of a grocery store in the 1100 block of Twenty-third street northwest, on a warrant charging him with "numbers" operations. Susser and Pape were released on bond of $500 each.

Brown's writen request to hotel and apartment officials read as follows:

"Information which we have indicates that there is a determined effort being made by criminals and their associates from other jurisdictions to transfer their activities to our city and no doubt intend to commit serious crime here. Your cooperation is urgently requested to prevent this undesirable element from locating in Washington.

Ask Reports on Tenants.

"It is therefore requested that you report to us any persor in the building under your control who appears to be of the type described—anyone who appears to have no lawful employment or income, or whose associates and habits indicate they may be living through criminal or other unlawful means."

In regard to harassment of gaming place patrons, Maj. Brown said that in the future everyone found in a raided gaming place will be taken to police headquarters in the police patrol. After the principals have been charged, each "customer" will be quizzed, booked and released.

"We hope to discourage the patronizing of these places. Most persons would rather deposit $25 collateral on the spot than be herded in a police patrol and taken to headquarters," Brown said.

Puerto Rico Strikers Cause Shipping Tie-up

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Jan. 17 (AP). A strike of longshoremen and stevedores yesterday, reported to have been effective in all Puerto Rican ports, today tied up shipping in San Juan and other ports.

Also on strike were workers in many cane fields, and reports that much cane had been burned this afternoon led Chief of Police Riggs to call out 50 reserve policemen for guard duty.

Played Out.

President Roosevelt was well advised to limit his World Court message to four brief paragraphs. There was no point in saying more. Everything that can be said on this issue has already been said over and over again, whether the argument be for or against American adherence.

Of course, to such a flat statement there must be some exception, and diligent research reveals that Senator Hiram Johnson did advance one new argument against the Court in his speech on Wednesday. This argument was the twenty-first birthday of his older grandson. If the connection seems somewhat abstruse it is no more so than most of the anti-Court rhetoric which for 12 years has reverberated through the Senate chamber. Memory runs back to the gorgeous purple patch of Senator Jim Reed:

> There isn't a man in this room, there isn't a woman in this room, who wouldn't give their son tomorrow; they would tear him from their breasts, they would set their teeth, close their lips, drive the tears from their eyes, to send their boy to die for their country, and you propose to turn its destiny over to a lot of foreign gentlemen?

Truth to tell, as Senator Johnson sadly admitted when he termed himself "a little lonely now," the preposterous campaign of exaggerated denunciation is played out so far as the World Court is concerned. We have a national weakness for flamboyant rhetoric. But the best efforts in this line become dull with over-emphasis. And the country knows very well that there can be no contradiction of the President's simple statement, urging adherence, that:

> The sovereignty of the United States will be in no way diminished or jeopardized by such action.

It is probably true, and was the most effective part of Senator Johnson's argument, that membership in the World Court will be regarded as a step toward membership in the League of Nations. But he should have advanced that argument at the last session of Congress, when authority to join the International Labor Organization was given the Administration without any protest in the Senate. Having already joined what is definitely a technical arm of the League, the case against the Court as a part of the general machinery of international cooperation is no longer convincing.

False Economy.

To read in one morning's newspaper that a mother and son implicated in a kidnaping case have been killed in Florida, that 65 persons engaged in a running machine-gun fight across three counties in Illinois, and that an entire parole board was abducted by criminals attempting an escape from a California penitentiary is a mournful reminder that this is far from the best of all possible worlds. In accepting the undeniable, society may find certain solace in its ultimate triumph over crime in each of these instances. In the San Quentin incident, however, grounds for congratulation are not at all evident.

Accounts of the prison break included the statement that the penitentiary was built to house 3,294 convicts but that it has been housing 5,747 recently, many of them desperate criminals with long-term sentences. Yesterday's news from California further reports that "overcrowded conditions have resulted in numerous disturbances in recent months."

Findings of experts of the type of Commissioner MacCormick in New York demonstrate that economy campaigns have been carried to extremes in the overcrowding of penal institutions. Here, it would seem, the PWA might be of constructive use.

A Hopeful Sign.

The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey has announced its intention to issue $10,000,000 of new capital stock registered under the liberalized and rationalized regulations promulgated a few days ago by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

When the revised forms appeared, Chairman Kennedy expressed the opinion that they would banish fears of indefinite penalties that have prevented the capital market from functioning under the Securities Act as heretofore interpreted and administered. He also predicted that a large volume of refunding offerings could be expected in the near future, but was less confident concerning the outlook for new capital issues.

In view of the existing uncertainties created by the pending gold clause decision, in addition to the other causes of disquiet concerning the outlook for business, the Standard Oil announcement is most encouraging. It tends to confirm the opinion that the new regulations have removed the legislative obstacles to new financing that had made it impossible to determine the extent of the potential demand for new capital. However, one offering is not an adequate test of the efficacy of the new methods of interpreting and administering the Securities Act.

Various reasons, apart from the prohibitions of the Securities Act, might explain a failure of new capital issues to materialize. But if the expected refunding offerings do not appear, it will indicate that more drastic action is required to satisfy those who maintain that the law itself must be amended to define and delimit the liabilities and penalties imposed for failure to meet its requirements.

The Social Security Program.

Although it is truly sweeping in nature, the President's social security program has been carefully worked out with unusual precautions to keep it on a practical basis. For this reason it will be disappointing to any who expected the Committee on Economic Security to work miracles. But thoughtful students of social problems may be expected to indorse most of the underlying principles out of which this policy has evolved.

"It is overwhelmingly important," President Roosevelt advised Congress in his special message, "to avoid any danger of permanently discrediting the sound and necessary policy of Federal legislation for economic security by attempting to apply it on too ambitious a scale before actual experience has provided guidance for the permanently safe direction of such efforts."

The program has been devised from this sane viewpoint. Unemployment "compensation" would be limited to a maximum of $15 per week after a waiting period of four weeks. Old-age pensions could not exceed $30 per month, with the Federal Government and the States each contributing half. The striking contrast between these figures and the benefits proposed by some measures under consideration on Capitol Hill comes immediately to the fore.

A conscientious effort has been made to work out a program that will be sound economically as well as financially. The unemployment insurance plan rests on an actuarial basis. Experience in other countries has shown that systems of this kind collapse ignominiously unless insurance principles are rigidly followed. The United States is in an excellent position to profit by this experience. So anxious is the committee to avoid injection of doles into the proposed insurance system that it suggests a public works program to afford relief to insured workers when their cash benefits have been exhausted.

Other marks of careful thinking on the part of the committee are apparent. It would have all unemployment benefits paid through the public employment offices established under the Wagner-Peyser act. Personnel of the administrative agencies would be chosen only on the basis of merit. The States would be granted wide latitude in adopting measures suitable to their local conditions, but the Federal tax designed to encourage enactment of unemployment insurance laws and finance their administration, would be uniform throughout the country, to preserve the competitive balance.

With respect to compulsory old-age insurance the case is not so clear. If the accumulation of reserves to pay benefits to the aged 20 or 30 years hence is made obligatory for employers and employes, it will add a considerable burden to that of unemployment insurance. Beside the fanciful schemes of the Townsends and the McGroartys, the President's proposals are extremely modest. But in a period of recovery care must be taken not to impose too great a burden upon industries that are struggling to resume normal operations.

The President's thesis that any system adopted should be "self-sustaining" is thoroughly sound. It is well to remember, however, that the imposition of special taxes with this objective in view can be carried to a point where it may defeat its own purpose.

A Game Of Chance.

If the numbers racket is ever scotched, local residents with a flare for gambling may turn to the District budget. An elaborate game of chance might be developed as the Budget Bureau and then Congress go through their annual procedure of indiscriminate slashing. Wagers that the school estimates would be cut by $3,000,000 or more could be duly made and accepted. Or the gamblers might bet on the elimination of character education, with reasonable assurance that it is merely a matter of chance.

Judicious reasoning on this subject has been so long overridden by blatant oratory and snap judgment that District residents have adopted a sort of fatalistic attitude toward budget making. The recommendations of the District Commissioners, who are responsible for the conduct of our local government, count for little or nothing. Even the Budget Bureau's unsympathetic advice is disregarded when the District's appropriation bill reaches the House. A few individuals in that body seem to find exhilaration in aimless trimming, and there does not seem to be sufficient interest in the House as a whole to halt their depredations.

The cuts applied to the local budget by the House sub-committee appear especially purposeless because they would leave a considerable surplus in the Treasury to the District's credit at a time when many community needs are pressing. In some instances, the committee's action would involve an actual waste of funds through the discontinuance or delay of incomplete projects. But some members of Congress find it extremely difficult to consider such problems from the District's point of view. Washington is persistently penalized because none of the funds spent here trickle into the broad streams of politics.

So long as this attitude prevails in the House, responsibility for upholding reasonable municipal standards in the Capital City will fall heavily upon the Senate and the President.

Unwarranted Meddling.

Secretary Ickes' attempt to impose upon New York City a personnel policy that is obnoxious to that municipality has far more than local significance. As administrator of the PWA, Mr. Ickes has assumed authority that Congress never intended to give him. If he should make a policy of asking for the dismissal of every municipal employe who may not be approved by the PWA, our whole structure of local government would be undermined.

The order issued by Secretary Ickes forbids anyone holding a municipal office to serve on an authority expending PWA funds. It is obviously directed against Robert W. Moses, park commissioner of New York City, who is also a member of the Triborough Bridge Authority. Mr. Ickes has admitted that he has no knowledge of any other official to whom the order might apply. His attempts to defend his edict as a sound principle of governmental administration have served only to intensify suspicion that there must be other underlying motives.

Mr. Moses' qualifications for the positions he holds are attested by numerous petitions to the PWA administrator from civic and professional organizations in New York. But Mr. Ickes refuses to recede from a position which he calls one of principle, but which from the objective view seems highly dictatorial and arbitrary. Petitioners are told that he has issued an order and expects it to be obeyed. If Mayor LaGuardia refuses to oust a competent public servant who has apparently incurred the displeasure of some official in Washington, funds for the bridge project and future largess from the PWA may be withheld.

Such unwarranted meddling in municipal affairs can not be excused on the pretext that it is a safeguard against wasteful expenditures. Its effect is rather to break down municipal responsibility and make city officials the tools of politicians in Washington. If there was any trace of reason for the original order, Mr. Ickes has befuddled the whole issue by insisting upon its application only where it would work to the detriment of the country's largest municipality. The episode is salutary evidence of the injury to local self-government which is implicit in any thoughtless extension of Federal powers.

Marooned.

There have been numerous books and stories written in which the plot concerns a group of strangers whose lives are interlinked in a central locale by some unforeseen circumstance. "Grand Hotel," "Transatlantic Liner," and "Delay in the Sun" belong to the category attempting to show what happens when the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker are stranded together. The late Katharine Mansfield, in writing to a friend, once said "what a story one could write about a train journey across strange country."

Now comes a news story paralleling this type of fiction. Marooned in a blizzard on a Colorado mountain pass are 14 passengers and 4 members of the crew of a stalled Denver & Rio Grande Western train. Steam heat from their locomotives is keeping the coaches warm and a path has been made from the train to Cumbres Station in which food has been stored for just such emergencies by the railroad company. Communications by telegraph say that the three children on the train are "having the time of their lives" and that passengers are "living like kings."

Such a situation is bound to intrigue the imagination. The passengers are warm, well-fed, and in direct communication with the outer world. They are not fighting starvation or death from the elements and their rescue within the next few hours is confidently expected. For the time being, they have nothing to combat but monotony and boredom.

It is interesting to speculate on the friendships that will inevitably result from this snow-bound party; the dislikes, the jealousies, the philosophies. In instances like this the Colonel's Lady and Judie O'Grady really become acquainted. For it is only through catastrophe that some people ever learn that snow, like rain, falls alike "on the just and on the unjust."

Don't condemn too harshly the man who lies occasionally. Just think how much more unpleasant he would be if he told the truth all the time.

No Pork Barrel.

From the Newark Evening News.

It is good to know that the Administration thus early has turned thumbs down on the aspirations of national lawmakers to make a pork barrel out of the proposed $4,000,000,000 appropriation for a public works program to care for 3,500,000 jobless. Fundamentally this is a relief program, but not for the relief of Senators or Representatives desirous of currying favor with the folks back home.

Congress can—and must, in the light of the Federal Supreme Court's "hot oil" decision—clearly state the principle on which this money is to be expended by the executive branch, and may delimit the spending as it pleases, in a general way. But any effort to determine it piecemeal would be downright destructive.

In dealing with suffering humanity, the time element is all important, involving quick adjustments to emergencies. No group of 531 Senators and Representatives is competent to deal with that. Were they to essay it, with the mainspring of their action to get Government money spent in their respective communities, they would only multiply many times the ineptitudes, follies and monstrosities of the average tariff act.

Letters To The Editor

Moulton Agreement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a constant reader of The Washington Post, I have been particularly interested in the articles by Herbert G. Moulton in your issue of Sunday, January 6, upon the subject of Federal attention to the purification of the water supply of the United States.

It seems to me this is a most important subject for consideration by all of our citizens. I hope the agitation thereupon may be continued and particularly that it may continue to receive the valuable impetus such as you are giving it in The Post. It is one of the crying needs of the day.

I thought this indorsement might add to Mr. Moulton's enterprise in the matter as well as your most valuable assistance in the cause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read with considerable interest the two articles in your papers of January 6 and January 13 by Herbert G. Moulton relating to the need for facilities for the disposal of sewage and industrial waste.

I believe that the insanitation and harmful effects brought about by lack of proper facilities for the handling of waste have been brought out very forcefully in Mr. Moulton's articles, and consequently the need for some action to overcome such a deficiency.

It is my opinion that a comprehensive program calling for the construction of sewage disposal plants throughout the country would have the following advantages:

1. Furnish society with needed facilities to end insanitary conditions and to improve recreational facilities;
2. Provide almost immediate employment, as these facilities, in many parts of the country, could be gotten under way almost immediately;
3. Would not compete with existing private enterprise, and thus would not disrupt existing businesses;
4. The proposed facilities would in good part have to be undertaken eventually, with the result that construction of them at this time would increase employment now and militate against overexpansion of activity during more prosperous times when such facilities are ordinarily constructed; and,
5. Could be made self-sustaining, with no resulting increase in taxes.

You are rendering society a most commendable service by publishing these articles and I trust that your institution will carry forward and lend its support to any movement that might be gotten under way for the realization of a program such as that suggested by Mr. Moulton.

Traffic Problem Views.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read with interest of Washington's effort to strike a balance between cruisers and jaywalkers, as reflected in your recent editorial on the report of Director Van Duzer.

With reference to the traffic problem, what good are laws that are designed to control resident drivers, if nonresident drivers carelessly invade? What good would 100 per cent safety do in Washington if nontested drivers from no-license States could cross the District line without qualifying under District laws?

It is a Federal problem—an interstate problem—like crime. Dillinger and Van Meter are dead only because Uncle Sam stepped in where the political subdivisions fell down. Highways slaughter and city traffic accidents will drop away down the very minute Uncle Sam takes control under his interstate powers. And until then, local and State legislation, totally lacking both in uniformity and enforcement, will simply increase the contempt in which all traffic regulation is held by the vast majority of drivers.

HENRY EDWARD WARNER.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It seems to me that the attitude of a great many people, including some of those in authority here in Washington, toward the parking problem and other closely allied questions, is entirely wrong. That a way will be found eventually to eliminate all-night parking and that daytime parking on certain streets will be more strictly regulated appear to me to be as certain as that Washington will continue to increase in population.

Washington automobile owners have been allowed to use the streets for storage for so long that they have begun to think that this is the primary purpose of the highways. The streets are intended primarily for moving vehicles, and their use for storage purposes leads to serious inconvenience of property owners and to actual danger.

In drafting any regulation to clear off our streets, a reasonable time should be allowed to permit the provision of the necessary facilities but a start should be made. If there is danger of a boost in garage rents, why not initiate low-cost housing projects for automobiles? Certainly, the majority of Washington cars are "living" under substandard conditions.

Daytime parking downtown ties up with the problem of Washington's inadequate system of public transportation, and the whole matter is so complex that it has defied solution up to the present.

Today, the appearance of many of our most beautiful streets is ruined by a solid line of dirty automobiles. We have given the owners of these vehicles too much of a "break" and, as in the case of the dole, it hasn't improved them.

I would not be without an automobile, but I do not believe that automobiles should inherit the earth or, more specifically, all the available public spaces in the District of Columbia. HUGH G. BOUTELL.

Transportation Dilemma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The race across town is to the strong, and to those who can "take it" standing up. No one would question this statement, scarcely, who has sought transportation along the Fourteenth street route to the Government buildings toward the end of the line (to be explicit—the Bureau of Engraving and the Department of Agriculture).

Why could not some enterprising mind solve the transportation dilemma while there would be many to applaud? It is certainly amazing what an intelligent, and, to a considerable extent, a picked class of citizens, will put up with in the cause of making a living. It seems as though cattle, even, would resent being packed into their storage quarters in the manner in which humans are crowded in this city during the rush hours.

Why does not someone offer a few suggestions for the enlightenment of the railway company, or, rather, make a few demands. What would the transportation systems of the city do without the patronage of the Government employes; their incomes would dwindle considerably, and the employes of Agriculture and other departments using these cars are legion at the present time. Some shift should be made for their convenience—now. J. B. C.

On Academic Terrorism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial criticism (on January 15) of "those who threaten to restrict the spirit of free inquiry among scholars" was splendid.

While the "plight of education under dictatorships" should not lapse from the attention of Americans, vastly more important just now is a concerted and well publicized effort to offset the detestable campaign being conducted by certain sections of the "rabble-rousing" press, and aided by the usual super-patriotic organizations, to terrorize and oust from American colleges and universities any member of the faculty who expresses views too critical of the existing social and economic order.

See Stabilization Fund.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Will the President let us know who lost the millions the Government made by change in the gold money of our country? If no one lost, does it follow that the Government made something out of nothing? If the public's loss was equal to the Government's gain, what benefit and to whom was derived from this speculation?

Symbolism Of Red Flannels.

A reminder of the lost virility of the American people is contained in the news that Grant Wood, celebrated Iowa artist, was forced to make a two-month search recently to find a suit of red flannel underwear. Wood needed the suit to add verity to a canvas depicting the old-fashioned Saturday night bath, as this rite was practiced in the '80's.

But evidently there are still in the United States a few solid citizens who cling to the ancient traditions of the race. Wood obtained the precious suit from a family in Minneapolis. That family, in turn, had just received it from relatives in Boston, who were removing to Georgia and had no further need of it. It is typical of the sturdy character of the garment itself that its owners, instead of throwing it away, should send it to a Northern city, where it could fulfill its destiny.

In the old days, when men were men and women could still bake apple pie, red flannel was symbolic of the grueling lives they led. Now men wear flimsy little things known as shirt and shorts, and the shorts (may the hairy pioneers of the West forgive us!) are colored baby pink and Alice blue. The women are worse. They are arrayed in gossamer bits known as panties, scanties, teddies and step-ins. Imagine felling trees and building log cabins in rainbow-hued shorts! Imagine caring for a dozen kids, toting water and wood, working in field and garden in scanties!

The Post Impressionist

"Madding Crowd."

Post Office, Friday.

Do you like crowds?

Some people do, you know. Anyhow, it is obvious that, if nobody did, there wouldn't be any crowds.

Certain psychologists argue—don't they?—that a fondness for crowds indicates more than a mere tendency toward gregariousness: that it indicates a genuine love for one's kind. The Post-Impressionist believes certain other psychologists might just as profoundly retort that it indicates misanthropy—because, for many of us, there is nothing like a crowd to increase man's inhumanity to man.

As soon as Nero began to reduce the Roman crowds, he began to hate all humanity.

It was not because the Post-Impressionist likes crowds that he mixed, the other day, with the Trenton, N. J., jam which sought to see Jafsie, of Hauptmann case fame. Sadie has no right to accuse us of crowd-love and petty curiosity when all we were doing was trying to get Jafsie material for our ravenous readers.

* * *

And then she goes on to a completely complacent and entirely modernistic condemnation of massed people.

She writes:

"In my college days, I was, I admit, a gay mingler. But now I find it much nicer to stay at home with a book, or a catalogue of flower-seed, and a tallish glass, or a flock of crunchy peppermint-sticks—and to sigh sadly over the crowds that prevent my enjoyment of public spectacles. I prefer to have my spectacles on my nose: reading-glasses."

Is she ironic? No, sir. For listen to this:

"Ah, those crowds! Mostly elbows and sharply grinding heels and alcoholic breaths and impatient grunts. Although I was a champeen female athlete, my spirit is daunted. For a while, I shoved, elbowed, pushed—and almost held my own. But, after a few recent and trying encounters, my heart yearns no further for competition.

"I am content with solitude.

"Mebbie my discouragement resulted from the scrawny lady who cautiously tore a large paper sack to make a foot-covering as a protection from coolish drafts stealing down a certain cinema-aisle. She ripped the thing while a neat little woman on the far-off stage made a headline speech that I wanted to follow with care . . .

"Perhaps the origin was two playful small boys who shot spitballs at the audience of 'Forsaking All Others.' It may have been the harrrrumping old man who cheered loudly at the wrong places during a rather recent National Theater performance . . .

"Sometimes I ascribe it all to the trio of fat girls who insisted on bobbing their heads across my line of vision at the Burton Holmes lecture. There re other times when I wonder if I am not subconsciously resuffering the incident in which, at another theater, I tumbled down stairs—breaking a high shoe-heel, quite breaking my heart and almost breaking my ankle—only to awaken, in the large and chivalrous crowd around me, a chorus of hiccoughing laughter.

"Or it may be that my indigestion really is getting worse.

"At any rate, there it is. Crowds are detestable. They are detestable no matter why I think they are detestable.

"There are only two benefits to be derived from crowds. And neither of those ever goes quite far enough to reach an intellectual being:

"Synthetic theater - applause would never fill the heart of the actor.

"Nor could there be a satisfactory substitute for the affirming roar of the pleased mob at the high-spots of any hero of the political rostrum."

That's the way Sadie sees it.

You can't have forgotten Sadie. She is that young lending-library librarian who recently wrote us an essay answering affirmatively her own question: "Are Readers Bovine?"

Now that she says crowds are even worse than readers, we wonder what it is that she imbibes from the "tallish glass" which she likes when she herself becomes a reader.

And we wonder why some people have to eat while they read—even if what they eat is "crunchy peppermint."

And we insist:

(a) That we are no fonder of crowds than Sadie is.

But (b) that we don't consider an aversion to crowds a sign of superiority.

However, now we have published her beginning, we shall publish her conclusion:

"I am not," she says, "advocating that there be straitjackets provided for squirmy audiences. Nor am I trying to start a general sshushing campaign. Not at all.

"I just say:

"Go on with your fun,

Laval Success Seen As Entente Prelude

Rome Agreement Points To Further Franco-Italian Diplomatic Collaboration.

By Andre Vulliet.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)
Paris, Jan. 9 (By Mail).

THE Franco-Italian agreement signed in Rome by Benito Mussolini and Pierre Laval is not the final act of a constructive play, but rather the overture of a new symphony.

"We must beware of exaggerated optimism," Il Duce warned, immediately after the signature of the accord. "We must not think that everything has been done, and that there is no more to do. Friendship must be continually cultivated so as to make it synchronize with the natural developments of peoples and their interests. Friendship must not be mummified in diplomatic protocols, but must be kept alive. That should be easy for our two countries which are marked with the stamp of a common glorious civilization and by recent common ordeals."

It thus appears that collaboration between the two Latin countries is not a definite combination on the European chess board. How close it is will be seen in future international negotiations and, among others, on the question of disarmament which seems likely soon to come up again.

* * * *

ALTHOUGH the question of disarmament has not been the object of a special protocol, the French and Italian governments have defined the interpretation they put on the declaration made by the great powers at Geneva in December, 1932, recognizing Germany's claim to equality in armaments.

France and Italy have agreed to consider German rearmament illegal so long as a special accord concerning it is not reahed between Germany and the great powers.

By this diplomatic document, France has implicitly accepted before Signor Mussolini to reopen the problem of disarmament which she had flatly rejected, so to speak, by her note of April 17, 1934.

The note of December 11, 1932, referred to above, was drawn in Geneva, after the first menace by Germany to withdraw from the League of Nations. It recognized Germany's claim to equality of armaments, "with equal security for all."

It is on that ground of "equal security for all" that France has based her refusal to legalize German rearmament. It is probably on the same matter, or rather on its interpretation, that the scope of the new Franco-Italian cooperation will soon be tested.

* * * *

FRANCO-ITALIAN rivalry for years has been a heavy menace in the European sky. This was particularly felt in Geneva, at the Disarmament Conference, where the delegates of both countries were constantly defending opposite viewpoints. Should Paris and Rome had been agreed on the general principles of a common attitude, while delegates from all nations, including Germany, were gathered in Geneva, it is probable that the Disarmament Conference would not have disbanded.

It also seems likely that if France and Italy had not been at odds on the question of the Four Power Pact, signed in June, 1933, by Great Britain, Germany, Italy and France, with the purpose of giving them a sort of supervision over European affairs, Germany might not have felt so strong to play her own game.

If the better atmosphere now prevailing between France and Italy can bring about real cooperation in the future, it will be of great help to the preservation of peace.

* * * *

AS a corollary to the Franco-Italian agreement, an Italo-Yugoslav rapprochement should follow. It is not always true to say that the friends of your friends are your friends, but France and Italy on one hand, France and Yugoslavia on the other hand, can not be on good terms without in the long run causing better relations to exist between Italy and Yugoslavia.

If pacts by which all central European nations will pledge themselves to respect each other's territorial integrity and not to interfere with each other's home affairs, can be signed, Italy and Yugoslavia will cease looking daggers at each other across the Adriatic Sea.

Moreover, it seems to be of the highest interest to Italy that France should not lose her influence in Yugoslavia, for the day when the Rome accords between France and Italy drew Yugoslavia apart from France, German influence in Yugoslavia would be readily felt. And Italy discovered in Austria last July that she fears Berlin's activity in central Europe more than she does that of Paris. A block of German influence extending from Germany to Yugoslavia, via Hungary, would forever bar Italy from central Europe.

France is not likely to abandon her policy as regards Yugoslavia and the Little Entente, but she hopes that a sort of triangular collaboration between Paris, Rome and Belgrade will be possible.

The rise to power in Yugoslavia of Mr. Yevtitch may make matters easier. The 48-year-old, square-faced premier has a broader comprehension of the European situation than his predecessor, Mr. Ouzounovitch. In a country where ministers have always been soldiers or clan leaders, Mr. Yevtitch is the first premier who belongs in the international class.

Better relations between Italy and Yugoslavia would quite naturally extend to Rumania and Czechoslovakia, the two other states in the Little Entente. This would by no means interfere with the French influence. French interests in that region are almost exclusively political as she does little, if any, trade, while, in the economic field, Italy is a regular purchaser from, and seller to, all the Little Entente countries.

* * * *

"To discard revisionism forever, would be equivalent to discarding the League of Nations Pact also, it would mean that no frontier shall ever be modified without a new war. * * * The day will undoubtedly come when certain injustices made at Versailles must and will be corrected by mutual consent. But, today, to promote a revision of frontiers, one way or another, either in a diplomatic way or by violence, either within or without the frame of the League of Nations, would be certain to cause an almost immediate conflict. Europe can not be remapped every 15 years. * * *"

With this year's Federal income tax returns you get streamline publicity, full ventilation of your private financial life and a chance to get in the bowl with the goldfish.

* * * *

The Treasury Department is sending out a pink slip with all income tax blanks. On this slip you give the main facts of your private business, just so the neighbors may stop guessing and get the truth.

* * * *

It seems the last Congress passed a law making America the snooper's paradise.

* * * *

The law provides that your income, deductions, tax, etc., must be made available for public inspection in order that the busybodies may have some good clean fun with practically no trouble.

* * * *

All the boys at the barber shop, fire house and general store will know your income, your deductions and what tax you paid and the comment during the long winter evenings will be greatly enlivened.

* * * *

And if you, too, wish to know what your neighbor says he made last year, you can run down to the local tax bureau and get the full facts together with an illustrated talk and possibly some stereopticon slides.

* * * *

In time Congress may pass a law requiring all taxpayers to appear in a newsreel giving a short talk on how they made their money and where they keep it.

* * * *

Newspapers will publish lists of taxpayers in each community and a complete lack of privacy is practically guaranteed from now on except during an underwater swim in a thick fog.

* * * *

It's going to be a picnic for the kidnapers, racketeers, stock salesmen and sucker list boys. No more hard research work and general probing. All they have to do is send an office boy to the tax bureau for the necessary data.

* * * *

Sitting around the village green wondering what Eb Whooziss made last year becomes a thing of the past. The village scouts can drop in at the tax office and get the full information together with a souvenir calendar, a cigar and a little dope on the baseball race.

* * * *

But why this pink slip business, after all, Uncle Sam? Wouldn't it be easier to have every citizen go before the radio and broadcast the facts of his private life over a national network?

With Carlisle Bargeron

Probably 'Twas Buzzie.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S denial that she caused the hint to be conveyed to Secretary Ickes that he should get rid of E. K. Burlew, his chief assistant, and Mr. Glavis, his chief investigator, has left the dear old Nation's Capital with a mystery about as profound as any it ever had. The hint was conveyed, everyone concerned seems agreed, by the White House. Mr. Ickes understood it, though somewhat tardily because of the way in which it was conveyed, and then reiterated his statement that Messrs. Burlew and Glavis were to stay, a very plucky thing for the secretary to do.

BARGERON.

Obviously, the secretary is to have his way. In fact, an increased appropriation for Glavis' espionage department is pending, mostly for increased salaries. It will apparently go down as one White House hint that was never taken with the identity of the hinter left unknown.

* * * *

The story in its proper sequence is this: There appeared in the papers one bright morning seemingly authoritative reports of the hint having been conveyed to Mr. Ickes to dismiss the two men. What gave particular authenticity to the reports was that they originated with a particular newspaperman known to be very close to the Roosevelts. In fact, it was generally accepted that his story was in itself the hint.

Within a few hours, Mr. Ickes said quite frankly that the stories were made out of whole cloth, that he had received no such hint at all. As he investigated the matter further he came to adopt a different attitude. He learned what was intended to be the hint. Thus it was that he later told newspapermen he appreciated their stories had been written in good faith. He knows the source of the hint and how it was intended to be conveyed. He has contented himself, however, with the statement that nothing was going to happen to Messrs. Burlew and Glavis.

* * * *

Following the publication of the stories the President also denied that he had conveyed any hint to Secretary Ickes. Then, following this, on the second day, as a matter of fact, it was made clear at the White House that there had been a "White House hint," all right, but that it was up to the newspapermen to find the particular hinter. The search was on.

It was assumed, of course, that it was an authoritative hinter, and Rudolph Foster, Pat McKenna and the many clerks about the White House were immediately eliminated.

Mr. Roosevelt's denial stood. This left the field of authoritative hinters to Marvin McIntyre, Steve Early and Louis Howe. Each one in turn denied that he was the hinter.

* * * *

The process of elimination in the search for the authoritative hinter narrowed down now to Mrs. Roosevelt. There the matter settled, although Howe was supposed to have acted with her. The story was that Glavis, in his investigating zeal, had investigated Mrs. Roosevelt's pet homestead project at Riedsville, W. Va., and that his report had been most unfavorable. This writer is yet to see, incidentally, a report on that project that has been favorable. It is known to be embarrassing to the PWA in its much more extended and more ambitious subsistence homestead program.

One can imagine, however, the embarrassment of the searcher after the authoritative hinter now that Mrs. Roosevelt has disclaimed any responsibility. And a White House hint that just hangs in the air would seem to be quite important even in a democracy and there are those who insist ours is a bureaucracy.

It seems a matter of serious moment to me that we get at the identity of the hinter with a view to maintaining the inviolability of White House hints.

It must be that it was Buzzie Dall, which suggests that Glavis in the broad scope of his espionage had been investigating Buzzie's raids upon the White House cookie pantry.

No End Of Books

Bessie Breuer Distills the High Elixir of Emotion in Her First Novel, "Memory of Love."

By Theodore Hall.

AT one sitting last night, I read Bessie Breuer's "Memory of Love," and I'm not the same person today. I don't see how anyone could be.

Miss Breuer's novel is not a long one, but it has an intensity which rings like a taut piano wire. The pattern of the story seems simple enough—merely the love affair of Julia and Alec, rising in the summer and crashing against circumstances in the fall, set square in the center of the stage between the shadowy figure of Julia's husband on one hand and Alec's wife and parents on the other. As in Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms," the relation is seen so closely and explored so intimately that it rises up into a compact, magnificent structure. More, its meanings stretch out and touch universals on every hand, and so it comes poignantly to the reader as felt and remembered experience.

Miss Breuer tells the story in the first person from the man's point of view. We see the courage of her imagination at once.

For she has taken as hero, nominally speaking, for this introspective, tortured, exultant and passionate story a figure very far removed from one you would expect. Alec Warren, getting on to 40, still lives in the Hudson-Valley-country-house affluence of his father's fortune. At Yale he was the Adonis of his class; ever since then he has basked in the luxury of a complete but nonchalant success with women. His ideal is the roving, pillaging, yet still earthily comfortable life of what he assumes the medieval barony to have been. Now, with fine old house, a wife put in her place, all the good Scotch he can drink, horses and stock to watch over, pheasants here and flower gardens there, and the handsomest profile in the county, Alec would seem very much the romantic and careless baron.

When you begin to think he is not an altogether pleasant figure in his egoism, the point of Miss Breuer's design comes to the fore. Like you, she has read the backwash of criticism against the idea of love in the literature of the Gay Twenties—she has seen Joseph Wood Krutch and Walter Lippmann hoist such novelists as Aldous Huxley and the early Hemingway with their own petards. More important, she has felt deeply that love in something else than that essentially cheap, ephemereal and niggardly biological sense is possible to the modern man.

So right into their camp she went and chose a hero whose record as a guzzling Lothario would shame the Gay Twenties' best—and then, endowing him with a somewhat surprising capacity for intense feeling, she lifts his passion for Julie into one of the most moving stories of our time. That, my masters, is a feat.

* * * *

"I could tell by the way she walked up the road that she was made for loving," is the strong first sentence in the book, when Alec first catches sight of Julie. She is a dark, rather drab but piquing girl who lives for the summer down the road from the Warren estate. She has sent her young husband away—"I was throttling him; I was ugly, possessive"—and with that extraordinary intelligence with herself she fights off for a while the attentions of Alec.

He, of course, tells her that "this is different." And astonishingly, it is. Miss Breuer makes us feel utterly that Alec, for all his habitual dominance, is swept forward and caught in the fabled coils.

"I imagined all sorts of marvellous ways of living with her and forgot about everything else. And everything I saw or did during the day was more amusing because I would think of how I would tell it to her and her face smiling with me. I used to talk to her in my mind and tell her about everything so I was always with the sound of her voice in my mind. And so I was kind and had a happy face on account of it and I loved my father and mother and my wife more because of her."

That has the gist of it, aside from the passion. And also it holds the Achilles heel.

* * * *

For when Alec's parents and wife banded together against the affair, and wielded the old-style weapon of cutting off Alec's allowance—dear me, how silly that sounds, though it is tragic enough in the book!—Alec folds up.

He had offered Julie marriage and the protection of money. He had begun to feel in himself a more tender, compassionate ego, a sense of the values which Julie, for all her capitulation, represented. And knowing that he was weak, knowing that he was cutting his heart out, he gave her up flatly, almost defiantly, and went back to his butlers and gardeners, his morning coffee in bed, and his endless scotch—"and everything is fine," he says, quietly, desperately, "as long as I am busy."

* * * *

Not admirable, you see, but with Miss Breuer's art terribly plausible. She drew him as feeling what every man feels, and relentlessly she saw him as weak just where every man fears to be weak. With more acuteness than we have seen in literature for some years she concentrates on love as an emotion. As a responsibility, as a fact to be thought about and related to mundane circumstances, it is allowed to break into pieces.

Let us back off a minute from the very beautiful pity and heart-burning of her book, which every reader will remember, which makes it one of the most impressive first novels in years. Wisely, she knows to the fraction of an inch the picturesque feebleness of her character. But all through the heart of her tale Miss Breuer is seeing Alec with a woman's eyes, through romantic lenses, in the glory of soi-disant, Adonis-like, exuberant masculine dominance.

That, I am afraid, will titillate some readers. But how Bernard Shaw would chuckle!

The officers are J. E. Kershner, president; H. H. Hawbaker, secretary; C. C. Musselman, treasurer, and E. J. Reichard, vice president.

The election of directors was postponed until Friday evening, February 8.

Franklin, On English

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

Yesterday I quoted a passage from a letter written during the last year of his life from Franklin to Noah Webster; and here I make another citation from the same letter, because it shows Franklin's interest in advancing the use of the English language, and his care for its correct use. English today is the nearest to an international language than any other in the world; and for two reasons: it is the mother tongue of immense numbers in all four quarters of the globe, and it is the second language of most foreigners, it having supplanted both Latin and French.

* * * *

But in the eighteenth century, this was by no means the case; and what Franklin hoped was that English might take the second position after French; even he did not foresee the tremendous growth of English that was to happen in the nineteenth century. He writes to Webster,

"The Latin language, long the vehicle used in distributing knowledge among the different nations of Europe is daily more and more neglected; and one of the modern tongues, viz the French, seems in point of universality to have supplied its place. It is spoken in all the courts of Europe; and most of the literati, those even who do not speak it, have acquired knowledge enough of it to enable them easily to read the books that are written in it. This gives a considerable advantage to that nation; it enables its authors to inculcate and spread throughout other nations such sentiments and opinions on important points, as are most conducive to its interests, or which may contribute to its reputation by promoting the common interests of mankind. It is perhaps owing to its being written in French, that Voltaire's treatise on "Toleration" has had so sudden and so great an effect on the bigotry of Europe, as almost entirely to disarm it. The general use of the French language has likewise a very advantageous effect on the profits of the bookselling branch of commerce, it being well known, that the more copies can be sold that are struck off from one composition of types, the profits increase in a much greater proportion than they do in making a great number of pieces in any other kind of manufacture. And at present there is no capital town in Europe without a French bookseller's shop corresponding with Paris.

* * * *

"Our English bids fair to obtain the second place. The great body of excellent printed sermons in our language, and the freedom of our writings on political subjects, have induced a number of divines of different sects and nations, as well as gentlemen concerned in public affairs, to study it; so far at least as to read it. And if we were to endeavor the facilitating its progress, the study of our tongue might become much more general. Those, who have employed some parts of their time in learning a new language, have frequently observed that while their acquaintance with it was imperfect, difficulties small in themselves operated as great ones in obstructing their progress. A book, for example, ill printed, or a pronunciation in speaking, not well articulated, would render a sentence unintelligible; which, from a clear print or a distinct speaker, would have been immediately comprehended. If, therefore, we would have the benefit of seeing our language more generally known among mankind, we should endeavor to remove all the difficulties, however small, that discourage the learning it."

Four Sue Railroad, $325,000 Demanded

Crossing Crash Basis of Action Against Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. was named defendant in four damage suits aggregating $325,000 filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday. A grade crossing crash between a train and an automoblie formed the basis for the actions.

The suits, filed by Jessie N. Heeter, of Cherrydale, Va.; Cora L. Fisher, of Potomac, Md.; Blanche I. Collins, of Rockville, Md., and Lillian M. Gittings, also of Rockville, charged the railroad company with negligence in safeguarding a crossing at Harmony Grove, Md.

The first three plaintiffs asked $100,000 each, and Lillian Gittings sought $25,000. Attorneys James C. Wilkes and James E. Artis, acting for the complainants, said the crash occurred May 3, 1932.

Physical Education Unit Will Hear Congressmen

"As Others See Us," will be the topic to be discussed by Senators Copeland, of New York, and Barbour, of New Jersey, and Representative Fish, of New York, at the annual conference of the District Physical Education Association at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m.

Instructors in physical education from nearby colleges and schools will attend the conference. Others who will speak include Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, vice president of the Board of Education; Dr. Estella Warner, of the Public Health Service, and Miss Bertie Backus, assistant superintendent of schools.

Past Masters Will Elect.

Salisbury, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—The twentieth annual meeting of the Past Masters Association of Wicomico County, A. F. & A. M., will be held at the Masonic Temple, Sharptown, January 23. Dr. Gordon Bennett is presdient and Charles L. Windsor is secretary-treasurer.

Trustees Reappointed.

President Roosevelt yesterday reappointed Warren F. Martin, Daniel J. Callahan and Robert V. Fleming to the board of trustees of the National Training School for Boys.

Laughs Fail To Stifle Townsend Plan Drive

Mail Swamps Congress, Mimeographs Whirr, Press Agents Use Church Methods.

By Elliott Thurston.

SOME years ago the then Senator from Missouri, Jim Reed, wrote an essay entitled, "The Pestilence of Fanaticism," in which he noted that Washington was the inevitable mecca for all the reformers and schemers who wanted to perform major operations on the body politic. He had particular reference to the professional prohibitionists, who, it may be recalled, were never exactly popular with him. However, nothing had occurred up to that time in the course of American history to equal the present invasion of so-called Townsend planners. Here is a phenomenon, which is at once grotesque and yet deeply disturbing.

The reason this grandiose plan for pensioning off one-eighth of the population at an estimated annual cost of $24,000,000,000, or more than double the entire national income for last year, has made great headway with easily deluded people, is because its advocates have adopted the method and manner of religious revivalists. Moreover, the opposition has taken it for granted that a pension scheme so preposterous would die of its own absurdity.

Unhappily it does not die. The eager-eyed country medico, Dr. F. E. Townsend, established in a downtown Washington hotel is literally swamped with an enormous and pathetic flood of mail coming from all ends of the country appealing for quick congressional action to give the $200 a month pension to every American who is 60 years of age or older. Senators and Representatives are being bombarded by similar appeals and threatening demands. Dr. Townsend's old friend, the newly elected Congressman from Tujunga, Calif., John Steven McGroarty, has already introduced the bill in the House to make the impossible dream come true.

* * * *

LEADERS in command of Congress are inclined to scoff at the whole performance, and reassuringly point out that the bill will be buried in the committee graveyard where brood the ghosts of innumerable gone and forgotten panaceas of the past. Nevertheless, the flood of pressure continues and increases.

Already many millions of unsuspecting persons have signed petitions for the plan—vastly outnumbering the veterans whose influence upon Congress is already only too well known. Some highly influential newspapers have even taken up advocacy of the scheme. Mr. McGroarty boasts that not a candidate could get himself elected this last time in California who opposed the Townsend plan. The gray little Representative, now 72, predicts that by the next election the same thing will hold true in a great majority of the States. At the rate the fever is spreading now his prophecy does not seem as incredible as has been generally assumed.

The difficulty is just this—that there has been too much disposition to take it for granted that the fanciful illusion of Dr. Townsend's Utopia will fade out because of its transparent absurdity. But the millions who have clutched eagerly for it are not able to see through it to reality. For the most part nobody is trying to enlighten them, and the Townsend planners go almost unchallenged in making converts. They have hired publicity men. They wave aside all the laws of economics and all economists. They hold their meetings in schools and churches and address their appeals to emotion, not to reason. Fervid oratory, painting roseate pictures of "permanent" and blissful prosperity, hymn-singing, flag-waving, all the familiar appeals to emotion are employed.

* * * *

THE politicians, by and large, have little disposition to shatter the hopes and dreams thus conjured up. Rather they hope the next fellow will do it, if necessary. Many members of the present Congress say in one breath that the whole scheme is too fantastic to be taken seriously and in the next they are becoming uneasy over its steady growth.

What Jim Reed regarded as monstrosities, put over on an unawakened, unsuspecting public at least had the merit of more or less rationality. His pet target—prohibition—may have been promoted by fanatical, evangelical methods, but the idea itself was not fanatical or irrational. It would not work, but it might have worked. The Townsend plan has just as much chance of working as a bill decreeing overnight that everybody in the United States shall be a multimillionaire. It would be just as possible to give everybody a million dollars for doing nothing as to give one-eighth of the population $24,000,000,000 a year for doing nothing. The difference is only one of degree. Both are equally impossible.

However, the Townsend planners, by ignoring all hard reality, robut projecting themselves into a dream world, whence they beckon gullible people, all too eager to believe, by covering it all with a revivalist fervor—have created a situation without parallel in the political annals of this country. Their amazing fantasy may vanish as miraculously as it arose—yet it is not vanishing. It is daily taking possession of more and more ready-to-believe minds. And such few voices as have so far been raised to bring the deluded dreamers back to earth have proved singularly ineffectual.

The phenomenon does not deserve to be exaggerated or to be cause for serious alarm. Yet it does deserve more serious attention than it has had so far. The Townsend evangelists are undoubtedly right in saying that they can not be laughed off.

Philatelic Society Gives President Card

President Roosevelt was presented with his membership card in the Washington Philatelic Society yesterday afternoon at the White House. The card is inscribed as follows:

A Distinguished Father Comes to Town to See His Talented Daughter Perform

Will Rogers Is Visitor to See Mary Play Part

Made Debut on Screen; Unfurl Your Titles; Theater Chat.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

That broadcast over WJSV yesterday morning was more than a little exciting—as such things go.

I mean to say that after I had speculated at some length on the probability of Will Rogers' being in town, he turned out to be here. The "Do Not Disturb" signs on Mrs. Rogers' and Mary's doors at the Mayflower were not a fake and everything came out practically all right.

This is something that seldom happens in the life of a morning newspaper guy.

However, we got the so-called "breaks" for once and had our timid suppositions corroborated by the authentic words of those who were on the spot and saw Mr. Rogers sign in.

A large list of pursuing admirers were on hand yesterday afternoon, by the way, to make it evident that the cowboy-philosopher—if that is what he is—is not without his feminine following. He was chased all over the place, including the Fourteenth street car tracks, by those who mistook him—or maybe not—for his daughter, Mary.

Is Well Repaid.

If Mr. Rogers flew all the way here from wherever he was just to see Mary act, he was well repaid for the trip, for Mary, to the way of thinking of this alleged critical intelligence, is deserving of better than she gets in her present vehicle.

Will, of course, is editorial competition, but he still is good copy, although not as good as he was back in the so-called "good old days," when he came to town to headline the first Shubert vaudeville bill in opposition to B. F. Keith's—a proposition that was licked before it started for economic reasons that did not concern Mr. Rogers' ability as an entertainer in the slightest.

It was precisely then that Will was starring on the screen of Crandall's Metropolitan Theater in the Sam Goldwyn film version of the old Sol Smith Russell stage sucess, "The Poor Relation."

That was in the days of the obsolete silent pictures, and Mr. Rogers has probably forgotten most of his anxiety over the failure of his inarticulate films to "catch on" with the feminine theater-going public.

It was audibility, which came along about 1926-27, that put Mr. Rogers on his cinematographic feet. Before that, he was just fumbling around, trying, along with Sam Goldwyn, to determine what might ail his pictures that they didn't do better at the ticket wicket.

The only thing that ailed them was inaudibility. Rogers has to be heard, or read, to be "caught." As a treat to the eye, he is nonexistent as a celluloid temptation.

Mention of the Rogerses, of course, entails thought of the other members of the cast of "On to Fortune," the comedy by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Langner, now on view at the National Theater. It is one of the most disturbing items of intelligence greeting the critical ears that Roy Atwell is intent on destroying the entire breed of dramatic critics by reason of their something less than ebullient chronicles of his Monday night performance. Mr. Atwell is said to be on the verge of taking the Washington dramatic editors on, one at a time, beginning with the only distaff commentator Washington is able to boast.

After Mr. Atwell has been "done in" by this charming young woman, maybe some of the rest of us will be able to take him on—provided, of course, that he can make the weight, which would be, roughly, but not too rougly, 98 pounds ringside!

Write Your Own Title!

One of the items I particularly wished to stress in these casual Thursday morning remarks was that Alex Yokel, the producer, and others connected with the premiere presentation of "Three Men on a Horse," in the National Theater next Monday night, are not pleased with the title of their Harlequinade.

It seems that there is something about the quality of this offering that makes it difficult to name properly as an exhibit that carries something of appeal to the race-track lovers among the men and at the same time conveys a little of the gentler appeal of an emotional drama to the socalled "weaker sex."

"Three Men on a Horse," as a title, is looked upon as a bit misleading from the viewpoint of the feminine patron who doesn't know a front-runner from a mudiark. It is also deemed something less than perfect from the point of view of the hasitual "handicapper." So write your own ticket.

Free Doings on Tap.

What I mean to say is that Mr. Yokel, the producer, has empowered me to say that for the first dozen—that means 12—best suggestions for a new title to his play he will award two seats each for the first night of "Three Men on a Horse," when it opens next Monday night at the National.

The decision as to which are better or worse titles for the play will rest with the Warner Brothers' Washington organization. Send your suggestions to them in the Earle Theater Building, preferably in care of Frank La Falce, director of advertising and publicity, who got me into this business in the first place.

Now then, cut loose your originality and let's go places in the matter of nomenclature—or haven't you an idea, either?

That wasn't a real snowstorm—it was only a flake!

Rotarians at Leesburg Honor Wives, Teachers

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—The faculty of the Leesburg High School and the wives of Rotarians were guests of honor of the Leesburg Rotary Club at its annual dinner tonight at the Leesburg Inn. John De Kay, of California, was the principal speaker. The music, in charge of Roscoe Rhoads, consisted of group singing and special numbers.

Among those present were Prof. and Mrs. Charles S. Monroe, O. L. Leonard, Mrs. Redrick, Mrs. Urcell Bradfield, Mrs. Irva Gloud, Mrs. Blanche Anderson and Misses Grace Jenkins, Alice Kerr, Elizabeth Potterfield, Sue Leith, Helen Hite and Nancy Lewis.

Week of Varied Interests Held Out for Capital

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

At the National Theater next week the stage attraction will be a new comedy by John Cecil Holm and George Abbott, bearing the title of "Three Men on a Horse." While this may sound preponderantly like a tale of the race tracks, it is, as a matter of fact, the story of a timid little fellow whose life is dedicated to the composition of greeting cards and the simpler things of ordinary existence. The play is produced by Alex Yokel, who promised to send along a company that will include such excellent mimes as William Lynn, Shirley Booth, Joyce Arling, Millard Mitchell, Edith Van Cleve, Teddy Hart, Margaret Mullens, Frank Camp and a long list of others.

• • • •

A varied and interesting program will be presented by Ted Shawn and his group of men dancers tomorrow afternoon in the National Theater.

Ted Shawn's associates are Barton Mumaw, Frank Overlees, Wilbur McCormack, Dennis Landers, Fred Hearn, Foster Fitz-Simons, William Howell and Hed Coupland. Jess Meeker, the accompanist, has arranged piano versions of many of the dances, and composed special music for several of the numbers.

The program, which will begin at 4:30, opens with a group of aboriginal dances, including the Hopi eagle dance, a Singalese devil dance, a Dyak spear dance, and a Maori war "haka."

• • • •

Paul Muni, one of the most facile actors on either stage or screen, will be the pictured star at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, in "Bordertown," the celluloid charade of a young lawyer in the West who goes slightly hay-wire in the pursuit of his career. Bette Davis is the feminine lead in this thrilling drama of courtrooms and cactus. The stage portion of the new week's bill will be headlined by Donald Novis, already well wnown to Washington audiences as the male winner of the Atwater Kent auditions the same year that Washington's own Hazel Arth was winner among the feminine voices.

Eddie Cantor, who may be spoofed on account of the peculiar conspicuousness of his snapping black eyes, the width of his smile or the pearly whiteness of his teeth, still is one of the screen's most engaging artists and will be seen, beginning tomorrow, on the silver sheet at Loew's Palace Theater in the title role of "Kid Millions," one of the most effervescent vehicles he has had under the managerial trademark of Sam Goldwyn. There is a Technicolor fantasy appended to "Kid Millions" that sets it apart from any of the light musicals that have preceded it on the screen.

• • • •

Walter Connolly, Victor McLaglen, Wynne Gibson, Alison Skipworth, Helen Vinson, Leon Errol, Walter Catlett and Fred Keating, are among the numerous principals who lend their distinguished talents to the diversified action of "The Captain Hates the Sea," an episodic screen of the RKO-Keith Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. There is a great variety of interest in this subject, due to the fact that instead of one continuous story, "The Captain Hates the Sea" sets forth the reactions of a considerable range of characters to a common circumstance. That circumstance, by the way, is enough to insure the dramatic effectiveness of a film that was surrounded in the making by all manner of catastrophe.

• • • •

"The Biography of a Bachelor Girl," is the new title that has been bestowed upon S. N. Behrman's comedy of "Biography," in which Ina Claire achieved one of her most notable stage successes. On the screen the principal roles are played by Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery, supported by Edward Everett Horton, Edward Arnold, Una Merkel, Charles Richman and others of note. On the stage, the new bill at Loew's Fox will present Alex Hyde and his novelty band with a complete revue in support.

• • • •

At the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow, the Warner Brothers are continuing the downtown run of that epic of the racetracks, "Broadway Bill," in which the principal roles are played by Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, supported by Clarence Muse, Walter Connolly, Helen Vinson, Lynn Overman, Raymond Walburn and others of the first rank

• • • •

Also repeating the initial hit of its protracted run at Loew's Palace Theater is "Forsaking All Others," the M-G-M picturization of the stage play in which Tallulah Bankhead celebrated her return to the American stage from England, which renews its midcity popularity at Loew's Columbia beginning tomorrow. In this lively film the principal roles are played by Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery and Clark Gable, with valuable support from Charles Butterworth.

• • • •

"Dashing Debs" is the ebullient title of the burlesque show to be presented in old Col. James J. Lake's emporium of undecorated art—which would be the Gayety Theater—next week, beginning with the customary Sabbath matinee. The stars of the proceedings will be Billy Foster and Leonard Kramer—which is about all you need to know concerning the comedy possibilities of the offering. Joan Collette is announced as the female charmer of chief note. And there you are!

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Jan. 18.

REGARDLESS of what difference of opinion there is concerning the year's best flickers, there is no dispute that the wonder picture of the year is Grace Moore in "One Night of Love." It arrived as a distinct surprise to the movie-going public and they welcomed it with much applause and many paid admissions. There is only one trouble with a successful picture such as this, and that is—how to repeat.

Columbia is now busy preparing the second Grace Moore picture, and they are trying to do it with a certain amount of secrecy. They don't wish other companies to know of their plan; also they would like to surprise the movie audiences again. This time, however, Grace Moore and the picture will be no surprise. They are waiting for it and expecting it. Harry Cohn, of Columbia, really knows this and, therefore, after many conferences and much thought, he decided that Miss Moore's second picture should follow the successful pattern of "One Night of Love."

• • • •

Grace Moore will again be an opera singer—that is a girl with operatic ambitions. She will again seek to sing from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House, and will realize this ambition. She will sing several arias from noted operas and one lighter, popular song, which will be written by Director Victor Schertzinger, who wrote the song, "One Night of Love." Schertzinger will also direct the new Grace Moore picture, which is tentatively titled "On the Wings of Song."

• • • •

This new flicker is not scheduled to go into production until the middle of February, for a final shooting script has yet to be approved. To date there are three scripts of "On the Wings of Song." Sidney Buchman is the writer now working on it. There have been and probably will be others.

The story concerns itself with a powerful night club owner and the beautiful girl who sings in the cabaret and has operatic ambitions. It wouldn't be fair to divulge too much of the story. Suffice to say that it draws its inspiration from an actual happening—the now famous yarn of Big Jim Colosimo, first of the colorful gansters, and Dale Winter, who was the queen and the toast of his Chicago South Side cabaret. Miss Winter, after Jim was slain in his night club, went on from Colosimo's to win the approval of Chicago as the leading lady in the musical comedy "Irene."

If you know that yarn, and switch musical comedy to opera, you'll know the plot foundation of "On the Wings of Song."

No definite cast has been selected to support Miss Moore in this flicker, but Leo Carrillo seems likely to get the role of the night club proprietor. Tullio Carminati will not be teamed with Grace Moore in the new flicker for several reasons. First, it doesn't seem likely there will be a role in it suitable for him. Secondly, he will be working at that time in another picture, "Two on a Tower," with Mary Ellis. When Carminati was asked by a friend if he was to be in the second Grace Moore picture, he answered just as if he were reading a line in a flicker. He said: "Let Grace make one by herself this time."

• • • •

There have been many yarns concerning the huge sum of money Grace Moore received and is receiving for making "One Night of Love." Miss Moore is reaping the harvest from that flicker now. However, she received only a straight salary for making "One Night of Love," and her pay for that flicker amounted to about $25,000. For her new flicker she is to receive a guarantee and 10 per cent of the gross. This means that if "On the Wings of Song" is as big a box office hit here and abroad as her first flicker, Miss Moore will receive as much as a quarter of a million for the picture.

This is part of the harvest referred to. There was also her recent concert tour, her weekly commercial broadcast over a national chain, which she will continue to do from Hollywood while working here. An example of her newly acquired popularity can be gained by looking at her contract to sing at the San Francisco Auto Show.

• • • •

She starts there Saturday and will play two shows daily and sing three songs at each performance. She has a $15,000 guarantee for the week. Her contract states that she is to receive all receipts between $46,000 and $50,000. Next she is entitled to all receipts between $55,000 and $60,000. Then her contract states that she is to get 50 per cent of the gross over $60,000. It is expected that Grace Moore will receive in all about $40,000 for her week's work at the Auto Show. This is more than she got for making "One Night of Love"—but it was only made possible by the fact that she made "One Night of Love." This was her song, and the melody lingers on.

Take a tip from Old Kentucky

—if you want straight whiskey at a price anyone can pay

Kentucky has always known good food and good whiskey. That's how the little town of Crab Orchard, down in the heart of the Blue Grass country, became famous sixty years ago.

And when Americans demanded good whiskey—straight whiskey—at a popular price—Crab Orchard met these demands so satisfyingly that it's America's fastest-selling straight whiskey today.

Capital Romps As Hardy Snow Withstands Sun

Fall Fails to Disappear on Schedule; Fair and Colder Due Today.

Donning mittens and galoshes, mufflers and knit caps, Washingtonians, young and old, romped and played in the snow yesterday, against a background almost completely white.

Predictions that yesterday's sun would melt the four-and-a-half inch fall, which changed to rain at 2 a. m., proved exaggerated.

It was slushy in downtown streets, but in the Capital's parks and open spaces sled runners cut swiftly down hillsides as coasting parties got under way as soon as school and work was done. Generally the sport was safe, and early last night no coasting accidents had been reported to the police, who, nevertheless, kept a watchful eye peeled for the safety of the boys and girls.

Snow Men Stand.

It wasn't so—the prophecy that the snow men in the back yards, with their funny noses, and the snow forts, with their milky turrets, would melt in the warm sun!

They held their forms, dripping only a little as the mercury climbed to a maximum of 43 at 4 p. m.

Skiing parties slid gayly through Potomac and Rock Creek Parks. Snow-laden bridges and trees set an appropriate stage for the sport.

Meanwhile, the snow put 800 men on relief rolls to work. They used 160 pieces of equipment in cleaning sidewalks. Forty-four snow plows were used in clearing District streets for traffic. They operated over 200 miles of streets, manned by crews from the city Refuse, Highway and Water Departments.

Fair, Colder Predicted.

The snow will last, in many shady spots, throughout today, the Weather Bureau said, in predicting fair and colder weather, with the mercury below 40 throughout the day.

Only one slight traffic accident was reported by police early last night, and automobiles moved slowly along the slippery, often slushy streets.

Meanwhile, the sudden cold snap chased a general snow, rain and sleet storm across the country, freezing highways and city streets elsewhere. The Associated Press reported seven persons died in accidents in Wisconsin, one in Michigan and one in New York.

Northern Wisconsin had ten inches of snow. At little Rhinelander, and at Ironwood, Mich., trains waited for hours before they could get under way.

From South Dakota, according to the Associated Press, warmer temperatures and more snow were on their way, with fresh snow forecast for most of the northern middle States.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

BAKER.

APPLICATIONS for positions at the new National Archives Establishment are pouring by the hundreds into the temporary offices in room 1131, new Justice Building, with the prospects of about one in a thousand producing an appointment. This was indicated in an interview with Dr. R. D. W. Connor, archivist, yesterday when he pointed out that the Archives staff would be "very small."

The Archives staff now totals only six employes, and will probably reach 40 when the magnificent cubicle edifice at the eastern tip of the Triangle is occupied "about the middle of the summer," Dr. Connor said. While he declined to say what the number of employes would be after the agency becomes settled, it has been estimated from 100 to 200.

Among the appointments already made are:

Dorsey W. Hyde, special assistant; Collas G. Harris, senior administrative officer, and Marjory B. Terrell, secretary.

Appointments are being made without regard to civil service law, as specified by the act of Congress which created the agency—"All persons to be employed in the National Archives Establishment shall be appointed by the archivist solely with reference to their fitness for their particular duties and without regard to civil service law. . . ."

"Congressional indorsements of applicants are desirable," Dr. Connor said. "However, appointments are strictly nonpartisan and are made rigidly on the basis of qualifications. I am also inclined to follow the State quota principle in building up my staff."

The usual number of elevator operators, messengers, telephone operators, stenographers, typists, file clerks, stock room clerks and other general clerical employes will be needed to maintain the National Archives Building, But Dr. Connor, the former head of the University of North Carolina history department, emphasizes that the bulk of the personnel will consist of specialists trained in the handling and administration of documents. He plans to draw many of these specialists from States which have an archives office in their capitals.

One of the first steps in the organization of the agency will be a survey of the location of archives which are stored in a variety of attics, basements and rented quarters in practically every Government unit in the city.

As we said in the first paragraph, unless a person possesses exceptional training in documentary work, his chances of employment at Archives appear to be paler than dim.

To the army of job-seekers (a large part of which already holds positions in the Government, but who are looking for better places) we advise keeping their eyes on the progress of the bills in this Congress for the establishment of an Old-Age Pensions Bureau (Administration, commission, authority, office or what have you?) and the Job Insurance Bureau, etc. They are both projects of huge proportions and will necessarily require several thousand employes to launch and operate them.

OFFICERS to lead the Bureau of Standards Local, No. 260, National Federation of Federal Employes, through another successful year will be installed tonight by one of the oldest NFFE members in Washington.

Lee R. Downs, retired from the Federal service during the summer after 30 years of work, but still an active member of Local No. 260, will induct the following officers of his union at their annual meeting at 710 Fourteenth street northwest:

Dr. J. Franklin Meyer, president; V. L. Rowe, first vice president; L. E. Barbarow, second vice president; G. J. Kramer, secretary-treasurer, and Miss S. A. Jones, recorder. All have been reelected.

Luther C. Steward, national president, and Miss Gertrude McNally, national secretary-treasurer, will head the list of NFFE officials who are invited guests at the ceremonies.

Minimum Wage Suggested.

A minimum wage for the Federal Civil Service was suggested at the open forum on the pay question by delegates from 16 branches of Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes. Henry G. Nolda, Veterans' Administration, outlined possibilities of a minimum wage, taking into consideration the entrance grade in the Postal Service and minimum wage standards in many industries. Dr. Peter Kiplinger, Agriculture, drew the following conclusions in his discussion of promotional opportunities in Government service:

1. There must be a definite promotion program, understood by all and based on a classification of all jobs.
2. Back of No. 1 must be a rating system tied definitely to accomplishment.
3. There must be a training system aimed at the position ahead, with the individual accepting his share of the training responsibility.
4. Selection must be made on a basis of record as shown by performance—examinations cannot be the determining factor.
5. The good of the work should govern, not the good of the individual.

Dr. Howard Edson, Forest Service, stressed the need of getting higher rates of compensation for work in the classified Civil Service with the objective of interesting specially trained graduates in the Government.

Dr. W Taylor Thom, jr., associate professor of geology at Princeton University, has been appointed special assistant in the Subsistent Homestead Division, Interior, as director of a survey of the coal mining industry.

Appointment of M. W. Bennett as associate director of modernization development for Colorado, with headquarters at Denver, was announced yesterday by Federal Housing Administration. Mr. Bennett, organizer of the Colorado State Employes Retirement Association, is a former newspaperman, having worked on papers in Memphis, New Orleans and Denver.

Commerce Credit Union will hold its third annual meeting at 8 p. m. Monday in room 2062, according to E. E. Schnellbacher, clerk. Election of the board of directors and committee members will be the principal business at the session.

Federal Bridge League.

Agriculture team in the Federal Bridge League continues to lead the circuit, winning 11½ boards out of 16 in this week's session at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Execs and Standards' XYZ also starred the same night with the same number of victories.

In Section A high pairs were: North and South—H. T. Wensel (P), and W. Bockstahler (C), Phychems, with .706 average. East and West—F. J. Hallauer and R. E. Marsh, Agriculture, with .648 average.

In Section B Treasury and Setbacks each won 8 out of 14 boards. High pairs were: North and South, Capt. and Mrs. K. T. Adams, Coast and Geodetic Survey, with .621 average. East and West—Rebecca MacBeth and Raymond Jennings, Setbacks, with .628 average.

Rotary Meets With Chamber; 400 Attracted

Fredericksburg Group Pick 8 New Directors at Booster Session.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—The chamber of commerce in conjunction with the regional gathering of the Fredericksburg Rotary Club held its annual meeting in Seacobeck Hall, State Teachers College, here tonight, with approximately 400 persons present, including many from neighboring towns.

Eight directors who will serve the Fredericksburg chamber during 1935 were elected. They were Benjamin T. Pitts, W. F. Liebenow, Claude Parcell, C. A. Abbey, Ray C. Hopkins, J. G. Harrison, J. J. Garner and Simon Ulman.

The Rev. C. Sylvester Green, of Richmond, spoke on the advantages of chambers of commerce to cities and of the work done by civic organizations.

Dr. Morgan L. Combs, State Teachers College president, welcomed the guests. The meeting was presided over by Ray C. Hopkins. Invocation was pronounced by the Rev. J. J. Ambler.

At an all-day session in Stratford Hotel today plans for an organization to advertise Piedmont, Va., or the section lying between this city and Charlottesville, were discussed. Advertising will be encouraged by the proposed Skyline drive route. A permanent organization will be formed in Charlottesville February 7, when five representatives from each of the towns of Fredericksburg, Orange, Charlottesville, Warrenton, Culpeper and Madison will be present.

Present at today's meeting were James A. Payne, publicity director of the Fredericksburg chamber and present chairman of the proposed organization; Otis B. Jones, Orange chamber, temporary secretary of the organization; L. R. Bartenstein, secretary Warrenton chamber; Dr. J. B. Early, Madison chamber, and Verbon Kemp, secretary of Charlottesville chamber.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Broadway Skyline

RAN into Mae West's hubby and manager, Jim Timony, last evening . . . He had just finished dinner, and his portly figure was sprawled comfortably in a wicker chair in the Astor lobby . . . His cane was beating a muffled tattoo on the floor, the rat-a-tat-tat suggesting that woodpeckers were perched on the balcony.

"See where you say that Mae and myself have split up for good," he chided, genially . . . "As a matter of fact, I just came on here to bury her dad. She and I talk two or three times a night over the long-distance phone."

The reddish-faced Timony shook his head sadly: "It wasn't like this when we only had coffee-and-cake money" . . . He shifted his body so that he could see the lights and the traffic on Broadway . . . "Nobody wrote stories about us then. But now, she's on top, and she's got to expect it, I guess. Why one writer out on the Coast wanted badly to appear in one of her pictures, just for the publicity. They cut him out of the picture in the cutting room, Mae had nothing to do with it. Well, sir, he's been rapping her ever since."

He was jiggling his cane briskly on the floor when I left . . . Outside the lights of Broadway sparkled and the horns of autos and the jangle of street car bells sounded in the night, but Timony, sprawled in the wicker chair, was thinking of the days when Mae and himself were making coffee-and-cake money on this same boulevard . . . They didn't have national fame or National City Bank deposits, but they didn't have headaches either, save an occasional invasion of the gendarmes.

Glad to see Paul Muni on Broadway again . . . Last time I saw him was at Director Mervyn Le Roy's bachelor dinner . . . Grand person, Muni, and swell actor . . . The reason? He takes his work seriously, but he doesn't take himself too seriously . . . Right now, he wants to get back on the stage before flesh-and-blood audiences.

Does the stage ever get boresome? "After 'Counselor-at-Law' had run a year," he said, "going out on the stage night after night to whip life into lines of dialogue that had become hackneyed and meaningless to the cast was pure mental and physical torture" . . . But now he wants to do a play.

Muni returns to the Coast next Tuesday or Wednesday, having decided to leave town before his new picture, "Bordertown" premieres . . . "I can't 'take' it," says Muni.

BEHIND the scenes: Some years ago, three youngsters started out from Providence, R. I. . . . They were going to be actors . . . One was a singer, one a dancer, the other was a juvenile . . . Most talented of the trio of youngsters was Bob Jewett . . . Next to him in ability, was Eddie Dowling . . . Third, in point of ability then, was Sammy White.

They were playing in New Bedford, Mass., one night when a policeman came backstage . . . Jewett's wife, carrying their month-old baby, had been killed instantly by a reckless driver in Providence . . . She was on her way to the hospital to visit her dad . . . The baby miracuously was spared.

Last night, Sammy White and myself visited Dowling backstage at "Thumbs Up" . . . There between acts, they told me the story and I was mightily interested . . . We were leaving when Dowling's valet stuck his head into the room: "Hurry up, Eddie," he said. "The Scotch sketch is on" . . . Dowling introduced us: "I want you to meet Bob Jewett, Ed," he said.

Sorry I wasn't at Tuesday night's performance of the smash hit Cole Porter musical, "Anything Goes" . . . The Alvin stage, as perhaps you know, has a revolving inset which permits rapid succession of scenes.

Tuesday night, something went wrong with the curtains . . . They couldn't get them to close . . . The audience, as a result, saw two performances . . . Stage hands walked into view of the audience, shifted scenery, replaced lights, erected scenes on the revolving stage . . . Actors, their parts finished, didn't even have to walk off . . . They just sat where they were, and the revolving stage swung them out of sight . . . The audience got a great kick out of it . . . So did the stage hands.

Times Square Items: The George Lott-Edith Collinson engagement, itemed here on Monday, was confirmed over the A. P. wires 24 hours later . . . Dr. Spangard, here with Countess Dorothy di Frasso to testify in the Bertrand Taylor, sr.-Geraldine Ott case, is a Congressional Medal of Honor man (his back was broken in a plane crash and for two years he was confined to an Army hospital) . . . Charlie Einfeldt, of the Warner outfit, denies that he will go to the Coast as H. M. Warner's assistant, but the rumors persist . . . Barbara Hutton and young Jimmy Donahue leave tomorrow for India and Prince Alexis Mdivani.

Fugitive, 'Out' 10 Days, Gives Up; Goes to Jail

Ardmore, Okla., Jan. 17 (AP).—After ten days of freedom, Floyd Jarrett, escaped Oklahoma convict, returned to prison today. Jarrett surrendered to Deputy Warden Jess Dunn, near Ardmore.

He escaped from the McAlester State Prison January 7 with Jack Newman in the automobile of Dr. A. H. Davis, prison dentist, who was released in Tulsa after being slugged.

Newman surrendered January 8, saying he had made "a mistake." Jarrett is serving a 25-year robbery sentence.

Strange as it seems, the almost fabulous price paid from time to time for rare old books is really not much of a price at all considering the investment involved and the interest that is normally expected on an investment. A striking example is the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's works, copies of which command a high price today.

They could be bought when published for about $5—but if you had one today and could sell it for a million dollars, it still would have been a poor investment. The same $5 that was paid for the book back in 1623 would have done much better at interest. If it could have been placed at 6 per cent interest, it would by now have grown to be a fortune of about $335,544,320, calculating that money at 6 per cent compounded annually will double itself each 12-year period.

* * * *

Caterpillars of the goldtail moth at birth always crawl in the direction of light and away from darkness. If one is placed in a tube, one end of which is light and the other dark, it will always crawl toward the lighter end — even though there is food at the other end. And there it will remain and starve to death rather than enter the darkness.

After feeding, however, this instinct is modified, and the caterpillar is no longer drawn irresistibly toward the light—a provision made by nature so that the caterpillar, after its first meal of new buds at the top of growing plants, can return to safer regions below.

Promotion of World Peace Is Greatest Problem Confronting World, Mrs. Pennybacker Declares

Absolute Equality With Men Is Forecast Eventually.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THERE IS a regal air about this little woman, with keen blue eyes and silver hair, who has been a power in the Federation of Women's Clubs since the turn of the century.

The moment you see Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, a former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, you recognize her as a queen among women, but talking with her you realize she is more than that—she is a philosopher.

Yesterday, as she discussed some of the changes in club work in the last three decades, she revealed much of the practical wisdom she has gained through her wide association with club women throughout te United States and Europe.

Has Three-Fold Mission.

Mrs. Pennybacker is in Washington on a "three-fold mission." She came from her home in Austin, Tex., to attend the board meeting of the General Federation. She will remain to attend the luncheon Mrs. Rooseveit is to give in honor of the Woman's Club of the Chautauqua Institution, Chautauqua, N. Y.

For 18 years she has been president of the Chautauqua Woman's Club, an organization of which Mrs. Roosevelt is a life member.

Also, while in Washington, Mrs. Pennybacker will attend the conference on the Cause and Cure of War.

Discussing problems confronting club women, Mrs. Pennybacker declared the promotion of world peace is "the greatest cause before the world today."

"And like all great causes," she said, "it is one in which men and women must work together. The adherence of the United States to the World Court, and, ultimately, its membership in the League of Nations, is fundamental to progress."

Having spent much time since 1925 in Geneva, where she attended a number of meetings of the League of Nations, Mrs. Pennybacker is convinced it is possible for nations to settle disputes without war, just as individuals settle disagreements without violence.

Scope of Work Cited.

She feels the woman's club will have a great part through its educational channels in continuing to promote peace.

"The federation, in fact, covers every phase of civic life," she pointed out. "The scope of club work had broadened in proportion to the broadening horizon of women's activities. Any intelligent woman, no mater what her interests, can find a place somewhere in the organization and through membership can become a more well-rounded individual."

She stressed the fact that the social phase of club life has never been the sole end of the average woman's organization.

"Women's clubs were first formed to promote self culture," she pointed out. "But while they have never ceased to be cultural, they have been enlarged in scope to cover all types of activity so that members may keep abreast of the times. I, for one, hope the cultural side of women's club work will never be eliminated (and I don't think it will) because love of beauty, art and literature makes one a better citizen."

Mrs. Pennybacker is convinced, however, that women accomplish more in club work by not diffusing their energy, by selecting lines of endeavor to which they are best fitted and concentrating on those.

Cooperation Emphasized.

She is enthusiastic about the part organizations have in the life of women, in training them not only in working together but in working side by side with men.

"In every great cause men and women must work together," she said. "The time has passed when they work in opposite directions."

Does Mrs. Pennybacker believe women would ever have absolute equality with men?

"Ever," she said thoughtfully, "is a long word. But I do think women will eventually have absolute equality with men, provided they continue to prepare themselves. I am convinced of this because I feel the majority of men, deep in their hearts, want to be fair to women."

She mentioned that the President had recognized the ability of women in appointing Miss Perkins Secretary of Labor, as well as a number of other women to high positions.

"The work of Mrs. Roosevelt has also served as a notable incentive to all women," she said. "I am thankful such a remarkable and versatile woman is the First Lady."

A Hero Worshiper.

Mrs. Pennybacker, her blue eyes twinkling, admitted she had always been a "hero worshiper." "And I have always been thankful that I have the capacity to admire other women," she said. "My admiration amounts almost to worship where such a woman as Carrie Chapman Catt is concerned. Certainly, we women owe our citizenship more to her than to any living women, and her work is not yet over, by any means."

Mrs. Pennybacker is looking forward to seeing Mrs. Catt when the latter comes to Washington to attend the conference for the Cause and Cure of War.

In talking of Mrs. Catt's many accomplishments, Mrs. Pennybacker (herself a widely known speaker) mentioned Mrs. Catt's ability as an orator.

"Appealing first to reason and then to emotion, she can sway an audience with as great force as any woman I have ever heard," Mrs. Pennybacker said. "And while leaders today depend less on public speaking than in the past, I think there will always be a place for true eloquence when it is founded on reason and is stated logically."

Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, as sketched by Violet Oakley at the Geneva Conference in 1927. A widely known club woman, author and public speaker, Mrs. Pennybacker believes women's organizations prepare members for more intelligent participation in public life.

Childhood Friend of Gen. Lee to Recall Kind Acts on Anniversary Tomorrow

Mrs. Anne Bannister Pryor Has Vivid Memories of Dixie Leader.

TOMORROW, the 128th anniversary of the birth of Robert E. Lee, will be a day of memories to Mrs. Anne Bannister Pryor, 2011 Kalorama road.

Mrs. Pryor will recall a day in her childhood when she was seated at the dining table in Chelsea House, the old Bannister home in Petersburg, Va. Beside her is a kindly man in the uniform of a Confederate general. He leans over and slips on to her plate his one piece of bacon—wartime allowance in this Virginia household.

Again Mrs. Pryor will see the Confederate general standing one morning in the parlor of her old home. He hands her a small photograph. She turns it in her hand. On the back is written "For Anne to ever remember her best, best friend, Robert E. Lee."

Many other memories will come to Mrs. Pryor of the great general who found time, even while conducting military maneuvers that were taxing his soul, to try to take the place of the father she had lost in the first Union raid on Petersburg.

Memories Still Vivid.

Gen. Lee's first visit to the Bannister home took place as the family group was standing under the weeping willows in the garden, where the body of Norwood Bannister, 16 years old, was being buried. The youth, who had enlisted at 15, was killed shortly after his father had been fatally wounded in the Petersburg engagement. Both had been members of a small force that was attempting to repel 1,000 Union raiders.

As Mrs. Pryor's mother looked up after the first prayer was said by the family rector, she saw several Confederate officers on horseback in the street standing with bared heads. One was Gen. Lee who, with several members of his staff, had come from Richmond to pay his respects to the widow of one of his trusted soldiers. Gen.

From that time on until the evacuation of Petersburg, Gen. Lee came to the Bannister home every Sunday when there was no fighting.

Christmas Dinner Recalled.

"Since we were on war rations," Mrs. Pryor said, "our meals on those days differed little from what we had on other days. Usually they consisted of potatoes, corn bread, coffee made of sweet potatoes and sweetened with sorghum, one slice of bacon each, and sometimes, not always, dried apricots or peaches, also sweetened with sorghum. Whenever Gen. Lee could escape my mother's notice he would slip me his piece of bacon until I learned to make mine last a long time.

"Never will I forget the Christmas dinner we had during that siege. Mr. Devoe, the French Consul, had come through the lines from City Point, bringing my mother a large turkey and other delicacies. Gen. Lee ate the rest of his dinner with his usual hearty enjoyment, but scarcely touched the white meat of his turkey. My mother started to ask him about this when he said gravely, 'Mrs. Bannister, I have taken the liberty of saving this helping of white meat with the hope that you will permit me to take it to Col. Marshall on my staff, who has been very ill and who has had nothing to eat but corn bread and sweet potato coffee.'

"My mother told Gen. Lee there was plenty of turkey in the kitchen for Col. Marshall, and she would be glad to send him a Christmas dinner."

As the war went on, Anne Bannister, through close association with Gen. Lee, had harbored the belief that he had lost hope. One night as she was saying her prayers she sobbed out, "Mother, I just know Gen. Lee thinks we are not going to win this war." My mother took me in her lap, big girl that I was, and replied, 'Of course, we can not win. We are starving.'"

Not long after this another brother of Anne's was killed in the Petersburg engagement. It was shortly after this event that Gen.

Visited Petersburg Home Every Sunday During Lull in Fighting.

Lee came to the Bannister home one morning and gave Anne the little photograph of himself she had once requested. She treasured the photograph many years, but several years ago, to her great distress, it disappeared from her Washington home.

In Mrs. Pryor's home, however, is one treasured Lee possession, the chair in which the general often sat when he came to Chelsea House. According to family tradition, it is the chair that both Washington and Lafayette sat upon when they visited Col. John Bannister during Revolutionary War days.

How Are Teas Given? Asks Girl Who Is Bidden to Her First.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am invited to a tea. As it is my first, I would like to know in advance how teas are given.

JANE.

DEAR JANE: If it is a formal tea, there is a servant to open the door for the guest before she has time to ring. Once across the threshold, she is announced to the hostess by the latter's butler or a caterer's "announcer." The hostess greets her, and, if they are old friends, keeps her in conversation a brief time before yielding her up to other friends in the company, or allowing her to drift away to her own devices.

• • • • •

At formal teas, the table is in charge of the hostess' own servants or of caterers' men. Guests make their way, singly or in groups, to the table and help themselves to chocolate or tea, and to cakes or sandwiches or both. If the guest list is very large, the individual guest may slip away after an appropriate time without again addressing her hostess.

• • • •

At more informal teas, where the guest list is still rather large—upwards of 20, say—a table is arranged in the dining room and two intimate friends of the hostess preside, one at either end, as deputy hostesses. Without introduction, it is perfectly proper for the guest to approach the table and ask to be served a beverage, after which she helps herself to whatever edibles appeal to her. She chats with the deputy hostess if the latter is not busy, but if others are waiting to be served she joins a congenial group elsewhere, or finds a seat and a convenient ledge for her tea and cakes.

• • • •

At informal teas, there is no rule against chatting with unknowns. At large general entertainments, however, one need not feel snubbed and neglected if one is overlooked. Occasionally among such guest lists there are kindly, cordial, relaxed persons who are quick to sense the discomfiture of the comparative stranger and equally quick to put her at ease. But such consideration among guests is not decreed and, hence, not always forthcoming.

• • • •

If the tea is just an everyday, afternoon affair with the hostess who has bid you, it will be served from a small table in front of the hostess in the living room. Those sitting near the hostess extend their hands to receive their tea from her. If other women guests are seated out of reach, and a man is present, he, of course, rises and acts as "go-between."

• • • •

If all the guests are women, those seated farther away get up and go to the hostess for their servings, making as many trips as are necessary to carry to their places the tea, the plate and napkin, the cake and sandwiches, the muffins and jam, or whatever the hostess is serving with tea that afternoon. Usually a small table is beside each chair, to accommodate the individual's tea equipment. M. H.

Battle Lines Are Drawn For Federation Election

THE GENERAL Federation of Women's Clubs, largest organization of women in the United States, is getting ready for another of its ultra-conservative, ladylike elections.

Although the actual balloting will not take place until June at the federation's triennial convention in Detroit, candidates are already waging their customary preliminary campaigns. They offer no platforms, hold no rallies, make no political promises and never even hint at patronage. All they can do is drag out their past accomplishments and look as pleasant as possible so the voters will be impressed with their personality.

At the midwinter board meeting, now in session here, there's a good deal of talk, mostly sotto voce, of course, about the probable outcome of the June voting. The two candidates most frequently mentioned are those running for the presidency—Dr. Josephine L. Peirce and Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson.

Dr. Peirce is generally conceded a distinct edge over her opponent.

High in Federation Affairs.

Both are already high in federation affairs. They couldn't be candidates otherwise. It takes a long, steady climb to get anywhere near the top of the organization. Dr. Peirce is second vice president. Mrs. Lawson is first vice president. Both are past presidents of their State federations.

Dr. Peirce, whose home is Lima, Ohio, is pretty and white-haired. Her bird-like animation makes her seem even smaller than she really is. She has been active in club affairs for 25 years, belongs to the Presbyterian Church, the Eastern Star and the Y. W. C. A.; was the only woman appointed to the Ohio Relief Commission in 1934 by Gov. George White.

She once taught school in Iowa. Later she was graduated from the Still College of Osteopathy. That's where she got the title of doctor. She also attended the Northwestern Conservatory of Music, learned to play the piano and violin with at least average skill.

Dr. Peirce takes pride in her ability as a homemaker and chats happily about her children. The son, Louis, is an attorney in Cleveland. The daughter, Josephine, is a Wellesley graduate.

Mrs. Lawson is a rather large, handsome brunette. She was reared in Oklahoma and is considered by that State one of its foremost women. Her education has been largely along cultural lines. She studied music under Scharwenka and frequently gives programs of Indian music. Her museum of American Indian history, from the mound builders to the present, is one of the most extensive in the country.

Mrs. Lawson is a member of the D. A. R. and of the U. D. C., and she is a Presbyterian. She is a trustee of the University of Tulsa and is serving on Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's committee for the 1934 Mobilization of Human Needs. She also served on the 1933 mobilization committee.

Before she was elected to the first vice presidency of the federation three years ago she served two terms as second vice president. One of her greatest interests outside club work is her young grandson. Mrs. Lawson is a widow.

Although most of the women at the federation's midwinter board meeting are more than willing to talk about the coming election and to prophesy the outcome, neither Dr. Peirce nor Mrs. Lawson has much to say on the subject. Each works rather hard to give the impression she is sure her opponent will win. Meanwhile, they are sharing the same room at federation headquarters, 1734 N street northwest.

Wives of Senators and Representatives from Oklahoma are showing their approval of Mrs. Lawson for the federation's presidency by giving a tea in her honor today at the Mayflower.

Dr. Peirce was honored Wednesday night when a group of Ohio women, headed by Mrs. Robert Bulkley and Mrs. Wilson Compton, gave a reception and buffet supper at the Sulgrave Club. Mrs. William Howard Taft was in the receiving line.

What TODAY Means

"Capricorn."

IF JANUARY 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 5:45 to 7:45 p. m.

Stubbornness on this January 18 had better give way to reasonableness, if a great deal of unnecessary trouble is to be avoided. The wise man or woman will be open to advice or suggestions of a constructive nature. Business results will largely depend on the amount of enthusiasm you put into your work.

If a woman and January 18 is your birthday, you are instinctively of a religious nature, but your love for social activities may demand so much of your time you probably do not devote much serious thought to theological subjects.

If a man and January 18 is your natal day, you have the ability to recognize and correct your own faults. Your ambition will spur you on until you succeed, in spite of obstacles. Marriage should prove a great help to your career. Writing, educational, engineering or official work of an executive type are probably lines of activity that offer you the best opportunities.

A Dry Shampoo Offers Boon as Hair Cleanser

Last-Minute Lifesaver in in Vogue for Hurried Engagements.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

POWDERING the hair is again the vogue. This time, however, the powder is a coarse-grained dry shampoo that does miraculous things.

You simply sprinkle a bit of it over your head. When it's brushed out you find that your hair is light, fluffy, and thoroughly cleansed.

Discriminating women have found that this dry shampoo is a last-minute lifesaver. It rescues them from the embarrassment of filling hurried engagements with limp, straggly hair. Every woman knows that dread feeling of realizing that there isn't time before the party for a shampoo. It seems there is nothing she can do but make the best of a bad situation. But there is! With the help of this powdery shampoo she can give life and sparkle to her oily locks and rest with the assurance she is living up to her standards of grooming.

Now that the reason for colds is in full force, many women fear to wash their hair lest they precipitate illness. If they have dry shampoos, they are free from worry. These are harmless and efficient.

The coarse grains of the powder absorb the oil and dust. Consequently, when you brush these out—and it's a very simple procedure—you are giving your hair a good cleansing.

Graduation Dresses Offered.

Little girl graduates who are scanning the town for simple and apppropriate white frocks need look no further than a certain downtown store. Here have been received a large stock of graduation dresses which are all that can be desired. Most of these are made in the plain shirtmaker style. Those on display are white but others are available in pastel colors.

They come in sizes from 11 to 17 and range in price from $7.95 to $12.95.

At last a certain well-known beauty expert has succumbed to the demand of her customers for small-sized jars of a certain invigorating, delightful mask. Hitherto this popular product was only for use in her salons but demand necessitated her selling it in individual packages.

It's a white, creamy substance with a delicate fragrance. You spread it over your face and then lie back in relaxation until all the moisture has gone. Then you remove it with cold water. When you peer into the mirror to note the effect you'll be delightfully surprised. So many masks are disappointments. They sound marvelous but they just don't do all they're said to. This one does, however. It clears your skin and sets it tingling. Your face will look as fresh as a daisy and have a healthful glow.

You'll enjoy using it when you come home late from work and feel too tired to move a muscle. After its application you'll forget your weariness and want to start out early and stay out late.

Blouses Flatter Figure.

Rayon taffeta plaid blouses are luring feminine shoppers to their display counter in a downtown store. The blouses, in their striking and vividly colored patterns, are ideal for small, thin women. They make them seem less thin and are infinitely flattering to the figure. But alas, they multiply the size of the stout women, and yet, strangely enough, you'll find them favorites with the overweight.

Roll Your Own Poppies.

A local shop invites you to "roll your own" California poppy. There is a woman here who shows you how it's done. You take one of the prepared packs containing all that's needed for a bunch of poppies and proceed according to her directions. You arrange the petals, attach the centers and the stems, and finally the leaves. Your model looks rather drab. But she shows you how a turn of this and a ruffling-up of that transforms your poor posy into a large, curly petaled poppy.

Small Atomizers Useful.

Dram-sized atomizers cost only 25 cents. They are cut glass and fill a very special need. Frequently you buy small bottles of perfume and you find when you pour it into your large atomizer that it doesn't reach the hollow tube and therefore will not spray. These atomizers, however, are especially adapted to small amounts and never fail to work.

A certain perfume house has a popular dollar package which contains a bottle of perfume and a small bouquet for your coat. This has been reduced to 49 cents and is a nice buy for the money.

Sale of Hairbrushes.

A Twelfth street shop is having a sale of hairbrushes which probably will last for another week or two. Here you'll find those delightfully easy-to-keep-clean aluminum brushes which sell for $2, reduced to $1.59. Or if your bargain must boast still smaller figures you'll find an excellent stiff bristled brush, usually $1, now 59 cents.

Dunking Will Become a Lost Art If Doughnuts Are Properly Made

Real doughnuts—the kind grandmother used to make—large and round, tender within and crispy with crust and granulated sugar without. Try them with fruit and coffee for Sunday morning breakfast and see if they won't beco me a family tradition.

Crunchy, Spongy Ones Seldom Bathed in Coffee.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THERE WON'T be any dunking doughnuts in the coffee if the doughnuts are really right. First, last and always, a doughnut should be a large piece of dough with a hole in the center—well, big enough at least to make a good handful. The inside should have a spongy tenderness and the outside a crisp brownness, made crunchier by the generous addition of a coating of granulated sugar. The effect of this delicate morsel, when clamped between the teeth, should provide shuch a provoking thrill as to make the well-known custom of dunking fade forever into oblivion.

If your coffee is good but your doughnuts poor leathery bits of dried-out dough, it stands to reason that the latter must be submissive and take their plunge into the dark brown contents of the cup. If, however, the doughnuts are up to snuff, they will stand on their own merits and coffee will revert to its natural place, that of a mighty good accompaniment.

Before you scold your husband or rap the children's fingers for the sometimes justifiable practice of dunking, look into this matter of doughnuts and how they should be made. If you haven't a recipe that will withstand the dunking versus crunching test, here is one that has passed the taste test with a 100 per cent plus.

Raised Doughnuts.

1 cup milk
¾ cup flour
1 cake of compressed yeast.

Heat the milk to scalding and cool to lukewarm. Crumble the yeast into the milk, add the flour, then beat to a smooth batter. Let rise until very light and full of bubbles. Then add:

1 cup sugar
1 cup butter
1 cup scalded milk, cooled to warm
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1½ pounds of flour (about 6 cups)
2 beaten eggs.

The sugar and butter may be added to the scalded milk, or they may be creamed together and added. Add the beaten eggs, then sift salt, nutmeg and flour together and add to make a soft dough. Knead lightly and set to rise. When double in bulk, roll to about half-inch thick and cut with a large doughnut cutter. Arrange on a floured surface and let rise until very light. Fry in deep fat (375 degrees F.) to a golden brown. Dredge in granulated sugar.

In making raised doughnuts it is important to let them rise until about double in size. When lowering the doughnuts into the fat, place the raised side down in the hot fat. This permits the under side to rise.

If you haven't any great food traditions in your family, doughnuts by the above recipe, served for Sunday breakfast will be immediately adopted as a weekly event. Serve grapefruit halves, with a slight sprinkling of sugar and a few drops of sherry, a cold cereal with cream, plus the doughnuts with coffee and hot chocolate for the youngsters.

Saturday Dinner.

Beef Bouillon
Ham Loaf With Mustard Sauce
Steamed Rice French Green Beans
Celery Curls Bread and Butter
Snow Pudding
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Dinner.

Fresh Shrimp Cocktail
Pot Roast of Beef with Pan Browned Potatoes and Carrots
Romaine and Orange Salad With French Dressing
Caramel Custard with Whipped Cream
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Supper.

Cream of Asparagus Soup
Banana and Nut Salad With Boiled Salad Dressing Old-Fashioned Jelly Roll
Tea Milk (for children)

Ham Loaf.

2 pounds of ground pork.
1 pound of ground, cured ham
1 beaten egg
1 cupful of bread crumbs
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons of canned tomato soup
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon salt.

Mix the above ingredients together. Shape into a loaf, place in a pan, and slice 1 medium-size onion over the top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1½ hours, basting occasionally with a few tablespoons of hot water.

Mustard Sauce.

½ cup of tomato soup
½ cup prepared salad Mustard
3 egg yolks beaten
½ cup vinegar
½ cup sugar
½ cup fat

Cook in double boiler until thick.

Governor Is Expert At Scrambling Eggs

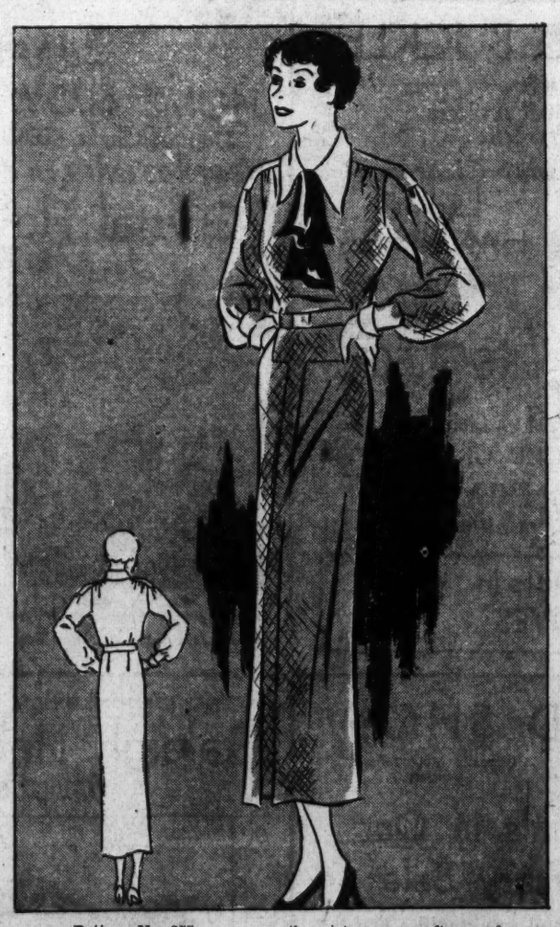
One of the Governor's first official acts on moving into the executive mansion at Raleigh was to teach the chef how to scramble his eggs. Here's the system:

Break the egg in a dish, beat it well, apply butter liberally and only butter, and cook it quickly on a hot griddle."

Soft Shirtwaist Dress Gains Favor for Versatile Uses



Pattern No. 855.

THE SHIRTWAIST dress is coming to town this spring, in new softer versions that make it more versatile. Originally limited to strictly tailored types for active sports or country wear, the new models gain formality with soft details and more formal fabrics.

Here, for example, is a charming gown, combining the casual simplicity of the shirtwaist dress with the picturesque softness of peasant shirring at the shoulder and graceful full sleeves. In a light wool or a tailored print it is ideal for business or runabout wear in town. The pattern comes in sizes 14 to 42 and is only one of many new shirtwaist fashions featured in the Advance Spring Pattern Book. Size 18 (36) requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch material, ½ yard for collar and cuffs, ⅜ yard for the tie.

The ALLEGED GREAT AUNT

"Of course I'm exhausted," she agreed, sharply. "So would you be exhausted if you'd gone through what I have. That country doctor—and he was an ignoramus—wanted to put me to bed for a week. But I told him I'd get along home. I can see it's high time I did." She sat down in the armchair with trembling dignity and shook her old head at Charles Bradley. "I was wondering, Charles, why you didn't turn up at the lodge this evening, as you promised, but now I understand. These morons have you under arrest."

"Now, Miss De Long," began the lieutenant, pacifically, but she disregarded him, turning once more to Gilbert.

"Have you found Jane Stanton? The lieutanant here told me a cock-and-bull story about James Bradley kidnaping her. I never heard anything so ridiculous in my life. James Bradley hasn't the nerve to kidnap a mosquito."

Jane Still Absent.

"Jane Stanton," said Gilbert, steadily, "has not been found."

For a moment old Lilys eyes clouded. "I'm sorry," she said, slowly.

Suddenly she caught sight of the yellowed letters on the open desk. "Who unlocked that desk?' she asked, tartly. All trace of sentiment had vanished. Gilbert recalled that she knew nothing about the burglar. "Who's been meddling with my papers? What's this?' She picked up a paper.

"Thats your will, Miss De Long," Mixter said.

"Nonsense; I never made a will." Lily was peering at the document in her hands.

"I can't read it without my glasses," she said. "What does it say?"

"It purports to be your last will and testament" Mr. Mixter said, precisely. "And it is signed with a very creditable imitation of your hand. It leaves all your property, both real and personal, to Charles and James Bradley. The bulk to Charles, but a very substantial sum to his brother. Charles is named as executor. He had the document in his pocket when he was arrested."

Miss Swanson Gone.

Old Lily dropped the paper and turned to confront her lawyer. She looked more shaken than Gilbert had yet seen her. She spoke, wryly, "Well, Charles, perhaps you belong in handcuffs, after all."

It was at this moment that Gilbert noticed that the room had lost an occupant. "Where's Miss Swanson?" he exclaimed.

"Miss Swanson?" The lieutenant wheeled.

Burke cried, "She was here just——"

"Get after her. Find her!" cried the lieutenant. "Both you and Casey!"

The two men plunged out of the house. Gilbert did not go with them. He did not care what happened to Luella Swanson, who was probably merely another of Charles' victims. His concern was Jane.

"Can't we get James in here again?" he asked. "I'm sure he knows——"

"Sure," the lieutenant interrupted him briskly. Then called, "Jones! Bring in your man."

Money Was Found.

"Is James Bradley here?" The astonished question was old Lily's.

"Yes. Before we question him, don't you want to go to bed?" Gilbert was himself privately marveling at the old lady's endurance.

Old Lily smiled grimly. "I had a nice rest under chloroform," she observed sardonically. Then with quickened interest, "Did you know that Mr. Mixter found more than $90,000 in this brief case? Well, James Bradley?"

The old man stood in the doorway, with Jones at his elbow. He met Lily's eye furtively, then averted his own. He slid wearily into Miss Swanson's deserted chair.

"Now, Mr. Bradley," resumed the lieutenant crisply, "I think you and your brother had better come clean. We know about your murder plan and about the forged will. What we don't know is what happened to Jane Stanton. That we intend to find out from you."

"Liar," Charles Said.

"I don't know anything about Jane Stanton," he said doggedly. Then added slowly, after a fearful glance at Charles. "But I was at Moosehead Lake."

"What for?" the lieutenant snapped. "I went," said James Bradley desperately, and Gilbert received the amazing impression that what he was saying was true. "I went to stop the murder."

Stung by the words, Charles Bradley leaped to his feet. "You damn liar!" he shouted.

Gilbert sprang forward, but Jones was quicker. He caught Charles Bradley by his handcuffed arms as he was hurling himself at his brother. He wrenched him sideways and flung him back into his chair.

"I did! I did!" James Bradley was shrieking over the tumult. "I tried to make Charles go, but he wouldn't! I begged him, I pleaded with him—this very afternoon! I don't believe in murder——"

"There's a distinction, I grant you," the lieutenant said, turning once more to James, "between forgery and murder. But what led you to extremities?"

Gilbert Knew All.

James did not answer, but Gilbert saw it all very clearly. "I know," he said quietly. "It's a long story. They stole $100,000 from my father on false promises.

"When I turned up, it instantly forced their hands; if I told Miss De Long what I knew about them, their game was up. Charles Bradley wasn't in town, but James got word to him, and he came back that night, entered this house and stole those letters out of that desk. They could tell me too much. If he could have moved them in the time he had he would have taken the scrapbooks, too.

"The next morning Charles Bradley showed up here, as cool as a cucumber, although Miss De Long had evidently quarreled with him——"

Old Lily intervened grimly. "I had. I told him I was sick of his trying to run me. Charles Bradley can be very charming when he wants to be, but lately he tried to keep me away from other people. Sometimes it almost frightened me."

Hired a Secretary.

Her voice shook a little over this unexpected confession, then brightened. "So I told him I'd engaged a lively young secretary to amuse me. And he threatened to leave me. I think he thought that would make me give in, for he knew in a way that I was fond of him. I depended on him. You wrote me that he had gone, James Bradley! The letter reached me in New York the morning of the day I came here."

Gilbert's thoughts flashed back to the letter addressed to Lily that Miss Swanson had dropped on the floor on his first visit to the bank.

"He said he was going," muttered James Bradley. "He left that day for New York."

"But he came back fast enough, when he had your telegram," said Gilbert swiftly. "And he saw I meant business. You saw that yourself, Mr. Bradley, and you were so worried that you went over to the county seat to reassure yourself by the sight of that marriage record."

Not James' Plan.

"What marriage record?" cried old Lily.

"It wasn't my plan!" protested James desperately.

"He did it in spite of me! He paid Alberto——"

"How much?" the lieutenant cut in sharply.

"Five hundred dollars."

"We found most of it on him," said the lieutenant in a brief aside to Gilbert.

"And he was to give him $500 more and send him back to Sicily," James Bradley added eagerly. "He arranged for the plane—I didn't have a thing to do with it."

"What plane?" The startled question came simultaneously from both Gilbert and the lieutenant.

"To Chicago," said James Bradley, "to send that telegram."

Flew From Albany.

"Alberto flew to Chicago?"

"Yes. From Albany, last night. And back again next day. And motored up to the lodge——"

"Good Lord!" said Gilbert heavily. "And Charles had left her there alone to wait for Alberto, and was back in Stanwix Falls, in case anything slipped, establishing his alibi!"

"But it wasn't my idea. I did my best to prevent it," James Bradley was talking very earnestly to the lieutenant. "I started up to Moosehead Lake——"

"But you didn't prevent it. What happened to you?"

"Hap-happened to me?" James faltered.

"Yes. When you reached the lodge."

The old man rose trembling from his chair. "I didn't see Jane Stanton," he screamed. "I didn't! I didn't! She was gone when I got there! I—I did find her glove. I found it on the floor of the living room. I picked it up to—to return to her. If you'll just let me go, let me get back home——"

Jane Appeared.

Gilbert could stand no more. He walked over to James Bradley and laid his hands heavily on the old man's thin and shuddering shoulders. "By God, you'll tell me what you did with her, or you'll never speak again," he said thickly.

James stared up at him, through his crooked spectacles, as if mesmerized. His mouth fell laxly open. Gilbert's fingers tightened.

"What's that?" cried the lieutenant sharply.

"I heard"—— With one stride the lieutenant had reached the door of the study. He flung it open. Gilbert's eyes turned toward the doorway. There in the corridor stood—Jane!

White-faced, bareheaded, her hair disordered, her eyes wide and frightened, her tan coat wrinkled and torn, she stood steadying herself on the threshold, by one arm stretched out to the door jamb. Her wrist was bruised and bleeding.

The Timed Squeeze.

As one of the younger players of note, Benedict Jarmel, of New York, has been forging steadily to the front ranks of tournament troupers. Paired with A. Mitchell Barnes, of New York, he won the Jersey State Open and the Southern New England championships.

Today's Hand.

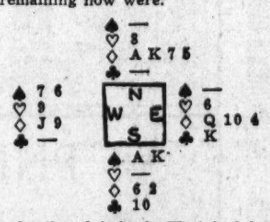
4♣	Pass	4♡	Pass
5♣	Pass	5♠	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Redbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Play.

West opened the heart ten. Dummy won with the Ace and led a club, South winning the finesse of the Queen. South led the club Ace and West trumped.

This ruff was a body blow, but the Declarer, Benedict Jarmel, of New York, nevertheless found a way to make contract. West returned the trump. Without this trump lead contract could be made by straight cross-ruff. As it was, Declarer would be left with a losing club at the end.

The trump lead was won by the Jack. South led a club for Dummy to ruff. Dummy led the heart Jack. East was marked for the heart King. If he did not hold the nine spot as well, contract was sure. East covered the heart Jack and South ruffed. South led another club and Dummy, after ruffing, led the heart three to put South back with a ruff. The cards remaining now were:



On the club leads West had had to let go diamonds. He could not discard hearts without setting up the eight in Dummy. With West squeezed out of his diamond stopper, South now cashed the two top trumps, Dummy saving three diamonds, and East was squeezed in diamonds and clubs.

Board Effects PoliceShake-up In Montgomery

Discontinues Takoma Park Sub-Station, Replaces 4 on Force.

The Montgomery County Board of Commissioners yesterday took another step in their gradual turnover of county employes by inaugurating sweeping changes in the county police department. The board announced the discontinuance of the Takoma Park sub-station effective January 24, and also the dismissal of four members of the force.

Those dismissed were Sergts. Earl H. Burdine and Leroy Snyder and Privates Thomas DeNell and James Shoemaker. They were replaced by Carl V. Ramey, Riggs Griffith, Marion Dayhoff and William S. Crawford. The new men were given the rank of privates with salaries of $125 per month.

Two desk clerks now employed at the Takoma Park sub-station will lose their positions when the station closes January 24, it was indicated by the board. They are John E. Pope and Emmett D. Ragland.

Lawrence Tolson, unsuccessful Fusion candidate for the House of Delegates in the recent election, was appointed sanitary inspector at a salary of $2,400 per year. This figure is $450 yearly less than the salary paid to W. Ernest Offutt, whom he replaces.

Reorganization of the county liquor control board was completed with the appointment of Frank Dwyer (Republican), of Laytonsville, as the fifth member at $500 annually, and Nicholas Griffith as beer inspector in place of Harold E. Bradford. Griffith will be paid $1,500 per year with $50 per month for expenses. Bradford received $1,800 per year and expenses.

In several minor changes of personnel in the Rockville Courthouse the commissioners appointed William H. Thompson, Clarksburg; Mrs. Hazel Karn, Rockville, and Mrs. Esther Fleishell, Silver Spring, as clerks in the office of the county treasurer at salaries of $1,200 annually each. The appointments take effect February 15. The new clerks replace whomever the treasurer elects to dismiss.

Hagerstown—Henry P. Bridges, secretary treasurer of the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club, has recovered sufficiently from the loss of his left hand in a gunning accident last fall to go to Johnson City, Tenn., to visit his family. He recently was discharged from a Baltimore hospital.

Elkton—John H. Minster is the first person to head the Elkton Chamber of Commerce for two consecutive terms. Minster, who heads a jewelry firm here, was recently reelected president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Hagerstown—A medal will be presented Robert Statton, January 25, in recognition of being chosen the best all-around scout of Troop 2, Boy Scouts of America, at United Brethren Church here. A medal is awarded annually to the outstanding member of the troop.

Ridgely—After carrying mail for nearly 31 years from the local postoffice, Harry E. Reininger yesterday enjoyed his first day of retirement. He was the only rural carrier when the rural delivery service was inaugurated here.

Sales Tax Fought In Prince Georges

Exchange Club Against Levy in Any Form.

Opposition to any form of a sales tax in Maryland was expressed at the recent meeting of the Prince Georges County Exchange Club at the Beaver Dam Country Club.

A committee was appointed to confer with the county delegation in the legislature on the problem of taxation, consisting of Dr. W. Burton Spire, chairman; Ralph W. Powers, Walter L. Green and Robert W. McCullough.

Uniform numbering of houses on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard was advocated by the club and a committee of five was appointed to study the project. Charles P. Burton is chairman of the group.

Richmond Pigeons To Stay in Square By Peery's Edict

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—The Capitol Square pigeons, threatened with deportation as "noisy nuisances," today were promised a renewed lease on free life in the square.

Gov. Peery announced that he had instructed W. W. Savedge, superintendent of grounds and buildings, to remove a trap set for the pigeons on the Capitol Building roof. There had been protests to the Governor against the proposal to rid the square of pigeons, but the discussion remained theoretical, since during the ten days the trap had been set not a single pigeon was caught.

Westminster Is Host To Women's Auxiliaries

Westminster, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Attended by 75 representatives of churches in the Western Shore District, the quarterly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, Methodist Protestant Church, was held at Deerpark Church, near here, yesterday.

Addresses were given by the Rev. and Mrs. Paul Warner, of Westminster, who recently returned from missionary work in Japan. The program also included devotions, Mrs. James Molesworth, Mount Airy; solos, Mrs. B. I. Barnes and Mrs. Vernon Dixon, Mount Airy; address of welcome, Mrs. Frank Bailey, Smallwood, and an address by the Rev. J. Earl Cummings, Westminster, who spoke on the refinancing campaign for the conference headquarters building in Baltimore.

Guest at Drill

MAJ. GEN. HUGH DRUM.

Fort Myer Stages Riding Drill Today

Major General Drum Will Be Honor Guest.

A series of exhibition drills by cavalrymen and artillerymen stationed at Fort Myer will be opened this afternoon in the new riding hall, with Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, deputy chief of the Army staff, as the guest of honor.

The drills will be patterned after the military pageant with which the Army post dedicated the riding hall last week and will be open to the public without charge.

The pageant depicts the evolution of uniforms and equipment of the American soldier from Colonial times to the present. Included in exercises which will follow are a tandem jump, a hunt ride in which Capital debutantes and post officers take part, a rodeo and a weapons ride.

$560 Fire Loss In Year Noted At Hyattsville

Blazes That Endangered $179,000 in Property Were Fought.

An actual property loss of $560 by fire was shown in the annual report of the Hyattsville Volunteer Fire Department, submitted by Noble Rushe, retired chief of the department.

The Hyattsville firemen fought blazes that endangered approximately $179,000 in property, it was announced by Rushe, who resigned a few weeks ago as chief after serving ten years in order to give more time to his post as president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association.

During the past year the Hyattsville department answered 78 alarms, it was shown in the report, which has been accepted by the mayor and town council.

Chief Gets Car.

Rushe announced that the department had brought a chief's car during the year, which enabled the chief and his aids to attend the gatherings of firemen to keep abreast of the latest developments. Rushe reported that the department has outfitted its 23 active members with new uniforms at a total cost of $400.

The smoke ejector and the light truck added to the department's equipment late in 1933 has more than paid for itself in actual service, the report showed. Rushe pointed out the citizens of Hyattsville no longer should fear extensive damage to their homes by water, as the smoke ejector enables firemen to reach the source of the blaze. The District of Columbia department twice has called upon the Hyattsville firemen for use of the ejector.

Thanks Town Council.

Rushe thanked the town council for cooperation it has given the fire department and said he believed the monthly meetings between the fire department committee of the council and the committee of the fire department had been helpful.

According to the report of John J. Fainter, for many years treasurer of the department, receipts for the year, outside of the county allotment, totaled $619.90, which represented largely proceeds from dances and other benefits. Expenses were $555, leaving a balance on December 1, 1934, of $64.90.

The county allotment amounted to $605.25, of which $518.75 went toward liquidating the note for the smoke ejector. A total of $2,450 still is owing on the ejector and the department's only other liability is $286.55 for uniforms.

Virginia Shows LiquorBrought In $1,843,721

Earnings From March 22 Revealed in Report of State Board.

Richmond, Jan. 17 (AP).—Net earnings of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board from March 22, when it began operations, to December 31, 1934, were announced today as $1,843,721.43.

State officials pointed out that with this amount already earned, six months of operations ahead before the close of the current fiscal year and a $250,000 legislative appropriation still untouched, prospects are bright for localities to share in the profit.

The chief point of doubt is what Gov. Peery will do about the reserve fund of up to $1,000,000 he is permitted to set up for the board.

If he defers setting up this fund and allows the State's credit to support the board's indebtedness at the time its books are closed June 30, 1935, the board estimates that at least $1,000,000 will be available for distribution to the localities.

Distributed on the population basis provided by law, this would amount to approximately 41.3 cents per capita.

In releasing the figures a spokesman for the board reiterated the contention that its interest is in control rather than profits.

Dr. C. C. Habliston Dies in Baltimore

Professor on Staff of Maryland U. Succumbs.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Dr. Charles Carroll Habliston, assistant professor of medicine at the University of Maryland, died today at his Roland Park home.

Dr. Habliston had been chief physician at the Baltimore City Tuberculosis Hospital at Bay View since 1920. He held the position at the university since 1919, where he graduated from the schools of pharmacy and later medicine. He was a medical officer in the Army during the World War.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Louise Sharpe Habliston; three children, Charles Carroll, jr., Sarah Josephine and Charlotte Habliston, and three sisters, Mrs. Charles De Witt, jr., Mrs. Wallace High and Mrs. Pauline Roder.

Delay Is Granted On Grayson Case

Former Treasury Aid Is Ill, Counsel Tells Court.

Arraignment of John Cooke Grayson, former Treasury Department official, who was indicted by the District grand jury on accusations arising from the collapse of the Park Savings Bank, yesterday was postponed to February 18.

Justice Oscar R. Luhring directed the postponement when Wilton J. Lambert, of defense counsel, produced a letter written by Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, heart specialist, stating that Grayson, now confined to his home at Charlottesville, Va., was not in condition to withstand the shock of the trip here and the excitement of court proceedings.

Grayson, formerly connected with the office of the national bank examiner in the Treasury, is under indictment on a charge of conspiring to commit larceny and embezzlement.

The Park Savings Bank closed with a $2,000,000 shortage early in March, 1933.

Japan Recalls Naval Expert.

Tokyo, Jan. 17 (AP).—The suggested naval discussions in Washington between Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, Japanese delegate to the recent London naval parley, were abandoned today and Koki Hirota, foreign minister, instructed the Admiral to come home at once.

Instead of leaving London for New York, Admiral Yamamoto is to start at once for Tokyo by way of Siberia.

Engineer's Clerk Takes Over New Duties.

Roland M. Brennan, chief clerk of the Engineer Department and a District employe for 24 years, yesterday was appointed secretary to the Board of Commissioners. He took office immediately, succeeding the late Daniel E. Garges.

Mr. Brennan was educated in the District public schools and was graduated from Business High School. He was made secretary to Capt. Roger Powell, assistant Engineer Commissioner, in 1913.

During the World War he was an aid to Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, who was then secretary to the Board of Commissioners. During this period he also served on the District draft board.

He was appointed secretary to Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz in 1919. Soon after he was elevated to the position of chief clerk of the Engineer Department.

He is married, and lives at 1711 Otis street northeast.

Message Silent About Economies, Senator Veasy Protests.

New Plans Guarded By Opposing Group

Maryland Relief Load Blamed on U. S. in Governor's Reply.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17 (AP).—Democratic members of the State Senate, bristling at the thought of $30,000,000 emergency revenue asked by Gov. Harry W. Nice, plan to introduce their own revenue measures in opposition to those proposed by the Governor.

This was learned today as the halls of the Legislature buzzed with comment on a fiery speech in which Senator Milton L. Veasey (Democrat), of Worcester, attacked the emergency revenue program advanced by the Governor. The system of administration of relief also came in for considerable criticism in the senator's address before the upper house of the Assembly, but Democrats and Republicans found themselves in agreement on the proposal to shift the burden of meeting Federal relief money from the State to the counties and cities.

Chief among the comment on Veasey's address were:

Senator Robert Kimble (Republican), of Allegany, said that he would answer Veasey tomorrow and that he would be armed with a copy of the State budget "to show that one reason the State is in a hole is that Senator Veasey got $3,500 a year from the State Roads Commission for doing nothing."

Nice Blames U. S.

Gov. Nice agreed with Senator Veasey that Maryland is "carrying a greater proportion of the relative (relief) load," but added: "If that be the motive of criticism, it can not be criticism of myself, but must be criticism of the Federal Government."

Details of the proposed Democratic revenue measures could not be learned. Leaders said, however, that no new forms of taxation would be proposed and that the program would be a combination of additional revenue from present sources and curtailment of State expenditures. The additional revenue, they said, would comprise the major part of the program.

Senator Veasey's attack on the relief set-up kept that subject in the prominent position it has occupied all week. Maryland legislators will go to Washington next week for conferences with Federal relief officials, to see what will be done along relief lines by the Government during the coming months. It was learned that the Maryland representatives will seek the answers to the following questions:

1. What is to be the Federal policy as between direct relief and the Public Works plan?

2. When the Public Works plan will begin, if approved by Congress, and what Maryland may expect from the $4,000,000,000 it is proposed to appropriate.

3. If the Federal Government expects repayment of more than $1,000,000 spent monthly in Maryland for relief since June 1.

Asked to Raise $7,200,000.

The answers to those questions, legislative leaders said, will determine just what steps the Maryland General Assembly must take to provide relief funds during the coming months. At present, Maryland is facing an ultimatum from the Federal Government that it must have assurance by February 1 that the State will provide $7,200,000 yearly for relief.

Chief points brought out by Senator Veasey were:

1. "There was not a word in that message (from Gov. Nice asking emergency revenue) about economy and reduction of State expenses."

2. That the administration of relief is too costly.

"Counties, cities and towns have released their efforts and the money of the Federal and State governments has not been wisely ex-

Nice Won't Run Again—He Vows Once Is Enough

Today, he told the Annapolis Rotary Club:

"No man could persuade me to go through again what I have gone through to be Governor of Maryland—I will not succeed myself."

He also said:

"During the next four years it is my desire to conduct the office of Governor of Maryland so that I can leave to the people of the State a successful administration."

$40,000 Error In Books Found In Montgomery

Correction May Cut Tax Rate for Road Work Overdraft.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—An error in bookkeeping, which charged Montgomery County's road allotment for $40,000 worth of work done in Pocomoke City, Md., apparently accounts for a part of the $230,000 overdraft in the county's road account.

The error was discovered yesterday by Joseph A. Cantrel (Fusion), Montgomery. He wrote at once to the State Roads Commission to call their attention to the matter, and to ask whether its correction would not reduce the overdraft.

The mistake was found in the annual report of the commission, in which it gives a list of road work and its cost in each county. Included in the Montgomery schedule was an item for the work done in Pocomoke City, which is in Worcester County on the Eastern Shore. The construction there was .14 of a mile of concrete shoulders on Market street, at a cost of $39,800.

Should correction of the error reduce the Montgomery overdraft, it will save county residents about 4 cents on their tax rate. It is understood that the county commissioners plan to levy for enough to repay the amount overdrawn. This means that the increase will be 4 cents less than expected.

Credit Group's Stock Goes Up

Denton Association Gives Report at Its First Annual Meeting.

Denton, Md., Jan. 17 (AP).—An increase of more than a dollar in the value of a share of stock of the Denton Production Credit Association was reported today at the first annual meeting of the stockholders.

The association's stock rose from the original quotation of $5 a share to $6.06 as a result of a profit accumulated during the past year from payments on loans and maintenance of operating expenses within its income.

John S. Skinner, of Cambridge, who presided at the meeting, was reelected president of the association. Harry H. Nuttle, of Denton, was chosen vice president, and Victor Dean, of Federalsburg, was reelected secretary-treasurer.

The directors elected today are Skinner, Nuttle, Dean, Ernest B. Brown, of Churchhill; R. R. Spring, of Easton, and H. S. Leaverton, of Rock Hall. The area served by the association comprises the Eastern Shore counties of Caroline, Talbot, Kent, Queen Annes and Dorchester.

Typhoid Halts County Deliveries of Milk

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Delivery of milk to Washington from a farm in the Keedysville section of Washington County has been discontinued by the Health Department here because of the presence of a case of typhoid fever.

Typhoid fever appeared in three places in the county, two of which were a farm near this city from which milk was being sold to Philadelphia. Milk shipment from it has been discontinued until the cases recover. The investigation by the Health Department indicates the source of this infection is a "carrier."

Clarke County to Get 1935 Farm Program

Winchester, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). A series of meetings to explain the 1935 corn-hog program has been called by C. C. Funkhouser, agricultural agent of Clarke County. In reviewing work of the past year, Mr. Funkhouser recalled that farmers who failed to attend the educational meetings later experienced difficulty in fulfilling their contracts.

The meetings will be held each night at 8 o'clock as follows: January 23, White Post; January 25, Boyce; January 28, Hawthorne; January 30, Berryville.

Sells Automobile in One Day Through Post Ad

That Richmond, Va., runaway horse that galloped through several green lights but stopped short when he approached a red one doesn't deserve a great deal of credit for astuteness.

He was not astute; he was just using horse sense, common sense.

The kind of common sense, for instance, that actuates prudent, penny-wise advertisers to use Post Classified Ads. An example is the sale of a 1933 Ford coach by Billhimer & Palmer, Hyattsville, Md. Mr. Palmer reports that he advertised the automobile for sale in The Post and sold it the same day to a Post reader.

Bill Asks Ban On Workboat Gasoline Tax

Oyster Craft Due Same Privileges as Yachts, Evans Claims.

Prescott Sponsors Bill Revising Tax System in Montgomery.

By Laurance F. Stuntz.
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17.—Bills affecting Montgomery, Washington and Garrett Counties, as well as a measure eliminating the tax on gas used for work boats, were introduced in the General Assembly here today.

Montgomery County's first new legislation was proposed by Senator Stedman Prescott (Democrat), Montgomery. It is a bill to allow tax payments to be in two instalments, one on January 1, and the other on July 1. Under the present law the whole amount is due January 1.

By the terms of a bill introduced by Sentaor Ernest W. Miller (Republican), Washington County, the City of Hagerstown would be given authority to retire its bonds even though it must pay a premium on them. The act authorizing the bond issue contained no provision for retiring the bonds before maturity.

The city now has a surplus, but needs authority to buy the bonds back as they are quoted above par. The bill will allow the city to pay up to 110 for bonds to be paid off.

Loan Bill Offered.

Another bill introduced by Senator Miller would authorize the town of Boonsboro, in Washington County, to borrow up to $2,500 per year for operating and other expenses.

The Garrett County bills were introduced in the House by Harry C. Edwards (Republican), Garrett. They provide that the county treasurer shall collect automobile taxes levied by the Town of Oakland, and that the commissioner of motor vehicles shall not issue new tags to cars which have not paid their town taxes.

The bill taking the 4-cent State tax off gasoline used by workboats was introduced last session but failed to pass. It was reintroduced in the House yesterday by Glenwood Evans (Democrat), Somerset. The tax is not levied now on pleasure boats, and oystermen and fishermen have asked a similar exemption for several years.

Senator Robert B. Kimble (Republican), Allegany, today put in a bill providing that courts should not issue injunctions in labor proceedings for more than five days without holding a public hearing. Another measure proposed by Senator Kimble would allow the formation of mutual associations to provide low-cost hospitalization.

Many Other Bills.

Other bills introduced in the Senate would permit the county treasurers to issue State license tags for automobiles and would repeal the declaration of intentions act. Mrs. Lulu W. Boucher (Republican), Allegany, introduced a bill in the House providing for the licensing of beauty operators.

The House honored a former member of the Legislature, Capt. Joseph Frazier, of Wicomico County, by inviting him to sit with the speaker during the day's session. Capt. Frazier was a member of the House in 1912.

A joint resolution was introduced in the Senate, asking President Roosevelt to address the members of the Assembly in Annapolis. It was referred to the committee on Federal relations.

Loudoun County Heads Will Discuss Functions

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—The second of a series of meetings on local and State government, sponsored by the Loudoun County Young Democratic Club, will be held next Wednesday night, January 23, in the Rotary room of the Leesburg Inn, beginning at 8 o'clock. County government will be discussed by Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher, Treasurer H. E. Cole, Clerk E. O. Russell, Commissioner of Revenue R. L. Nixon and Sheriff E. S. Adrain.

At the last meeting the Mayor, councilmen and treasurer of the Town of Leesburg discussed their various duties.

Town Asks Removal Of Railroad Tracks

Greencastle, Pa., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Petitions signed by hundreds of residents of this town are being forwarded to the Pennsylvania Railroad, asking for removal by the company of its track on North and South Carlisle street.

The petitioners point out that since the building of its high line in 1908 the railroad company has virtuallly abandoned the track in the central part of the town. They assert that the track makes it impossible to keep the street in repair and constitutes a serious traffic hazard.

Principals Meet Feb. 12.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). A meeting of the principals of the high schools of three counties of Southern Maryland, Charles, Calvert and St. Mary's, will be held at Margaret Brent High School near here February 12. An address will be made by the State Supervisor of Public Schools of Maryland, Thomas C. Pullen.

President Praises Virginian Begging on Streets for Others

A. S. J. Jakeman Feeds 400 Daily on Contributions of Public.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Here's a man who begs for others. He has attracted the attention of President Roosevelt and the Federal Relief Administration and he has received letters from each praising him for his work.

He is A. S. J. Jakeman, known to practically every man, woman and child in Norfolk. He was for years active in politics, but failing to obtain recognition, he has for several years devoted his activities to begging food and clothing for the needy.

He operated in East Main street this city, what is known as "The Kitchen." It is an eating place for the unemployed and the down-and-out. He feeds as many as 400 persons in a single day.

Anybody is welcome to eat at "The Kitchen" and they can carry away as much food as they please. Many visiting the place carry tin buckets and cans. They get their fill of food and fill up the tins with soups and meats for their loved ones at home.

Jakeman obtains the food he serves the needy by making a door to door visit among merchants. He obtains supplies from store keepers which are taken to "The Kitchen" and cooked.

He is said to be the only man in the United States who begs food for his fellow men, has it cooked and served to them without limit as to the quantity they can consume or carry off the premises.

Jakeman is about 62 years old. At one time he was employed by the Norfolk & Western Railroad. He has announced his candidacy for the Legislature on a program to provide pensions for the aged and to prohibit corporations from denying a man employment after he reaches the age of 45.

Weller to Get Highway Post, Nice Indicates

Governor to Appoint Head of Roads Commission on Saturday.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). O. E. Weller, of Silver Spring, retired banker and former chairman of the State roads commission, will be reappointed to that post by Gov. Harry W. Nice, it was indicated here today.

Gov. Nice said that he would name the new chairman on Saturday. The appointment will be only temporary. Mr. Weller has been suggested as a temporary chairman to reorganize the commission and reduce its expenditures.

In saying that the new chairman would serve only a short time, the Governor said that a head was needed for the commission to sign debentures which have already been sold. They are invalid until signed by the chairman. The former chairman, G. Clinton Uhl, died several months ago.

Mr. Weller was the second chairman of the commission, serving from 1912 to 1915. He then resigned to run as Republican nominee for Governor. He was unsuccessful in the race. He has been retired for several years. Mr. Weller is a native of Baltimore County, and was a graduate of the Naval Academy.

Frederick Livestock Bring Total of $3,700

Winchester, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Frederick County farmers, who attended a livestock auction sale at the farm of John W. Larrick, jr., near this city, when more than 200 head of hogs, cattle and sheep were auctioned, expressed the opinion today that livestock prices have rounded the corner and once again are on an upward trend.

Proceeds of the sale amounted to $3,700. While several registered bulls were offered they brought average prices, the bulk of the proceeds being derived from livestock no better than average. The top price for a cow was $50 while the first sheep offered were bid in at $6.45.

Merrill G. Murray to Speak.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Merrill G. Murray, of Minnesota, a member of the Roosevelt committee on economic security, will be the speaker tomorrow night at the meeting of the Democratic Organization Club of Washington County.

Death Claims Rev. Mr. Coles Suddenly at 72

Funeral of Widely Known Charlottesville Pastor Set for Today.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). The Rev. Roberts Coles, 72, widely known clergyman, died suddenly early today at his home on Park street of heart attack.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow from Christ Episcopal Church, this city, the service to be conducted by the rector, Dr. Robert F. Gibson. Interment will be in the family burial plot at Enniscorthy, in the Green Mountain section of southern Albemarle.

Mr. Coles was the fourth son of Peyton Skipwith and Julia Isaetta Coles, and was born June 29, 1862, at Estouteville.

He was educated at Bethel Military Academy, Fauquier County, Va., and at Seabury Divinity School at Farabault, Minn., and spent one year in postgraduate work at the University of Pennsylvania.

Ordained in 1888.

Mr. Coles was ordained a priest in the Protestant Episcopal Church by the Right Rev. O. W. Whittaker, D.D., bishop of Pennsylvania, at St. James Church, Philadelphia, on June 17, 1888. He was rector in charge of the Church of Our Saviour at Jenkintown, Pa., from 1888 until 1910; rector in charge of churches at Hamilton, Loudoun County, Va., from 1910 to 1914, and rector in charge of the church at Rapidan, Culpeper County, since 1914.

On January 7, 1908, Mr. Coles married Miss Mary Walton Minor, daughter of the late George Ridgeway and Sally M. (Carr) Minor. She survives, with two sons, Robert Coles and George Minor Coles, both of this city.

Firemen Ask State Funds As Pensions

Maryland Companies Seek $22,000 a Year for Widows.

Uniform System of Fighting Fires Is Urged in State.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Noble F. Rushe, of Hyattsville, president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, in an address here last night advocated support of proposed legislation to provide about $22,000 of State funds annually for widows and orphans of volunteer firemen killed in line of duty. He spoke at the annual banquet and meeting of the Westminster Fire Engine and Hose Company, attended by 250 members and guests.

He pointed out that four years ago the association had funds amounting to $42,000, but that an increase in membership and a consequent gain in the number of accidents had depleted the reserve, which now totaled only $16,000. This decrease in funds, he said, had made it necessary two years ago to recommend that death benefits be reduced from $750 to $500 and weekly benefits from $25 to $15.

The defeat of previous legislative bills to provide a State fund for the widows and orphans was attributed by Mr. Rushe to the fact that the association members have failed to enlighten the citizens about the needs and functions of the organization. He stated that Pennsylvania granted $100,000 a year for relief, New Jersey has a 2-cent fire tax, and Virginia gives the State association $65,000 annually, while the Maryland association receives only $3,200.

T. W. Veneman, of Riverdale, chairman of the fire college committee of the State association, spoke on the aim of the college in perfecting a standardized system of firefighting in the State. Other speakers were the Rev. J. Earl Cummings, pastor of the Westminster Methodist Protestant Church; Robert S. Tate, battalion chief, Baltimore; Capt. William C. Brust, Baltimore, and H. Peyton Gorsuch, Westminster.

During the business session last night officers elected were Frank T. Shaeffer, president; Edward Diffendal, first vice president; Norman B. Boyle, second vice president; Harry Fowble, secretary and treasurer; Herbert Phillips, assistant secretary and treasurer; Leroy Brown, chief; Melvin Unger, assistant chief; Edward Orndorff, foreman of apparatus; Sterling Eckenrode, assistant foreman; William Helm, marshal; S. C. Stoner, assistant marshal; John Whitmore, librarian; Charles Shipley, assistant librarian.

Edgar Lewis Installed As K. of P. Commander

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Edgar M. Lewis, deputy sheriff for Allegany County, last night was installed as chancellor commander of Queen City Lodge, No. 136, Knights of Pythias. Other officers are: Vice chancellor, C. R. Cramer; prelate, C. M. Daulbaugh; master at arms, Eugene E. Dyche; keeper of records and seal, J. C. Fisher; master of finance, Nelson W. Russler; master of exchequer, A. F. Weltman; inner guard, George W. Nixon; outer guard, S. H. Anderson; rank master, C. Shaffer.

The past chancellor's jewel was presented to the retiring chancellor commander, John Nesbit.

Press Criticism Of Public Builder Upheld by Court

Facts Proven False Do Not Establish Libel, Virginia Rules.

Decision Sets Aside Verdict for $5,000

Contractor With State Open to Scrutiny, Tribunal Adds.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—Reasonable and honest criticism of persons engaged in public works which turns out to be based on false statements of fact, not defamatory in themselves, is not libelous, the State Supreme Court of Appeals ruled today.

This opinion, submitted by Justice Hudgins with Justices Campbell and Holt dissenting, was handed down in finally settling a libel suit brought by C. H. Haymes, a highway contractor, against R. A. James, publisher of the Danville Bee and Register.

Once before, after a trial court had awarded Haymes $4,500, the Supreme Court sent the case back for a rehearing. After a second verdict for $5,000 had been given, the case came back to the highest State court, which today finally dismissed it with a verdict favoring the publisher.

An editorial criticizing Haymes for alleged slowness in completing work on the highway between Chatham and Danville was the basis for the action. Haymes contending that he was not unduly slow on the project criticized, and asserting that his slowness in completing a previous contract was through no fault on his part.

In his opinion today, Justice Hudgins said that the claimant apparently had failed to recognize the fact that his work on a public project put him in a different position from one who is privately employed.

It then was stated as the court's opinion that the rights of individuals in public service would not be impaired by the following rule:

"When a publication deals with a matter of public concern and the statement of facts on which the publication is based are not defamatory per se; that the defendant made the statements published for a proper purpose, in good faith and had probable cause to believe they were true, it will not be held libel."

Along the Tri-State Trail

With
C. B. Carr
Post State Editor.

IN Grafton, W. Va., Curtis Lambert, bank teller, emerged from a pile of figure-scratched paper and announced the following facts concerning the $4,000,000,000 for which President Roosevelt has asked to continue unemployment relief:

Changed into $1 bills and laid end to end around the world, the bills would be 13 deep.

If it were all distributed in a year, it would have to be spent on the average of $11,000,000 a day, $460,000 an hour, $7,600 a minute and $120 a second.

In Bedford, Va., the shortest will ever probated there was declared valid this week. Prepared by W. A. Thompson, it read: "I want Annie and Herman to have what I got. (signed) W. A. T."

Two white crows are reported to have taken up residence in Baltimore. Residents around the Montebello Reservoir say that they have frequently seen the albino pair with a normal black crow flock of several hundred.

Near Luray, Va., homesteaders owning property next to the Shenandoah National Park possibly see the end of their economic reverses if the Government keeps offering generous sums for evacuating their small homes. One of these homesteads—consisting of a half acre and a small dwelling—was sold for $2,300. Another, comprising an acre and a 13 by 16 foot house, calls for $3,800 to change hands.

Chicken thieves of Charles Town, W. Va., have little or no regard for the law. Recently they calmly walked into a chicken coop—owned by G. K. Wysong, sheriff of Charles Town, and removed half the chickens.

Francis Mattingly, living near Leonardtown, Md., is glad he wears glasses. When he opened the door of a wood stove in his home he was met by a blast of smoke and flame that severely scorched his face and burned off his eyebrows and hair. Glasses, perhaps, were the only thing that kept him from losing his eyesight.

New Night Club Boasts Novel Decorations

Tiny Will Tell Results of Parody Contest Next Week.

By Kay Ware.

That Kaleidoscope place is the newest thing in the night club and restaurant line. When the combined brains and energies of a group of newshawks—and a college professor—get together, the result is a nudist colony running around the walls of one room, three-inch news headlines decorating another, and animals supplying diversion in a third.

Good food, all drinks a quarter or less, is furnished.

The nudist colony is worth several good looks. Famous local faces are there; you might find your own!

At the Shoreham Diane and Del Campo, originators of the Carioca, are dancing tangoes, Cucurachas and Spanish flavored numbers. Seab Waring, presented by Rudy Vallee, is the boy "who is wired for a sound." He imitates all things human and inhuman, got his lung power swimming at Yale when he and Rudy were buddies. Violet Bache introduces Continental and South American atmosphere into her rhumba. Does a transparent fan dance, and an acrobatic waltz. Leaves after this engagement for Paris.

Tiny's "You're the Top" contest closes Saturday. Winning parody will be announced next week. If you haven't sent in your parody, get it in right away.

Heigh-Ho announces with a sigh of relief that the Cansinos will appear there Monday. This team has had so many engagements that we were despairing of seeing them again.

The orchestral arrangements are worth an attentive ear. Artie Humes, the trumpeter, is responsible for them.

Pete Macias is going to New York for the week-end to look over the motorboat show, no less. Incidentally Pete's own boat has been chromium-plated and fixed up like new. It's named Heigh-Ho II.

Social list: Sol Rosenblatt, NRA, "Chip" Robert and Antonio C. Gonzalez, minister to Panama, who is Pete's uncle.

Ernestine Gardner, at the Willard's bamboo room, finds herself snowed under with fan mail. All because Johnny Slaughter goes on the air fourteen times a week, including five hook-ups.

One day not long ago Johnny was found surrounded with books from the Public Library. These were to help him find suitable music for the Oriental Bal Boheme.

Nita Little, sentimentally attached to Hi-Hat, went there a little while ago and sang herself ino an engagement with another night spot. Now she can't decide whether to stay here or continue an interrupted trip up North.

The Hawaiians have a new schedule and play from 12:30 to 1:30, 5 to 7:30 and 9:30 p. m. till closing time.

Line up at Pilgrim Club: Maurine and Norva, dance team, with 28 routines; Charel de Thomee, French pianist-singer, and a new band, Ray Masters and Cosmopolitans, from New York.

More mysteries about dance teams. Heigh-Ho must have started something. Now Club Havana says "Sh-h-h," and raises eyebrows. It will be out in a week or two.

Billy McIntyre, who imitates, dances, sings and is a very agreeable conversationalist on the side, has a new stunt. Roy Atwell can't stutter better than Billy, and besides, Atwell instructed the Habana lad in the finer nuances.

Line up at Madrillon: Anita and Manuel in South American dances; Amelia Gilmore with toe and Manhattan novelty numbers; the regulars, Jack Scheffer, Roy Donohue, Jack Del Roy, Leon Brusiloff and boys.

Church, Fraternal And Charity Units Share D. C. Estate

Charitable, fraternal and religious organizations of the District were named beneficiaries of the estate of John George Nietler, it was learned yesterday when his will was filed in the District Supreme Court.

St. John's Lutheran Church is to be given $3,000; Harmony Lodge No. 17, F. A. A. M., $1,000; Naval Chapter of the Masons is to have $1,000, and the Bruen Methodist Episcopal Church is to get a like amount.

Mr. Neitler, who died January 6, directed that George C. Gertman, an attorney, then take steps to divide the balance of the estate between the German Orphan Asylum and the Ruppert Home. The estate consists of $14,700 in personal property and an undisclosed amount of real estate.

In the will of Charles Everett Kern directions were given that his widow, Mrs. Catherine R. W. D. Kern, should be given his $54,000 estate. Charles H. Merillat represented the estate.

The two children of Mrs. Eleanor O'Donnell Hinckley, who died December 26, were named to share equally in her $56,000 estate. Gladys H. Werlich, a daughter, and Robert O'Donnell Hinckley, a son, were those named. The son's interest is to be held in trust for him by the National Savings and Trust Co.

McCarran to Fight For Full U. S. Pay

Nevada Senator Will Go Before Group Today.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, will go before a sub-committee of the Senate Appropriations Committee today and renew his fight for immediate restoration of the remainder of the Government pay cut.

The sub-committee is considering a deficiency bill providing funds for several Government commissions to carry them through the current fiscal year.

McCarran thinks this would be an ideal measure in which to incorporate his resolution restoring the rest of the pay cut.

Ruhland to Confer On D.C. Health Job

Syracuse Official Due to Be Named to District.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health commissioner of Syracuse, N. Y., today will confer with the District Commissioners, after which it is expected he will be named District health officer.

The name of Dr. Ruhland as nominee for the position was submitted to the Commissioners by a special committee of physicians appointed by them to select the most competent man for the job.

Inquiry to Start On Sewage Plant

A sub-committee of the Senate District Committee was appointed yesterday to investigate circumstances surrounding the long-delayed project of a new sewage disposal plant for the city.

The last Congress authorized the Public Works Administration to allot $8,000,000 to the District for "a proper sewage system, including Rock Creek, and the elimination of Potomac pollution."

Certain developments arose which led the PWA to reduce the proposed allotment to $4,000,000. Meantime, Administrator Ickes has said he wants to investigate the project further and the Board of Trade has made a critical report on the proposed undertaking.

Kiwanians Observe 20th Anniversary

F. L. Peckman Presides at Meeting in Mayflower.

The twentieth anniversary of the founding of Kiwanis International was celebrated yesterday by the Washington Kiwanis Club.

The program was held at the Mayflower Hotel, in charge of Frank L. Peckman, who introduced the following charter members: Eugene C. Adams, Arthur G. Bishop, James J. Boobar, James C. Dulin, sr., Charles W. Easterday, Edwin E. Eliett, Robert F. Fleming, Peyton B. Fletcher, Roe Fulkerson, George P. Mangan, Howard W. Phillips, George E. Potter, Lawrence L. Reeves, Fred A. Schutz, George C. Shaffer, Will H. Towles, Ford E. Young, Jullien M. Winnemore and John R. Wright.

In a brief address, Eugene R. Adams, president of the club in 1918, told of the club's history during this period. The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, read a communication from the international president, Dr. William J. Carrington, of Atlantic City.

Sports Finds Saner Sense Of Values

College Grid Hypocrisy Seems Sure to End, Editor Asserts.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (AP).—American sport has come through a five-year period of exciting but somewhat painful transition to enter the new year on nearly every major front with a saner sense of values established, colleges fighting hard to eliminate semiprofessionalism, and budgets balanced or close to it, Alan Gould, sports editor of the Associated Press, said tonight in a speech over a Nation-wide radio hook-up.

"To grasp the extent of our sporting industry," Gould said, "it is necessary only to point out that professional baseball is a $75,000,000 affair, that horse racing involves an investment in the neighborhood of $150,000,000, and that our foremost amateur sport, college football, is capitalized roughly at $200,000,000, including the mortgages on the stadiums.

"It is important therefore to realize that behind all our competitive excitement there is the critical factor of gate receipts, whether needed for professional profit or used for the purpose of sustaining the expensive machinery and facilities of our schools, colleges and clubs.

Box Office Upswing.

"Along with one of the most thrilling years we have ever had in sports in this country, 1934 witnessed a distinct upswing at the box offices. There is every reason to expect that 1935, already away to a brisk start, will witness greater prosperity than in any year since 1930. At the same time the fan is likely to get more for his money—chiefly because he is more discriminating.

"Up to four or five years ago, the trend in American sport was distinctly toward the amateur side of the picture. More money, meaning bigger gate receipts and greater glorification of our foremost athletes, tended to exaggerate the so-called simon-pure side of athletics. The truth is there was more semi-professionalism than purification. Reformers started what the great deflation finished.

"There remains a good deal of hypocrisy, especially in college football, but it seems to be definitely on the way out. There is a wholesomeness in our amateur sports today that promises to benefit all concerned."

Olin's Toothache Forces Bout Delay

Excuse Brings Laughter, but No Fight Tonight.

New York, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—A toothache and a shot of laughing gas tonight rendered Light-heavyweight Champion Bob Olin hors de combat, caused cancellation of his scheduled ten-rounder with John Henry Lewis tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden, and provoked boisterous laughter all along belt boulevard.

It was the first time in ring history, according to James Joy Johnston, the Garden promoter, than any member of the larruping legion who professed to be a champion, had withdrawn from a bout because of such an apparently insignificant excuse.

The laughing gas made everyone cackle gleefully except those concerned with the match. Johnston, who has been having a run of extremely bad luck recently, was particularly irate at be-gassed Bob Olin. Olin's withdrawal came so late that it was impossible for Johnston to find a substitute and forced him to call off the entire show. He tried to substitue former champion Maxie Rosenbloom, but that fell through.

Braves' Plight To Be Aired Today

Baseball Men Confident Team Will Return to Its Own Park.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Baseball directors of the National League began arriving in New York tonight prepared to go into the extraordinary huddle called for tomorrow morning by President Ford Frick to dispose of the Boston Braves muddle.

Although baseball men are reticent and in most cases apparently do not know what will be done, all are confident that the Braves will return to their own baseball plant, leased by owners to a dog racing syndicate, a few days ago.

Reports that the Braves would forfeit their franchise to the league or be sold to a Canadian syndicate were given little credence.

But what is expected by the baseball men is reorganization of the club with Vice President Charles Francis Adams and his resources in as president and Judge Emil Fuchs, now president, eliminated in the new deal.

Cumberland Forms Fish and Game Group

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—At a meeting of sportsmen at the city hall, the Square Circle Sportmen's Association was formed and officers elected as follows: J. W. Holmes, president; Emory Wilson, vice president; Lyle Stewart, secretary-treasurer, and board of directors, Joseph A. Minke, Frank A. Stein, M. E. Robinette and Fred P. Keyser.

Plans for an intensive program of activities dealing with fish and game protection during the year were formulated. Meetings will be held the first Tuesday of each month and arrangements are being made to have a program of motion pictures and speaking for the next session on February 12.

Waynesboro High Five Is Triumphant, 60 to 14

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Scoring almost at will, Rip Engle's Waynesboro High quintet conquered Washington Township High, 60 to 14, at Hooversville last night.

Two Carolinas Boasting Strong Boxing Teams

Tarheels Are Seen as Chief Contenders in Conference.

By Bill McCormick.

FROM the Carolinas, spawning ground of hill-billy guitar whangers and fighting men, may come the collegiate clouters qualified to nudge Virginia from the throne it now occupies as ruler of the realm of Southern Conference boxing.

North Carolina was rated a strong contender for championship honors from the outset of the season. Nothing has happened to change that rating since the season got under way. Clemson, not given serious consideration before the warfare started, appears as a distinct threat by virtue of holding the highly regarded Duke battlers to a 4-4 tie last Saturday.

The boxers on the South Carolina and North Carolina State squads are equipped with the full quota of arms, and any fighter with two arms is a threat in the precarious business of biffing beaks.

North Carolina, in its one start so far, spanked the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, 7 to 1. Only Edwards, a 125-pound punch pusher upon whom the Tar Heels never pinned much faith, bowed to the Tech opposition.

Justified Selection.

Diehle, 115-pound sophomore, who had to battle for his berth on the varsity, justified his selection as a member of the squad by winning on a technical knockout from Hall. Tom O'Flaherty, sophomore lightweight, disposed of his opposition from V. P. I. with a clean knockout in the second round. Joe Fisher, who held down the welterweight position last year, is back again as a 145-pounder and decisioned Horman.

Max Novich, a sophomore with an enviable freshman record, started successfully in the 175-pound class, and Lammy Alderman had the heavyweight situation well under control.

Clemson forfeited in the 165-pound class against Duke and still managed to hold the menacing Blue Devils to a stalemate.

Jackie Williams' defeat of Abe Alterman in the 116-pound class came as not much of a surprise. Alterman bowed to his opponents at Richmond and South Caorlina against whom the Blue Devils inaugurated their 1935 period of punch, with 7-to-1 and 6-to-2 victories, respectively.

Three Attributes.

Al Mann, regularly assigned to the 155-pound berth for Duke, was not able to fling fists against Clemson, and Lofton, a Clemson letterman, scored handily over Altman, who substituted. Lofton's chief claims to fame are a soporific punch, the ability to absorb punishment and aggressiveness. These attributes proved enough to dispose of Altman.

Roddy Kissam, Tiger football end and boxing letterman, handed Don Schmidt, of Duke, his first defeat of the season in the light-heavyweight division. When Kissam kisses 'em, they stay kissed, and he plopped Don just often enough to win the decision. Coach Bob Jones does not expect much from Kissam against the aggressive, tearing-in type of battler he is bound to encounter in the conference.

Cliff Henley, the Clemson heavyweight, forgot his stage fright against Duke to score handily over Sully Granger, upon whom the Blue Devils were depending greatly. Henley was stopped in the first round of his first fight two years ago and since has been gun shy.

Three Others Beaten.

J. E. (Cutie) Altman, 125-pounder; Bubber Dawson, lightweight, and John Griner, 145-pounder, bowed before the flying fists of their Duke opposition. The Tigers forfeited to Matulewicz in the middleweight division which is perhaps just as well.

Altman, who was stopped in the first round by Capt. Freddy Lloyd, Duke's candidate for the feather-weight crown, boasts much speed and endurance and is a fair puncher. His defense is none too good, however, which proved his undoing against the ultra-classy Blue Devil captain.

Bubber Dawson, who was decisioned by Jack Kneipp, a Washington lad, was expected to be Clemson's outstanding fighter this year. He was considered one of the best in the conference last year and seemed to have improved in the gymnasium, but disappointed against Kneipp.

Griner, fighting his first year on

Recruit Code Is Advocated

Would Aid Small Schools, Atlanta Session Told.

ATLANTA, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Presidents of four small colleges got up before a room full of their collegiates here today and warned that the use of "supersalesmanship" as a means of recruiting for admissions is one of the greatest dangers to the American educational system.

Although agreeing that most recruiting abuses begin with the efforts of colleges to obtain outstanding athletes, speakers at a sectional meeting at the twenty-first annual convention of the Association of American Colleges agreed that this phase was not essentially the most serious.

At the outset of the meeting the delegates were told by Dr. Charles J. Turck, president of Centre College and chairman of the association's committee on recruiting, that the greatest need of the college

Yanks' 'Lucky Hunch' Dies Bemoaning Luck

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Eddie Bennett, the grinning "lucky hunch" of the New York Yankees, did his last caper alone—with nothing for an audience but a bottle of pain-cure and the shadow of the Reaper.

His deformed little body—he was a hunchback from birth and twisted with more pain after he was crushed in an automobile accident two years ago—was found, cold and stiff, in his drab rooming house home today.

A morgue wagon attendant marked on a slip of paper the word "heart"—and maybe that was it.

Eddie drank his life away with grim bitterness after the automobile accident, which forced him to give up his duties as mascot of the Yankee Baseball Club. He sorrowed alone in his room, his meager expenses paid by Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees.

Baseball had known Eddie, the hunchback, since 1916 when he became, at the age of 13, mascot for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

He was with the Dodgers in 1920, when the late Uncle Willie Robinson piloted a second-division club to the National League pennant. But Uncle Willie forgot to take Eddie to Cleveland for the World Series—and the Dodgers lost.

Wilcy Moore, great Yankee relief hurler, threw his first warm-up ball to Eddie.

Players shook hands with him before going to bat when a pinch hit was needed.

But his luck changed in 1932. A taxicab in which he was riding was pinned against a pillar and Eddie's body was hopelessly crushed. He lived out his days among his baseball trophies, drinking steadily and died at 31—a "lucky" man of baseball, heartbroken over his own bad fortune.

W. & L. and V.P.I. Fives Will Clash Tomorrow

Lexington, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—With two victories and one defeat as their record to date, Coach Cy Young's Washington and Lee basket ball team will play host to Virginia Tech here Saturday night in the first of two games between the Generals and the Gobblers.

Ky Lafoon Shoots 68 In Practice on Coast

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 17 (AP).—Ky Laffoon, Denver professional recently awarded the National P. G. A. trophy for being the lowest-scoring professional for 1934, shot 34-34—68, four strokes under par, at the Municipal course today while practicing for the $2,500 Sacramento Open championship, which starts Saturday.

V. P. I. Frosh Score.

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Two sharp-eyed forwards, Frank Walkauskas and Mel Henry, who scored 36 points between them, paced the Virginia Tech Freshmen to a 47-to-33 victory over Massanutten Military Academy five in a fast court battle here tonight. Walkauskas had eight goals and three foul shots while Henry was registering four goals and nine foul goals.

Jadick Ready For Any Rival

Willing to Meet the Best if He Defeats Furr.

THROUGH his manager, Mr. "Iron Hat" Burns, Johnny Jadick yesterday assured the world in general and Matchmaker C. Egbert Cornell in particular that he would be glad to do battle against some outstanding opponent here if he hurdles Phil Furr at the Auditorium Monday night.

"Jadick's rounding into great shape," insisted Mr. Burns, apparently not speaking through his derby. "He is a good bet to box Furr's ears off, if he doesn't punch him to pieces. After Furr, he will be ready for the best, and the best is none too good for Washington."

Affiliated with the boxing game for some 35 years and for 21 years proprietor of the celebrated Cambria A. C. of Philadelphia, Mr. "Iron Hat" should know whereof he speaks, but then, of course, he is speaking in this instance of his own fighter.

Burns was in Jadick's corner both times he upset Tony Canzoneri in 1931. His appearance in Johnny's

Roman Soldier Is Victor in Inaugural Handicap; Returns $19.10.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Jan. 17 (AP).—Some 20,000 race fans, jamming and crowding every available spot in the track that has come to be known as the show place of Miami and the winter playground of the South, basked in tropical sunshine here today and saw William Sachsenmaier's Roman Soldier lead home a large and representative field in the Hialeah Inaugural Handicap, opening day feature of the Miami Jockey Club's 45-day meeting.

The finish of the race, worth $2,520 to the winning owner, was so close that the result was in doubt until the official numbers were hoisted. E. F. Seagram's Stand Pat, winner of two handicaps at Tropical Park, was deprived of his third straight victory by the margin of a nose. Felix Spatola's Narragansett sensation and favorite in the betting, Wise Prince, was a scant half length out of the place while heading the Shandon Farm's Evergold for the short end of the purse.

Pays $19.10 Mutuel.

Roman Soldier, ridden by the veteran Frank Horn, ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5 and returned $19.10 for a $2 straight ticket.

Hialeah Park, despite the recent freezing weather that took its toll on some of the foliage and palms, made a gorgeous setting for an excellent day of sport.

Roman Soldier, 3-year-old son of Cohort—Miamba, was sold by Max Hirsch to Sachsenmaier after his recent victory at Tropical Park, for a reported price of $7,500 and a share of his winnings, if any, in the Florida Derby. The colt's stock for that event naturally took a big jump today.

Wise Prince Takes Lead.

George Cassidy got the field of 16 off in fine style. Wise Prince went to the front, closely attended by Roman Soldier. The two 3-year-olds dominated the running nearly all the way, racing like a team. Roman Soldier displayed rare courage by sticking to his task in the final drive when the older Stand Pat threatened. The Seagram star took the overland route, and with better fortune the son of John P. Grier might have won. He has been campaigning in longer races.

Chain-Store Plan Backed By Harris

Nats' Owner Hoping to Swing Sewell Deal Before Leaving.

To Stay in Miami Until Advance Guard Reports to Biloxi Feb. 24.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

APPARENTLY balked in his efforts to sign a seasoned and capable pitcher, Clark Griffith yesterday began stuffing shirts into his duffiebag and prepared to shake the dust of Washington from his feet for the gentler climes of the Southland.

Griff's particular destination is Miami, where he intends to set up a field office and, between rounds of golf and other serious pleasures, conduct a strenuous telegraphic campaign to obtain his hurler. His most potent weapon is a second check for $100,000, formerly the property of Tom Yawkey, which undoubtedly will have a tremendous influence on other club owners.

But Mr. Griffith just the other day stated emphatically that he didn't intend to buy players at random simply to be spending money. He wants value, real value, for his ironmen. Apparently, Griff has turned over a new leaf.

Hopes for Browns Deal.

The silver-thatched prexy of the Washington Baseball Club voiced the hope, a slim hope, that he might make a deal with St. Louis, before entraining tomorrow night. Luke Sewell, the veteran backstopper, would be sent to the Browns along with some cash in exchange for the pitcher. But Sewell in turn would be traded off to Cleveland, where receivers are as scarce as honest politicians.

Griff was highly indignant when asked if his new farms, Selma, of the Southeastern League, and Panama City of the Georgia-Alabama-Florida League, were semipro outfits or honest-to-goodness minor league ball clubs.

"Why, certainly, they play every day in the week," he said. "They'll be in organized baseball—Class C and D, and if we have some youngsters who can't make the grade in larger leagues, we'll send them down there. Of course, they may not produce any ball players, big leaguers, I mean, but you've always got to take that chance."

Seen as Wise Move.

Incidentally, Manager Bucky Harris believes Griff's move a wise one and expects the team to profit by it.

"I think the vast amount of trading at the recent major leagues' meeting—virtually none at all—discloses the scarcity of good ball players. Mr. Griffith's idea is a grand one. We've got to dig up our own garden, as it were, and grow our own players," Harris said.

Griff will break camp at Miami in time to arrive in Biloxi February 24, when a squad of rookie catchers and pitchers will report for advance work. The regular batterymen are due in camp one week later and still another week will elapse before the remaining members of the squad begin conditioning work.

Dick Lanahan, a southpaw whose experience has been confined to local sandlots, and Archie Scrivener, an Alexandria southpaw sandlotter, are included in the advance guard. Others who are to report with them are Orville Armbrust, Sid Cohen, Reese Diggs, Francis Peticolas, Hugh Mulcahy and Bob Etts.

Property of Albany.

Mulcahy and Etts are the property of the Albany club, although both performed in the Northeastern League last year. Peticolas is an 18-year-old Chicago sandlotter who had a brief tryout with the Nationals last spring.

Harris will not reach Biloxi until March 1. Until then Trainer Mike Martin will have command of the squad.

Ed Linke, the blubbery Chicago youngster, who was a victim of a puzzling arm ailment late last summer after being recalled from Chattanooga, expects to report in good condition.

Gallico Finds Fencing in Italy Thrilling But Hard on Sinews

By Paul Gallico.

VIENNA, Austria, Jan. 10 (via mail).—When I was a college student and had sold my body to Jim Rice, he used to set me to running around the gymnasium track at Columbia to strengthen my bellows for his galleys. And many an afternoon I would run just around the turn, pop into the fencing room, which opened just off the track, and watch the fencers at work. I made up my mind that there was an art and a sport that I would some day learn. And now, some 18 years later, I am just getting around to it. Next to flying, I find it the most fascinating and thrilling of all sports. In Italy, everybody fences. A fencing lesson from an Italian maestro is something to write home about, which seems to be what I am doing.

I had begun to study in New York at the Salle d'Armes of Mons. Joseph Vince, one of the best known fencing masters in America, and had time for no more than one lesson in fundamentals before I left for my vacation abroad. When I reached Rome I asked the concierge of the hotel to dig me up the best fencing master in Italy.

The next morning he sent me over to the stadium where practically all sport in Rome is concentrated and where all the commissions have their offices, and there I met Lieut. Umberto Di Paolo, sabre champion of the Roman military college. Then the fun began.

The Italian style differs considerably from the French. The French fence all curves, and very loose. The Italians are more angular, firm and snappy. Then the Italian fencing language had to be learned. Di Pavlo spoke no English. Certain commands such as "In guardia" and "pas avanti, pas in dietro"—on guard, advance, retreat—were readily enough understood, but the lunge, "Al fundo!" took me a long time. After that whenever I heard anything that sounded like al fundo, and most of it did, I made a desperate and valiant attempt to skewer the professor.

After about ten minutes' work, my knees began to cave, my legs to fold up, my arms and shoulders felt like lead. The professor barked "Al fundo." This time I just fell flat on my face. It seemed about the only thing to do. Through my interpreter I had to explain that I was fat as a pig, out of wind and out of condition and that I hurt all over. An eyebrow was lifted. Under the rule of Il Duce you are not supposed to get out of condition.

Evergold, threatening Wise Prince for the show, barely beat home Larranaga, which was in close quarters in the stretch. Kawagoe and Black Buddy, other highly regarded starters, wound up in the muck, the former after showing early speed.

Prominent figures from the sports, business and professional worlds were liberally sprinkled amongst the big throng. The Vanderbilts, Phipps, Sloanes, Bradleys, Wrights, Wideners, O'Haras, Dwyers, Kilmers, Bruens and other racing personages of national repute were squeezed in box seats, besides visiting racing commissioners and their parties here for the national convention.

Gate Is Used.

The new walk-up gate, used in races on the turf, was given its first trial in the sixth contest of a mile and a sixteenth. The nine platers broke in fairly good alignment after a couple of minutes of maneuvering. Jamison, the $5.50 favorite, sped to a three-length score. Earl Porter, the Illinois imp, rode the elderly gelding for his second victory of the day. Little Lad, which set most of the pace, headed Aladdin's Dream for the place.

The talent lost a tough one in the second race when James City, one of the few juveniles in the big field that had started, tossed off a long lead in the 7 furlongs trip down the nursery course. Deliberator, a newcomer with speedy trials to recommend him, caught the choice in the closing strides to prevail by a head, paying $18.60. The fast-tiring James City only saved the place by a half length from Higher Cloud. The latter and Free Spirit, which finished fast to be fourth, were grouped in the field. The time was :35 1-5.

Starogan Victorious.

Starogan and Opinion, second choice and favorite, respectively, came down to the wire in the order named in the third contest. Pryor was a close third. Georgie Watson, leading apprentice rider at the Tropical Park meeting, did a neat job astride Straogan. He shot the Westy Hogan filly to the front just after the start and nursed her along with a daylight advantage. Forced to a drive in the last furlong, the combination held on to win by a length and a half. Meade, who rode Opinion, did more to hinder Pryor's chances than to aid his own. The winner returned $6.70.

Tractable, recently victorious at Tropical Park, gave favorite players their initial success of the afternoon when he toyed with a fair lot of sprinters in the fourth. Following Lillian Uhl's pace to the stretch, the gelded son of White Satin swept into command and breezed to the wire four lengths to the good to pay $5.90. Long shot players got a thrill as Chancing closed with a rush to head Lillian Uhl for the runner-up position and pay a place price of $77.

Apprentice George Watson scored a double astride Ahmed, which won the last race by three lengths from Al Neiman. Big Red was third. The total handle for the day was $250,931.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCOTCH GOLD, $8.80, $4.80, $3.40; FRED ALMY, $9.90, $5.80; OCTARORO, $4.80.

SCOTCH GOLD broke well in motion, opened wide lead early and, rated along, drew away in stretch and was only galloping at end. FRED ALMY broke fast, but was crowded a bit and dropped back, but came with a rush in final three furlongs. OCTARORO was in close quarters in early part, finally got through, and finished with a rush. CAPTAIN JOY was well up all the way. DE VALERA could not get to the front. PERVID tired. IMPROMPTU ran way below top form.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Nursery course (straightaway). Purse, $800. For maiden 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:53. Off at 2:56. Winner, Everglade Stable's b. c. (2), by Wise Counsellor—Asurita. Trained by S. W. Ward. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:35 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DELIBERATOR, $18.60, $8.00, $4.80; JAMES CITY, $3.80, $3.10; HIGHER CLOUD, $4.60.

DELIBERATOR, a fine-looking colt, broke from an outside position, ran straight down, closed gamely, caught JAMES CITY at the sixteenth pole and won going away. JAMES CITY, a rapid breaker, opened a wide gap early, but tired, and just lasted to save the place. HIGHER CLOUD broke a bit slow, worked his way up and finished with a rush. FREE SPIRIT closed a big gap. FLYING FALCON showed a good effort. BUNGLER was knocked out of it just after the start. MAERIEL was badly bumped in the first furlong. CAITIFF had no chance after being bumped.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:25½. Off at 3:27. Winner, H. T. Archibald's br f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAROGAN, $6.70, $2.80, $2.60; OPINION, $2.70, $2.40; PRYOR, $3.40.

STAROGAN, under a hustling ride, rushed into lead and, rated along, held on gamely in drive. OPINION was timidly ridden and just lasted to gain the place. PRYOR broke fast, but was repeatedly bothered all during the running and ran a good race. LUCULENT forced his way through in the final sixteenth and finished fast. SQUEEZE OUT was a fair race. JUST BUCK tired.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 4:03½. Winner, G. W. Ozle's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRACTABLE, $5.90, $5.00, $4.00; CHANCING, $77.00, $28.00; LILLIAN UHL, $14.40.

TRACTABLE, on the outside, moved up gamely around turn, assumed lead entering stretch, drew out, and won nicely in hand. CHANCING moved up very fast and held on gamely. LILLIAN UHL displayed good speed, and ran a good race. SABLIN, from a slow break, came from far back. CROUT AU POT finished fast on the inside. TREY had a flash of early speed. GOLDEN SPUR broke fast, but dropped right out of all contention. He is worth noting

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Hialeah Inaugural Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:40. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMAN SOLDIER (field), $19.10, $7.30, $3.70; STAND PAT, $13.60, $6.80; WISE PRINCE, $3.60.

ROMAN SOLDIER broke very fast, ran along with the pace, made WISE PRINCE stand a fast gamefly on outside, STAND PAT broke very slow, but quickly worked his way up and, circling field, closed with a rush and was a fast-going second. WISE PRINCE showed excellent speed, saved ground all the way, and ran a good race. EVERGOLD, away slowly, went up on the outside, finished fast, and appeared to have been third in the close quarters in the stretch. NEW DEAL closed a big gap. KAWAGOE, well up in early part, stopped badly in final furlong. BOLD LOVER had a rough trip.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start fair. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:11½. Winner, W. N. Adrian' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMISON, $5.50, $4.10, $2.80; LITTLE LAD, $7.50, $4.20; ALLADINS DREAM, $2.90.

JAMISON, much the best, was rated along to the top of the stretch, where he closed gamely, took lead, and won driving away. LITTLE LAD rushed into lead, showed a decided liking for the turf course, and ran a good race. ALADDINS DREAM slipped through on inside around the turn and finished stoutly. OLD JUDGE was well up all the way. HERMIE ROY was on the outside of the field for the last five furlongs. MISS CAREFUL was blocked at the far turn.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:43½. Off at 5:44½. Winner J. J. Moran's ch. g. Twenty Grand Lame After Fast Test

Mate, and Equipoise on Track Early for Easy Workouts.

ARCADIA, Calif., Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Several leading candidates for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, to be run here February 23, took advantages of a fast track at the local race course today to test their speed in preparation for the rich mile and a quarter classic.

The most discussed of the trials among horsemen was that of Twenty Grand, which has not been seen in competition in close to three years. The 7-year-old son of St. Germans worked a fast mile in 1:40, but pulled up slightly lame after bearing out at the end of his trial.

A. C. Bostwick's Mate and C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, challengers of Sun Beau's money-winning world record, were on the track early. The Whitney star cantered 6 furlongs in 1:18 under a breeze all the way. He appears thoroughly fit and ready for action. Mate was clocked a mile in 1:43, being restrained throughout and breezing at the finish.

Jabot, a filly, and High Glee, a colt, both stablemates of Equipoise, were worked eight panels together in 1:41 3-4, while W. R. Coe's Ladysman required 1:51 to negotiate the same distance.

Eastern, Tech Favored; Maryland Cagemen, Ringmen Hosts

High School Teams Play 2 Games

Eastern Faces Roosevelt, Tech, Western Clash; Both at 3:30.

Today's Scholastic Games.
Tech vs. Western, at Roosevelt (inter-high series), 3:30 p. m.
Eastern vs. Roosevelt, at Tech (inter-high series), 3:30 p. m.
Central vs. Georgetown Prep, at Garrett Park, 3:30 p. m.
Gonzaga vs. Bethesda-Chevy Chase, at Gonzaga, 8 p. m.
Washington-Lee vs. Hopewell, at Hopewell.
Alexandria vs. Takoma-Silver Spring, at Alexandria, 8:15 p. m. (Intersuburban League.)
Rockville vs. Damascus, at Rockville.
Hyattsville vs. Bowie, at Hyattsville.
Gaithersburg vs. Mount Rainier, at Mount Rainier, 3:30 p. m.

FAVORED to pillow themselves more comfortably in the upper layer of interhigh basket ball society, Eastern and Tech resume their drive for the series championship this afternoon with Roosevelt and Western throwing their respective forces in the paths of the leaders in a more or less desperate effort to break up what has taken on the aspect of being solely a two-team race.

Eastern and Roosevelt resume relations at Tech with Tech and Western drawing the Roosevelt floor as the scene of conflict. Both games start at 3:30 p. m.

According to all indications, Eastern should shove Roosevelt rather lightly aside while Tech should stop Western and string it up alongside its other nine victims of the season.

But then on the other hand—the Rough Riders could conceivably snap themselves out of the ditch of off-form where they have been staggering around since the series started and administer a rather severe jolt to the title aspirations of the Lincoln Parkers. The latter will have Capt. Lavelle Dean, who has been on the inactive list for two days with a lame ankle, back in service.

Western May Surprise.

Western is well enough equipped to throw a mighty troublesome wrench in the smooth-working Tech machinery. While this would be a rather unexpected deed on the part of the Georgetowners, it would not be the most unbelievable upset series history has seen. Providing the Westerners are flashing the same floor game which they revealed against Eastern, Tuesday, and are matching their passing with some accurate shooting, Tech will more than have its hands full.

Western's 31-to-24 defeat at the hands of Eastern was more of its own doing than of Eastern's. The Red team was missing about three easy shots to every basket it made. From the standpoint of comparative scores, both Western and Tech have played the Georgetown, Catholic University and George Washington freshmen.

The Georgetown yearlings downed Western, 36 to 20, and Tech, 36 to 26. Western beat the Catholic U. freshmen, 26 to 23, while Tech downed the Cardinal youngsters, 33 to 25. Tech defeated the G. W. freshmen twice, 29 to 26 and 32 to 31, while the Colonials beat Tech, 50 to 33.

V. M. I. Is Facing Busy Week-End

Four of Six Events Slated With Cavalier Teams.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—V. M. I. athletes are preparing to put in a crowded week-end on the home floor, with two contests slated for Friday, three for Saturday, and one for Monday. Four of the six events are scheduled with University of Virginia teams.

Friday afternoon the Cadet and Cavalier first-year basket ball teams will clash, and the two varsities will meet at 7:15 p. m. the same day in the first of their home-and-home games. V. M. I. and Virginia boxing teams will swap punches Saturday night, with the freshman match getting under way at 7:30 and being followed by the varsity tilt.

The varsity wrestlers, fresh from their convincing victory over Duke on Monday, will meet another strong Tar Heel team Saturday afternoon when N. C. State comes to Lexington. The freshman matmen will open their season Monday against Augusta Military Academy, coached by Roy Dunn, former V. M. I. star.

Among the Hunters . . .

By M. W. Meier.

ONE of these days before January 31, we wish that President Roosevelt would develop a sudden hunger for quail on toast and would commission Col. Ed Starling to go out and get them for him.

The colonel, who is one of those chiefly responsible for the safety of the President, was telling us yesterday about his recent hunting trip to Kentucky and we couldn't help but detect his wistful thoughts as he mentioned that his shotgun was packed away for another year.

He found quail aplenty on his vacation and some of them fell to his gun, but what the colonel didn't get enough of was watching his three setters find birds and honor each other's points. The shooting didn't mean half as much as the joy of seeing good dogs flash back and forth across the fields.

Wardens on the Job.

FEDERAL game management agents, of the Biological Survey, are right on the job these days. The other morning, co-operating with Virginia wardens, they helped bring five duck violators into a Fairfax court where $14.25 fines and costs were handed out and suspended sentences of 15 days given to each violator.

The case of a man charged with shooting semitame ducks on the Roaches Run Reservation last week will be heard at the June term of Federal court in Alexandria. He is out on $250 bond and is facing a battery of charges that range from violating an international treaty to shooting at night.

Duck Food Scarce.

MANY readers of this column have frequently called our attention to the fact that natural foods of wildfowl are ever so scarce in adjacent waters and marshes. This has also been our own observation on the few trips we were able to make along the Chesapeake and Wicomico.

Sportsmen who had blinds along tidal waters this past season had little or no sport because there were no ducks. A few other men who have blinds on fresh water, well back from the coast, made a few good bags. They attributed it sheerly to the fact there was plenty of feed.

We earnestly recommend to the Biological Survey and the State game departments of Virginia and Maryland, that a survey be made this year of the status of natural foods for wildfowl.

It is useless to hope for game and make additional prohibitions for their protection unless there is ample food to both attract them and maintain them.

V. P. I. Boxers To Invade Tomorrow

C. U. Soundly Trounced Last Year, Favored; Fleming Moves Up.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S ringmen will face a revamped Virginia Polytechnic team tomorrow night at Brookland, where the two resume their fistic warfare at 8 o'clock.

The Gobblers swamped Coach Ed LaFond's team last year at Blacksburg, winning by a score of 6½ to 1½, it looks as if the Redbirds will adjust matters tomorrow. Only Capt. Ed Thibideau and "Red" Fleming are left from the team that bowed to the Virginians last winter.

Thibideau scored the Cards' only victory, winning the nod over Fred Hall, V. P. I.'s 135-pounder, after flooring him for a nine count in the first round. Hall originally was scheduled to fight at 125 pounds this year, but he appears in the 135-pound class on the revamped list.

Callahan Is Polished.

Callahan is a sophomore—one of seven who will appear in the Tech line-up, but all reputedly carry a punch as potent and dangerous as a stick of dynamite.

Charles Hull will be Tech's 115-pounder. Buddy Herman, a Washington youth, has been installed in the 145-pound class, while Francis Dillon will hold forth in the 155-pound division. Will Rothery, 165-pounds, and Mel Carmel, 175-pounds, and Frank Rankin or Zip Zimmerman, heavyweight, complete the Gobblers' line-up.

Two changes have been made in Catholic's line-up because of an injury to Heavyweight Danny Pyne's shoulder. Red Fleming will take Pyne's berth, and George Mulligan will handle the 175-pound assignment.

Harpers Ferry High Quintet Bows, 28-15

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—The Harpers Ferry High School basket ball team received a 28-to-15 setback last night in Front Royal, Va., at the hands of the Randolph-Macon Academy five.

The first half was closely contested, with the Virginians on the long end of the 19-to-9 score at half time. The Ferrians were unable to cope with the winners after the half. McFall scored 13 points for the Academy five and Clevenger paced the losers with 8.

Duke Five Is Host To C. U. Tonight

Swimming Meet Also Is on Today's Card.

Durham, N. C., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Defeated for the first time in seven games by North Carolina State Tuesday night, Duke University's basket ball team will attempt to return to winning ways when it meets Catholic University in Duke gym tomorrow night.

The last day before semester examinations start at Duke will be a big one. The swimming team, Southern Conference champs last year, opens its 1935 card by meeting the crack Fort Monroe team in the Duke pool tomorrow afternoon.

The varsity basket ball game will start at 8:15 o'clock and the undefeated Duke freshman cagers will play a preliminary game with Massanutten prep beginning at 7:15.

Most of the Catholic U. players are members of the football team at the institution and are veteran members of the cage team of 1934, which won 13 out of 17 games, including a 33-31 victory over Duke.

Middletown Boys Win Over Brunswick, 28-11

Brunswick, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Brunswick and Middletown divided honors in the Southern division of the County High School Basket Ball League, Middletown boys taking the first game, 28 to 11, and the Brunswick girls copping the second fray, 20 to 7. Summary of boys' game:

Takoma Plays Alexandria Tonight

Brewer and Lynch, Two of Twins' Regulars, Will Return to Action.

ALEXANDRIA, Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Alexandria High School's basket ball team takes the floor tomorrow night against Takoma-Silver Spring High in an Intersuburban League game at Armory Hall. The game will start at 8:15 o'clock, preceded by a preliminary between the Twin reserves and the Old Dominion Boat Club five.

Frank Brewer and Jack Lynch, the varsity's veteran forward and center, will be back in action tomorrow after three days on the sidelines. Brewer's badly bruised arm has improved and Lynch has recovered from a heavy cold. Apperson will pair with Brewer at forward, with Nugent and McMenniman at guards.

Manager Theodore Beach, of the St. Mary's Celtics, was appointed chairman of the new Alexandria Senior Basket Ball League tonight at a meeting at the Gazette office. A schedule is being arranged. The loop will open on January 22 with A. L. I. and the Central Seniors playing the first game and the Temples and DeMolay Seniors in the nightcap.

It was decided that two games will be played each week, generally on Wednesday nights, as preliminaries to the St. Mary's Celtic games. Other rules made were as follows: All games will be refereed by Buddy Zimmerman, Celtic star; the most valuable player shall receive a gold medal; the winning team is to receive a trophy and its members gold basket balls and each player must submit 10 cents to help defray the league expenses, the fee to be paid before each game.

The Washington Renrocs will play the Columbia Firemen at 8:15 p. m. Saturday at Armory Hall. The preliminary will be between the Oakton A. A. and the DeMolays, starting at 7:15 p. m.

Shepherd's Girls Will Open Season

Face Shenandoah Sextet in Inaugural Tonight.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Shepherd's girls basket ball schedule calls for their opening game here tomorrow night against Shenandoah College, of Dayton, Va., in a double-header. The local team plans a nine-game schedule this season.

The second encounter also is a home game and the most interesting of the season—against Harrisonburg (Va.) State Teachers College.

Although Miss Dilts, coach, is having difficulty in the selection of a center, the other five positions are being held by veterans. Forwards include Eunice Bush, Ina Irvin and Helen Cook.

Mt. Rainier Girls Win.

Mount Rainier High's girl sextet downed Alexandria High, 25-16, yesterday on the Mounts' floor. The Virginia lassies trailed all the way, Mount Rainier holding a 13-6 lead at half time. Ina Sager, Mounts, and A. Shapiro, Alexandria, each counted 14 points.

the varsity, did as well as may be expected in losing a decision to Jim McCall.

So dismal was the outlook at North Carolina State before the season opened that officials seriously were considering dropping boxing for the rest of the season. The Wolfpack, however, defeated South Carolina, 5 to 3, in its opening dual meet, heartening the officials to such an extent that the sport may be allowed to remain for the balance of the season.

Lost in Four Divisions.

Carolina lost to State in the 125, 135, 145 and 155 pound divisions and forfeited in the 165-pound class.

Taylor, of South Carolina, won a passive victory in the 115-pound class when State forfeited. Tate, who wasn't even figured on as a possibility for the varsity at the beginning of the training season, handled the 125-pound berth nicely by decisioning Jenkins, of Carolina. Penland was whittled down from the 155 pounds that was his as a freshman to the 135-pound division. He fared well at the lighter weight, winning on a technical knockout from Cardwell, Carolina's lightweight.

Seaman Hudson, 145-pound puncher of the 1933 State frosh squad, started the season auspiciously by winning on a technical knockout from Humphlett. Regdon, the star of State's 1935 aggregation, won on a forfeit in the 175-pound division, and Johnson, heavyweight, decisioned Brown for State's other victory.

All Montgomery Fives Will See Action Today

For the first time this season the seven Montgomery County High Schools will see action on the same day, two league battles, an intersuburban contest and two outside games being today's card.

Rockville High, tied for the league lead with Bethesda and winner of its last six games, will entertain Damascus. Sherwood High will visit Poolesville. Silver Spring visits the Alexandria Armory at night in an inter-suburban game. Gaithersburg tangles with Mount Ranier on the latter's court and Bethesda plays at Gonzaga at 7:30.

Tarheel Five Undefeated This Year

Is Favorite Over Terps; Richmond's Boxers Also Invade.

A CORPS of young, rugged athletes will abandon their roles of Southern gentlemen tonight long enough to toss a few baskets and throw a few punches at Ritchie Coliseum, where Maryland encounters North Carolina on the court and Richmond in the ring.

Basket ball inaugurates the program at 8 p. m. with the undefeated Tarheels top-heavy favorites to add the Terrapins to their growing list of victims. Riding high on the crest of a seven-game winning streak, Carolina leads the Southern Conference race with four straight triumphs.

Maryland has been an in-and-outer, winning half of its six games. Its conference record shows two victories in three starts, but Burt Shipley's men hope to improve it tonight. Maryland holds a 9-6 edge in their series inaugurated in 1924, scoring one of its victories in the 1931 tournament, when the Terps copped the championship.

Three Good Shots.

"Mac" McCachren, Carolina's star guard, was named on the All-Conference quintet last season, while Glace and Aitken, forward and center, were nominated for the second team. The trio rank with the best shots-in Southern basket ball circles.

While the Terp dribblers will go into action as the underdog, the punching brigade will be a prohibitive favorite over Richmond. The Spiders, who lost their initial match to Duke, will enter the lists without two star mittmen, Jack Dobson and Dave Scott.

Dobson's nose, the target for a hard punch tossed by a sparring partner in training, was damaged too much to permit his boxing. Scott failed to make his weight of 125 pounds because of bad ankles which prevented him from doing road work. Richmond will have to forfeit in the heavyweight class, where Dobson held forth, while Ray Lanier, the fighting parson, will substitute for Scott.

To Start Same Team.

Coach Jack Harmony intends to start the same team that spanked V. M. I. last week and won by a 6-2 score. The entire squad is in good physical condition.

The boxing line-up:

Maryland.	Weight.	Richmond.
Young	115	Wills
Waller	125	Lanier
Nedomatsky	135	Crenshaw
Webb	145	Kradin
McAboy	155	Tanore
Herbleb	165	Vaughn
McCaw	175	Unannounced

Cumberland May Join Golf League

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Cumberland golfers are interested in a proposed league uniting the local club with five clubs in northern West Virginia, Clarksburg, Morgantown, Kingwood, Elkins and Fairmont, and two in Pennsylvania, Waynesburg and Uniontown. The league is being sponsored by Reggie Spencer, professional of the Fairmont Field Club, Fairmont. Cumberland is the only Maryland club quickly accessible to all points named.

Details of the organization remain to be worked out, but a schedule of team matches will be arranged for the summer, and the season will be brought to a close with a 36-hole medal-play tournament with eight golfers from each club entered.

The tournament is to be rotated among the member clubs, but will be held at Fairmont this year. Prizes to the winning eight will be furnished by the host club. Team matches during the season will not count toward a championship.

Berger and Heurich, Jr., On Radio Hour Tonight

Bozey Berger, who made the all-American basket ball team while playing at University of Maryland, and Chris Heurich, jr., local sportsman, will be interviewed tonight at 6:30 o'clock on Bill Coyle's rapid-fire broadcast, "The Sports Parade," over Station WMAL. Berger is guard on the Heurich Brewers backed by Chris Heurich, jr. They will be interviewed regarding the basket ball game Sunday with the Newark Pros.

Harris to Attend New Gym Opening

Other Baseball Figures to Be at Heurich's Game.

Bucky Harris, Washington baseball manager, will make the first toss-up at Sunday's basket ball game between Heurich's Professionals and the Newark Mules, of the Eastern League, officially dedicating Chris Heurich's new gymnasium at Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest.

Harris yesterday accepted Heurich's invitation to play a leading part in the opening ceremonies. Others who have consented to be on hand are Nick Altrock, comedian-coach; Mike Martin, baseball trainer, and Joe Judge.

Newark, runner-up for the first half in the American loop and boasting such stars as Lou Spindell, Benny Borgeman, Tiny Hearne, Honey Russell and George Chazmania, will clash with Heurich shortly after the first half of the preliminary between the Heurich Flashes and Parvey's Comets.

D. C. Handball Team Faces Pittsburgh 'Y'

A four-man handball team, representing the local Y. M. C. A., entrained last night for Pittsburgh, where it is scheduled to match strokes this afternoon with the Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A.

The meet will consist of three singles and two doubles matches, the best three of five, to determine the winner. The men making the trip for Washington are Capt. John B. Payne, Joe Cowley, manager; Perrie McLean and Paul Pearlman.

N. E. Club Wins Two.

Northeast Boys' Club teams broke even in games with the Merrick Boys' Club last night. The Northeast Cardinals won from Hall Pharmacy.

George, Browning To Wrestle Here

City's Most Important Match Next Thursday.

Two of matdom's foremost growlers will be brought together at the Washington Auditorium next Thursday night when Ed (Don) George, co-claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, and Jim Browning, former claimant, engage in a two-out-of-three-fall exhibition.

Unquestionably the most important heavyweight mat match ever presented here, if that's your idea of fun, this bout was made possible late yesterday when Browning declined an offer made by Ray Fabiani, Philadelphia promoter, and agreed to oppose George here. In so doing he automatically eliminated Dick Shikat, who also was under consideration for the exhibition here.

If anything, Browning's record here is superior to that of George. Whereas Everett Marshall puffed and pulled to a two-hour draw with George here last summer and Sandor Szabo twice extended him to the utmost and Tor Johansen gained a fall over him, Browning has seldom been extended here and has yet to be carried over the one-hour mark.

Keyser Golden Knights Win First Half Crown

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—William and Harold Miers went on a scoring spree last night, registered 13 of their team's 16 field goals and led the Keyser Golden Knights to a 37-to-32 victory over the Westvaco A. Wheat Values Move Higher; Weather Aids

Active Cotton Buying Follows Fixing Crop Figures for 1935.

Chicago, Jan. 17 (AP).—In the face of uncertainty as to the outcome of gold clause cases before the United States Supreme Court, grain values tended mostly upward today.

Menace of a severe cold wave in the domestic grain belt, together with renewal of dust storms Southwest, had a bullish effect.

There were also advices that the Argentine government had sold for export its total holdings of old-crop wheat, and that Argentine new-crop wheat was disappointing, with arrivals a month behind normal.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅝ higher; May, 97 to 97⅛; corn, ¼ to ⅝ up; oats, ¼ to ¾ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 30 cents.

Indications pointed to prospects Argentina's wheat shipments from the new crop will be late, and be of a kind which will necessitate good-sized European purchases of North American wheat to be used for mixing. In some quarters, however, the wheat situation in Canada was regarded as a danger to United States markets.

Bears contended that if Canada's surplus wheat did not begin to move abroad in volume within the next five or six weeks, the Canadian government might decide to lower the official minimum price, and that if this were not done the pressure to sell low-grade feed wheat to the United States would increase, causing a tendency to pull prices down both for domestic wheat and corn.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Announcement of the Bankhead bill allotment for 1935 proved the signal for an active buying movement in cotton today and a sharp advance in prices followed. May contracts, which had been sold at 12.47 during the morning, advanced to 12.63 in the late trading and closed at 12.60, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 12 to 28 points, the new crop positions being relatively firm.

Moving quietly and narrowly in the forenoon, the market shot up rapidly after publication of the Washington announcement around midday.

It was further stated that it would be the purpose to permit producers participating in the voluntary acreage program to rent up to 35 per cent of their base acreage and receive payment therefor.

Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 17 (AP).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—A very moderate and irregular trade was being received in the finer grades of Western wools. The bulk of the sales were on average to short staple fine and fine wool. Original bag lots of this grade brought mostly 67@70, scoured basis, for strictly to good combing, and 63@65 for short French combing and clothing. Choice fine fleeces and strictly combing staple lines of Western wools were quiet. Extreme 12-month Texas wool, spot Boston, were across a call at 68@70, scoured basis.

Decline in Passenger Earnings of Railroads Checked in 1934, But Returns Still Remain Small, and Executives Fear Further Losses, Observer Says.

New York, Jan. 17.—While railroad earnings from freight service have improved materially from the low level registered in 1932, income from passenger business has remained at the lowest point in decades. In fact, on certain railroads, passenger revenues continue to decline to new low levels.

One basic cause for the financial ills of American railways has undoubtedly been the continuous large-scale shift in passenger traffic to automobile and motor buses. From a high point of $1,288,000,000 in 1920, railway passenger revenues declined almost without interruption to $377,000,000 in 1932, a contraction of more than 70 per cent. In 1933, when freight revenues showed a moderate rise over 1932, passenger revenues actually dropped by almost 13 per cent more to $329,000,000. For 1934, preliminary indications are that passenger revenues rose slightly over 1933, to perhaps $350,000,000.

While it thus appears that the very drastic decline in railroad passenger revenues ceased last year, the actual profit from passenger travel was probably smaller. The reason for this is that railroad passenger fares can not be kept up in the same way that the level of freight rates has been maintained during the depression. Railroad executives are becoming convinced that a further loss of passenger business will occur if they do not take steps to keep people traveling on the railroads through making rates more attractive. These reductions in passenger fares are undoubtedly very sound economically. In fact, they are necessary to retain and to increase the remaining greatly reduced passenger business of the carriers. However, their immediate effect is to reduce earnings further.

The physical volume of passenger business on American railroads actually expanded after 1932, much as did the freight traffic. The best single measure of passenger traffic, the total passenger-miles carried, increased 5.3 per cent in 1933 over 1932, and 9.4 per cent in 1934 over 1932. Naturally, operating expenses were increased materially by recovery in the volume of passenger travel. On the other hand, passenger revenues, as already seen, were lower both in 1933 and 1934 than they were in 1932, causing a reduction in the earnings obtained by the railroads from this source.

The railroads of the country, in point of fact, have a much better grip on their freight business than they have on their passenger traffic. In the transportation of bulky commodities, especially over longer distances, the railroads of the United States remain a near-monopoly over many routes. On the other hand, in passenger travel competition of the private automobile and the bus, and latterly the aeroplane over longer distances, has been extremely effective.

Outside of commutation traffic, which tends to be relatively steady, severe slashing of fares has been very common. For a number of years, the standard passenger rate was 3.6 cents per mile. In southern territory, the basic fare on coaches is now 1.5 cents per mile, and special rates below 2 cents a mile have been established in western territory, also. The Pullman surcharge of 50 per cent of the price of the Pullman ticket has been eliminated in southern and western territory, being replaced by higher mileage fares.

In the East, however, the railroads have been far more hesitant about cutting fares. Several of the lines, such as the New Haven, continue to obtain quite a large part of their revenues from carrying passengers, and a blanket slash in rates would be a serious thing for them financially. However, those railroads which have refused to make general reductions in fares have in many instances suffered further losses in their volume of traffic. Both passenger-miles and passenger revenues on the New Haven have declined substantially further under the 1932 level, while other railroads were able to stem the fall in such traffic by rate cuts.

Efforts Made to Revive Railway Passenger Travel.

Coordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman has made a thorough study of the passenger traffic of the railroads, to determine what policies would be likely to revive travel by rail. The Interstate Commerce Commission has launched a broad investigation into railroad passenger fares and surcharges, to determine their reasonableness. Individual railroads have purchased streamlined trains to meet modern conditions, although to date only a slight fraction of the passenger travel of the country can be accommodated in such new trains as have been installed or ordered to date.

The railroads of the country have made an enormous investment in passenger facilities. Having lost about three-fourths of the passenger business they had in 1920, as measured by revenues, this investment is now largely nonproductive. In fact, many lines estimate that their passenger revenues do not nearly cover the operating expenses attributable to this part of their business. However, even to hold the passenger business they have left, many railroads, especially in eastern territory, will probably have to make further downward readjustments in rates.

In the long run, modernization of services and lowering of rates, even more than business recovery, must be relied upon to bring about a recovery in railroad earning power from passenger traffic. However, such a program will require a large new investment which few railroads are now in position to make.

Bond Market Records Gains In Quiet Sales

Tone Is Steady at Close as Trading Drops to $10,249,000.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Trading was quiet and trends were moderately mixed throughout most of today's bond market session, but the list picked up sufficient firmness in the late afternoon to close with a fairly steady tone.

The volume was a little under that of yesterday, transfers totaling $10,249,000, par value. The Associated Press average for 20 rails was up .20 of a point, that for 10 industrials gained .42, the one for 10 utilities improved .35 while the composite for 10 low-yield issues was .10 of a point better.

Although United States Government securities were rather dull, the majority of both gold and nongold issues registered advances of 1-32nd to 10-32nds of a point.

Secondary corporation loans were still a bit irregular, but prime investment bonds were about unchanged to slightly higher. There were a few outstanding gainers.

Kelly-Springfield 6s were unusually active and fractionally higher at 53. Among losers of fractions to a point or so were Wabash first 5s at 93½, Union Pacific first 4s at 108, Northern Pacific 4½s at 86½ and Southern Railway 4s at 58.

The foreign section was spotty. Austrian government 7s advanced 1½ to 94½ and Denmark 6s were up 1 at 104. At the same time German government 5½s yielded 2 at 32½ and the 7s were down 1⅛ at 42¾. South American issues were easier.

Cotton Yield In Bales Fixed At 10,500,000

Wallace Bases Production Limit for 1935 on Bankhead Figure.

(Associated Press.)

Cotton production for 1935 was fixed yesterday by Secretary Wallace at 10,500,000 bales of 500 pounds each.

The 1935 quota represented an increase of approximately 1,224,000 bales over 1934. The 1934 quota was 10,476,000 bales of 478 pounds net weight.

The quota in bales of 478 pounds net weight and last year's carryover would bring the total to 11,700,000 bales.

Secretary Wallace also announced that under the voluntary cotton adjustment program producers would be allowed to make an additional cut in acreage up to 35 per cent of their base acreage and receive additional benefit payments.

Under the adjustment program as originally announced farmers were asked to reduce acreage between 25 and 30 per cent.

Stocks—Traders displayed little enthusiasm, although there were signs that nervousness over the pending gold case was passing. Stocks advanced a fraction and sales volume increased to 736,080 shares.

Bonds—Firmness and a steady tone marked closing transactions. Federals were rather dull. Prices averaged higher. Sales decreased in volume to $10,249,000.

Curb—Prices held in a narrow channel. The list as a whole closed mixed. Sales dropped to 106,000 shares.

Wheat—Threatened cold wave in wheat belt aided in pointing prices higher. Corn and oats joined the advance. May wheat sold at 97; July at 88½.

Cotton—Announcement of the Bankhead cotton allotment for the 1935 crop caused active buying and prices climbed 12 to 28 points. January sold at 12.46; May, at 12.60.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.80. Refined, unchanged, at 4.30 for fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was dull. Santos, No. 4, closed at 11 and Rio, No. 7, closed at 9¼.

Silver—Bar silver was steady and unchanged in New York at 54¼. In London it was firm, at 1-16 pence higher. Closed at 25⅝ pence. (U. S. equivalent, 54.1 cents.)

Gold—Bar gold sold in London at 5 pence higher, at 141 shillings 11 pence. (U. S. equivalent, $34.61.)

Dollar—The United States dollar stood firm in foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.88 to the English pound; 6.57⅛ to the French franc, and 40 cents to the German mark.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A more unsettled tone prevailed on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities, industrials, oil shares, and transatlantic stocks improved under the resumption of buying in these sections, but foreign issues, especially German bonds, eased. The market closed irregularly.

Paris—Although prices improved, the trend was irregular on the bourse today. Rentes were lower, bank and international issues steady, and Suez and De Beers stocks strong. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—After a hesitant opening, prices improved on the boerse today owing to increased buying. The closing was resistant.

Reichsbank Statement.

Berlin, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Reichsbank statement as of January 15, shows the following changes in reichsmarks: Gold and bullion increased 34,000; reserve in foreign currencies decreased 172,000; bills of exchange and cheques decreased 154,176,000; silver and other coins increased 41,206,000; notes on other banks increased 1,869,000; advances decreased 14,347,000; investments decreased 3,697,000; other assets decreased 22,597,000; notes in circulation decreased 121,330,000; other maturing obligations decreased 748,000; other liabilities decreased 30,103,000. Daily Credits of Reserve Banks Average Unchanged for Week

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended January 16, as reported by the Federal Reserve Banks, was $2,464,000,000, unchanged from the preceding week and $194,000,000 less than in the corresponding week in 1934.

On January 16 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,468,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 for the week. Increases of $105,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $21,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $4,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency were practically offset by decrease of $38,000,000 in money in circulation and $75,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and an increase of $15,000,000 in monetary gold stock.

Bills discounted increased $9,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, $2,000,000 at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and $10,000,000 at all Federal Reserve Banks. There was practically no change in holdings of bills bought in open market and United States Government securities.

Changes in the amount of Reserve Bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended January 16, 1935, were as follows:

C. & O. Road Net Drops to $27,917,246

Spaulding & Brothers Reduce Net Loss to $672,301.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The preliminary report of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. for the year ended Dec. 31 shows net income of $27,917,246 after taxes, charges and sinking fund appropriations, equivalent after dividend requirements on the 6½ per cent preferred stock to $3.65 a share on the common stock. In 1933 the company had net income of $28,101,603 or $3.67 a share. December net income was $2,134,477 against $2,071,205 in December, 1933.

A. G. Spaulding & Bros. reports for the fiscal year ended October 31 net loss from operations of $672,301 against net loss of $1,962,002 for the preceding year. Net sales were $12,738,997 compared with $11,061,376.

Houdaille Hershey Corporation declared a dividend of $2 on the class A preference stock on account of accumulations. This reduced payments in arrears to $2.37½, the dividend is payable February 5 to stock of record January 30.

N.Y. Court Upholds Old Dollar Parity

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—An order of Supreme Court Justice Aaron Steuer on file today requires the Bethlehem Steel Co., in effect, to pay interest on an issue of bonds at the old gold parity of the dollar.

The decision was in a suit brought by the City Bank Farmers Trust Co., holding as trustee 60 $1,000 Bethlehem bonds which provided for payment of interest either in dollars, pounds or Dutch guilders at set rates.

The bank tried to collect the interest due on the bonds in guilders in Amsterdam in November, 1933. Payment by the company would have amounted to paying at the old value of the dollar. It was refused, and the present suit was brought.

Justice Steuer ordered payment of $2,437, the amount sought, without making any reference to the constitutionality of the gold clause, attacked by the plaintiff's as unconstitutional. The amount of interest due in terms of the dollar, according to the defendant's contention, was $1,500.

Rediscount Rate Unchanged.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank today announced no change in its rediscount rate of 1½ per cent.

Stocks Crawl Up Slightly as Gold Fear Ebbs

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Traders in financial markets today still displayed little enthusiasm for making new commitments, but nervousness appeared to be passing.

A slightly firmer tone appeared in stocks and the major commodities.

Price changes in the stock market were generally narrow, but the undertone appeared better, with gains slightly outweighing losses.

Gold Uneasiness Subsides.

A further signal that uneasiness over the coming decision of the Supreme Court in the gold clause cases was subsiding was seen in some Wall Street quarters in the revival of interest in the preferred stocks, a number of which were more than usually active today at rising prices.

A score or more of senior stock issues, ranging from those not now paying dividends to some of the highest grade investment preferreds, showed advances of from a point to as much as 4 points, and buyers appeared to be nibbling at this class of securities all up and down the list.

Westinghouse preferred at 97½ was a full 4 points up, and other preferreds registering rises of 1 to 3 points or so included issues of Associated Dry Goods, Commonwealth & Southern, Consolidated Gas, McCrory Stores, Warner Bros., Blumenthal, Mullins Manufacturing, American Smelting, United States Gypsum, Spicer Manufacturing and West Penn Electric.

Social Security Message.

The President's social security message, delivered in the middle of the trading session, created hardly a stir, being largely, it was agreed in Wall Street circles, in line with previous expectations.

A number of stock issues were able to register substantial gains after the terms of the President's address had become known, including General Electric, which attracted late following to rise 1½ points at 23¼.

Among stocks steady to fractionally lower were Union Pacific, General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, International Harvester and Public Service of New Jersey.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

World foreign exchange markets lost some of the enthusiasm shown in recent sessions for the dollar, and leading foreign moneys generally gained ground in relation to the American unit.

American balances were likewise offered at a concession in Paris at the equivalent of 6.6572 cents for the French franc, while in New York the franc advanced .00¾ of a cent to 6.57¼ cents.

In New York, guilders, at 67.34 cents, were .06 of a cent up, Swiss francs rose a similar amount to 32.28 cents and belgas were .04 of a cent better at 23.29 cents.

Bank Clearings in Past Week Gain 36 Per Cent

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Bank clearings again exceeded by a large amount the record for the same week a year ago, said Dun & Bradstreet today. The total for 22 leading cities was $5,696,360,000 against $4,183,092,000 for the corresponding week last year, an increase of 36.3 per cent.

The increase was largely at New York, where operations in some of the speculative markets added materially to the total. This city's aggregate of $3,975,138,000 was 44.2 per cent greater than the amount reported a year ago. The aggregate for centers outside of New York was $1,721,222,000, a gain of 20.7 per cent.

The total for the second week of January was above that for the opening week of the New Year by $323,420,000.

Curb's Prices Change Little In Light Sales

List Closes Mixed as Trading Volume Drops to 106,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Prices held in a narrow channel on the curb exchange today as traders deserted the market for a sideline position. With the exception of some specialties, variations were fractional.

A few scattered declines appeared. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore lost about a point, but other utilities including Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric were generally steady. Lake Shore was a firm spot among the metals.

Steady to slightly higher prices prevailed in American Cyanamid B, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hiram Walker, Newmont, Pioneer Gold, International Petroleum, A. O. Smith, Swift & Co. and Sherwin Williams.

C. A. Mackey Is Elected By Coffee & Sugar Mart

New York, Jan. 17.—Chandler A. Mackey was today elected president of the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange, Inc., succeeding William H. English, jr.

Mr. Mackey follows in the footsteps of his father who was closely identified with the founding of the exchange in 1882. One of the most prized possessions of Mr. Mackey is the embossed resolution presented to him in honor of his father, who at the time of his death in 1931, was the last surviving charter member of the exchange. The elder Mackey had been associated with the coffee trade for over 50 years.

Use of Crude Rubber Rises to 36,662 Tons

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers in the United States during December amounted to 36,662 long tons compared with 34,842 tons in November, according to reports to the Rubber Manufacturers Association.

Stocks on hand at the end of the year were estimated at 352,632 long tons against 361,236 on November 30.

Exports of Grain Rise 256,498 Units In Week

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Wheat and corn exports from United States and Canadian ports during the week ended January 12 amounted to 1,947,836 bushels compared with 1,691,338 in the previous week and 4,042,082 bushels in the same week last year, according to reports to Dun & Bradstreet.

Bank Rate Reduced.

pended. There are too many young college graduates, not taxpayers, whose only idea is to pile up the case load." He said he felt Maryland was paying too large a share of the relief burden.

3—He quoted from the 1934 State Republican platform that "waste and extravagance of the State administration were responsible for the present excessive and burdensome taxes." Veasey added, "It seems to me that such waste and extravagance should be pointed out to the Legislature and corrected before new taxes are asked."

Gov. Nice late today issued a statement replying to Veasey's address. It said:

Nice Issues Statement.

"Senator Veasey is entirely within the record in saying that Maryland is carrying a greater proportion of the relief load than is right and proper, but obviously if that be the motive of criticism it can not be criticism of myself, but must be criticism of the Federal Government.

"When we realize that Mississippi paid only 1 per cent and Maryland paid nearly 50 per cent of her burden, such inequity is not attributable to me, since I have only functioned as Governor for one week.

"The Senator is in error when he says I desire Maryland to pay 45 per cent this year, which is a greater per cent than in 1933. I do not want Maryland to pay any of it. Mr. Harry L. Hopkins and the Federal Administration say that Maryland must pay 45 per cent. Certainly I am not controller of the amount of judgment rendered by the Federal administrator and Mr. Hopkins.

Counties' Aid Asked.

"The amount, or very nearly that amount, that we are forced to raise through the ultimatum of the Federal Government is even now less than the amount tactly agreed upon by the former administration, so that while I am sure the Senator was talking from a conviction in his own mind that taxes for these purposes should be avoided if possible, yet I feel that he will be fair and not make chargeable to me a condition which I have inherited and over which I have no control other than to insist upon the rehabilitation of the State from a financial standpoint, such rehabilitation being necessary because of my inheritance of a deficit, which deficit is $2,300,000, to say nothing of $500,000 for depletion of oysters and a million as a result of neglect to provide adequate housing facilities for the insane and utter failure to have heretofore enacted old-age pension laws and provided financial means for their functioning.

"If the counties and Baltimore City can be brought in line with the thought expressed by Senator Veasey, the problem of the State as a State in caring and providing for the distressed is completely out of the picture. I do hope that the counties will see fit to follow Senator Veasey's lead."

Boston Threatens Ban On 'Within Gates' Books

Boston, Jan. 17 (AP).—Not content with barring O'Casey's "Within the Gates" from Boston's boards, censorious eyes were turned tonight on the book of the play.
After denying the appeal of a Boston theater which wished to produce the play next Monday, Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield handed a copy of the book to Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard, with instructions to read it, consult the district attorney if he found it objectionable and have sale of the book prohibited.

even though their falsity is subsequently established; provided, of course, that the comment or censure does not exceed the limits of fair and reasonable inference from the facts stated."
In another of the 26 opinions handed down today the court upheld the Town of Richland in its passage of an ordinance forbidding sale of 3.2 beer within 300 feet of a public school. The case came before the court on an appeal of J. G. Repass and others from a decree of the Tazewell circuit court, which also ruled in favor of the town's rights.
The right of Love B. Rouse, Commonwealth's attorney of Bristol, to retain that office after accepting appointment as district attorney for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, was upheld in another opinion confirming the action of the Bristol corporation court which had declined to grant a petition by J. E. Kelly for the removal of Rouse from office.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding an Equity Court. Lily Scott et al., Plaintiffs, vs. Frank Tomlinson et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 57606. Order of Publication. The object of this suit is to secure the substitution of trustees under two deeds of trust, one dated October 25, 1930, covering lots 33, 806 and 807, in square 211, and recorded in Liber 6496, at folio 353 et seq., securing payment of promissory notes totaling $200,000, made by Frank Tomlinson; the other dated September 15, 1930, covering lot 807, in said square 211, and recorded in Liber 6444, at folio 315 et seq., securing an indebtedness in the sum of $7,000, to the Union Trust Company of the District of Columbia, as trustee under the will of Katherine E. McNally, deceased; to have foreclosure sales thereunder; to have a money decree against Frank Tomlinson for any deficiency due on the notes secured by said deed of trust first above mentioned after said foreclosure sales; and for other purposes. It is, therefore, this 10th day of January, 1935, ordered that the defendants, Frank Tomlinson, and Beulah R. Tomlinson appear in this Court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise as to them the cause will be proceeded with as in the case of default. Provided, that a copy of this order shall be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, or other or further publication being dispensed with for good cause shown. JESSE C. ADKINS, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. By HARRY M. HULL, Assistant Clerk. 11.18.25

AUCTION SALES

FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1935—
THOMAS J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers.
1431 Eye Street N.W.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE, BEING A THREE-STORY BRICK DWELLING, CONTAINING NINE ROOMS AND BATH, AND TWO-STORY BRICK GARAGE, KNOWN AS 640 F STREET SOUTHWEST.
By virtue of a certain deed of trust recorded in liber No. 6228, at folio 301, of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustee will sell at public auction in front of the premises on FRIDAY, THE TWENTY-FIFTH DAY OF JANUARY, 1935, AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises situate in the District of Columbia, and being lot numbered thirteen (13), in Church and Herron's subdivision of lots in square numbered four hundred and sixty-seven (467), as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in liber R. W., at folio 56. Also part of lot numbered nine (9), in said subdivision, and part of alley closed, described as follows: Beginning at the southeast corner of said lot numbered nine (9) and running thence north 27 feet 3 inches to the southeast corner of said lot numbered thirteen (13); thence west with the south line of said lot numbered thirteen (13), 16 feet 10 inches; thence south 27 feet 3 inches to the south line of said lot numbered nine (9); thence with said last-mentioned line east 16 feet 10 inches to the place of beginning.
TERMS OF SALE: Purchaser to pay one-fourth of the purchase price in cash, the balance in three installments in one, two and three years, respectively, with interest at the rate of six (6) per centum per annum, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash at the option of the purchaser; taxes paid or adjusted to the date of sale; purchaser to pay interest on purchase price from date of sale to date of settlement at six (6) per centum per annum; all conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc. at the cost of the purchaser; good title or no sale. A deposit of $250.00 will be required at the time of sale and settlement to be within thirty (30) days of the date of sale or deposit forfeited and the property resold at the cost and risk of the defaulting purchaser, after five (5) days' previous advertising of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. Walt Mason, Himself

Doctor's Orders.

The doctor tells me what to eat, to cure the chilblains in my feet, the spavins on my knees; I have to cut out fish and ham, and all varieties of jam, and live on toast and cheese. Alas, the doctor can not stand forevermore at my right hand to watch what I devour; he has his patients here and there, he must be chasing everywhere, a new case every hour. Temptations come when he's away; there is a large mince pie today upon the groaning board; it will not hurt to eat a slice; a little pie will cut no ice, much comfort 'twill afford. And there's a handsome currant cake, it will not hurt me if I take a pound or so of that; tomorrow morning I'll get back to toast and cheese and such hard tack, you bet your Sunday hat. Methinks I'll eat a slab of fish—which is against the doctor's wish—it's fried so nice and brown; of course his nibs would raise a row if he should come and see me now, he'd wear a frightful frown. But just for once I'll shoo him out and eat a half a foot of trout, spaghetti on the side; the human appetite decrees a better fare than toast and cheese, it will not be denied. The doc comes back and finds me worse; "You'll soon be ready for the hearse," he says, in bitter tones; "unless you follow what I say and throw these luscious foods away you'll never make old bones." He leaves me scared when he departs, and for a day, by fits and starts, I eat the cheese and toast; then I warm up my frozen feet, and sit me down in peace to eat the things that please me most.

Wells Issues Invitations for Annual Meeting at The Willard.

Invitations have been sent out by Chester Wells, president of the District of Columbia Council, Boy Scouts of America, to all commissioners, troop committee chairmen, scoutmasters and council members for the annual meeting and election of officers to be held in the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel Monday evening, January 28, at 8 o'clock.

The Hon. Harry R. Daniel, chief of the publicity bureau of the Department of Commerce, will address the gathering and Arthur A. Schuck, director of operations of the National Boy Scout Council, also will be on the program. Reports of the accomplishments and activities of the District of Columbia Council for 1934 will be submitted and the annual election of officers will take place.

As a special feature of the evening, the silver beaver will be awarded to three Washington scouters for outstanding accomplishments in service to boyhood. At the close of the evening a buffet supper will be served.

Back to the Troop Movement.

During jubilee year of 1935 when the Boy Scouts of America are celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of their organization, a movement has been started similar to a college alumni in which boys and men who have been in scouting are returning to renew their association with the movement. It is natural that this movement should be started in Washington since the National Capital was the birthplace of American scouting in 1910 and the idea of returning to the old troop this year seems to be spontaneous in the minds of scouters.

Anniversary Week.

Two new and spectacular events have been added to the crowded anniversary program. In one of these events it is assumed that a major disaster has occurred in Washington and Scouts are assisting the Red Cross in placing airplane signals for food and medical supplies. This will take place on the Polo Grounds in Potomac Park and will be followed by a message relayed to Fort Myer by Scouts asking for troops. In response to this message a troop of cavalry will respond and give a demonstration on the Polo Grounds. The other new event will be a demonstration of firemanship in front of the District Building, Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue, on Tuesday evening, February 11. Here again Scouts will relay a message for fire apparatus and a pumper and ambulance from the District, a smoke eating machine from Hyattsville, and the lighting apparatus from Bethesda will respond following which the Scouts will assist in a demonstration of firemanship.

Leader Training Course

News Items.

Several new Scout troops, Sea Scout units and Cub packs have been or are being organized in the District and vicinity. F. H. Shelledy will be the scoutmaster of a troop being sponsored by the Hillcrest Citizens Association in East Washington Heights. R. Malth is president of the association and members of the scout committee are Charles Foster, Gregory J. Kesenich and James H. Reed.

Another new troop is being organized at the Maryland Park High School with William A. Burslem as scoutmaster. Mr. Burslem is a graduate of the University of Maryland and was very successful as an assistant scoutmaster of Troop 210 at Hyattsville.

New Sea Scout units have been organized at Falls Church connected with Troop 123 and at Cabin John Park, the home of Troop 205. The mates for these organizations will be selected soon.

A new Cub pack has been organized at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament in Chevy Chase with George Palmer as Cub master. This Cub work is under the direction of Father Thomas J. Crowley, assistant pastor of the church and the committee include Edward Costigan, Edward A. Kimball and W. J. Howard.

Two important reorganizations have recently been completed. Troop 65 at St. John's Episcopal Church at Georgetown under the leadership of Fred H. Cutts as scoutmaster and Ralph Lomax as assistant. Another troop, No. 146; of Del Ray, Va., has been reorganized with a full membership of 32 Scouts and a waiting list.

Wanderbirds Plan to Inspect Mining Pits in Hike Sunday

Club Will Traverse Countryside About Muirkirk; Lakes and Ponds in Hills Beautify the Locale in Which Fossils Were Found.

By Robert Shosteck.

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club on Sunday will trek through the countryside about Muirkirk, visiting the many beautiful lakes and the ruins of coke ovens and kilns, the remains of important iron-mining operations carried on in this region over 50 years ago. The gently rolling hills about Indian Creek are dotted with a score or more ponds and lakes of all sizes, some said to be over 150 feet deep.

A high-grade iron ore was dug from the pits and from them scientists have reclaimed the fossil remains of giant dinosaurs and fossil, palm-like trees.

Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on this interesting and easy 6-mile trip will meet at 10 a. m. in front of The Post Building. Busses will carry the group to Contee, Md., where the hike begins. The round-trip fare is 50 cents and it is necessary to reserve seats at NAt. 4200 by midnight Saturday. Bring lunch and a cup for coffee.

From Contee, on the Baltimore boulevard, the route lies along the old Bowie road for a half mile as far as North Pond, which lies off to the right about a ¼ of a mile. This large pond is fine for swimming in summer. From this point the group will follow a downhill trail to a stream, thence along this creek to a fire clay pit which is still being used. From the pit a woodland road leads west to the Blue Ponds, a mile off. The largest pond, said to be 150 feet in depth, is very clear and blue and is choked with water lillies in the summer.

Nearly one mile south of Blue Ponds is a group of small lakes known locally as Green Ponds because of the verdant reflection from the nearby pine woods. A large island lies in the center of one of these ponds. Those wishing to take a longer trip may go on to Swampoodle, a large pond beside a woodland road.

The spherical fossilized stems of palm-like cycads were first discovered in these pits by iron miners. These "wasp's nests" or "corals" were used as door blocks until retrieved by scientists who realized their scientific value. Among the tall Virginia pines which have grown up about the former ore dumps may be seen the moss-covered runways of glassy slag, reminders of the former extensive smelting operations conducted here. Occasional fossil vertebrae and cycad remains are found on these heaps today.

In the woods off the Muirkirk road the hikers will stop for campfire and coffee. After a refreshing drink, the group will proceed to the old beehive coke ovens, now used for storage purposes by the Waldo Paint Factory.

According to Dr. H. N. Stokes, who will lead this trip, the route is arranged to take in the most interesting ponds and will include a visit to places where ore is still dug for use in the manufacture of red and brown paints. All along the route are hundreds of pits of all sizes, some drained and others filled with water. The hike, which includes a visit to Swampoodle, will be about nine miles. The busses should return to Washington about 5:30 or 6 p. m.

The Red Triangle Outing Club plans a five-mile trip along the Patuxent River starting at Laurel. The group will meet 2 p. m. Sunday at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue, cars taking the group to Laurel. Miss Frankie Ross will lead.

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club welcomes the newly organized hiking club of the Department of Agriculture. The newcomers are invited to join with the Wanderbirds on their trips.

Coroner Orders Autopsy In Death of U.S. Worker

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will perform an autopsy to determine the cause of the death of Thomas M. Boyle, 65, of the 3000 block of P street northwest.

Mr. Boyle, an employe in the Department of Indian Affairs, was found unconscious in the partially filled bathtub of his home by his wife, Mrs. Katherine Boyle, last Tuesday. He was taken to Mount Alto Hospital, where he died early yesterday without regaining consciousness. Homicide squad detectives are aiding the coroner in his investigation.

Scene of Dance Changed.

The community dance that was to be held tonight in Langley Junior High School gymnasium will be held in the John Burroughs School instead, it was announced yesterday.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

C. B. S. knew something big would come of Kate Smith's search for talent. And sure enough, yesterday the Washington winner, James Farrell (whose real name it Phatigan) signed a two-year contract with C. B. S.'s Artists Bureau. Which means he draws a salary, holds down a sustaining program and starts on the way to bigger fame.

Farrell, who has a lovely low barytone, never has had vocal training. He is a Government employe.

He's expected to come to town for a few days, pack up, say goodby, then off to New York!

WMAL's test program is becoming a favorite for DX'ers. These Saturday night broadcasts at 1 a. m. are run by the engineer, Ted Balote, who does the announcing, selects recordings and arranges programs. So far, the listeners have written 1,046 letters in a year, from 6 foreign countries and 37 States. Ted has decided that since the programs are compulsory, why not try to make them good?

The time might come when test programs are considered some of the best on the air.

ARE YOU still laughing over Huey Long's last word the other night? After the speech was over and the announcer was getting the program wound up, Huey's voice came through saying, "Hello, folks, this Huey P. Long speaking. And I'll be with you on Saturday on N. B. C.," or words to that effect.

Since his broadcast was over C. B. S., that station remarks jokingly that they intend to send N. B. C. a bill. N. B. C.'s observation is a gleeful, "Talk about free advertising!"

Another funny incident: During the McCormack-Rogers program the other night, Will was patiently waiting for his turn. He held Carleton Smith's watch, and when his time arrived he dropped it, picked it up and remarked "Nothing broken but the crystal and the works." However, he had the watch fixed, returned with apologies.

TODAY'S best bets: Beatrice Lillie makes light of visiting relatives, and introduces a parlor game to end all parlor games. . . . "March of Time," highlights of Saar plebiscite and Hauptmann trial. . . . Minneapolis Symphony plays Gustav Mahler's second Symphony and Handel's "Water Music."

Phil Baker comes to town on January 25 and will broadcast for NBC at the Mayflower. Music furnished by Sidney's men under the direction of Leon Belasc

Did you know that:

Girl singers for dance oands are at a premium. No fewer than six big-name orchestras are scouting for a lady who will be as easy on the eye as on the mike. . . . A phonograph record firm is putting on the air show to advertise its discs. First time these companies ever admitted there was anything in radio. . . . "Fats" Waller, the pianistic wild man, is over 40 and still going strong. . . . "Winter Wonderland" is the most popular air tune, according to a poll in The Billboard. "Earful of Music" comes second and "Stay as Sweet as You Are" third.

Nationally Famous Baptist Evangelist in six Soul-Inspiring Sermons

Opening Meeting—Sunday, January 20, 3 P. M.

Subject: "Why Is Christianity True?"

Sun., Jan. 20th—3 P. M.—"The New Birth."
Mon., Jan. 21st—8 P. M.—"The Promise of Power."
Tues., Jan. 22nd—8 P. M.—"The Price of Power."
Wed., Jan. 23rd—8 P. M.—"The Unanswered Question."
Thurs., Jan. 24th—8 P. M.—"Your Greatest Question."

REV. A. P. RENN

Hear These Questions Answered

1. What is the human soul?
2. What is the Will of God, and how does it operate?
3. Does God create disease, poverty and war?

What did Jesus mean when he said, (John 14: 12): "Verily, verily, I say unto you. He that believeth on Me, The works that I do shall He do also."

Rev. Renn will present the world's greatest religious teacher, who will interpret the Gospel messages in the light of Science and Philosophy, explaining how the teachings of Jesus Christ can be demonstrated through the power of the Holy Spirit.

SAID COLONEL PAUL JONES:

LET the blizzards come . . . let the wind howl . . . when you're before a good fire and behind a glass of Paul Jones, the whole world is rosy.

For Paul Jones is real old-fashioned American whiskey. It is made just as it was by Paul Jones four generations ago—made the only way a truly great whiskey can be made.

Try a Real American Whiskey

For richness and full-bodied flavor, Paul Jones is made with pure Kentucky and Maryland limestone water. And it's made by a company with four generations of skill behind it.

Today, in your favorite hotel, club or restaurant, ask that your drinks be made with Paul Jones. Just see what a difference there is in bouquet, smoothness and taste. And when you ask for Paul Jones in mixed drinks or at your liquor store, insist that you get it. Paul Jones is a blend of all straight American whiskies—yet it is reasonably priced.

No sincere and honest dealer will try to sell you another brand when you ask for Paul Jones.

"Irvin S. Cobb's Own Recipe Book," the last word from the great good-drink fancier himself—$180 worth of humor for a dime. Send 10c in stamps for your copy to Frankfort Distilleries, Dept. 396, Louisville, Ky.
